Woodward to Offer Again For Mayoralty of Atlanta If Recall Movement Wins

"I Don't Believe They Can Get Required Number of Voters' Signatures, But if They Do I'll Run," He Says.

WORKERS FOR RECALL ARE TERMED "FANATICS" BY MAYOR WOODWARD

Leaders in Movement Say Goal Is Almost Reached and They Expect to Have Election Called for Thursday, September 30.

With the goal almost reached, according to the leaders, the recall campaign workers have mapped out a full program for the ensuing week and announce that they expect to wind up the campaign within the next ten days.

"We have them on the run and the threats of the close allies of the mayor that the names will be published and other statements tending to prevent certain voters from signing the recall petitions have only served to strengthen our cause," declared Walter McElreath, one of the attorneys for former Chief of Police Beavers, whose demotion by the police commission started the campaign to recall the seven men who voted against him.

"These men who are going around trying to get bets that we will not get 2,000 bona fide voters' names on the petitions are not helping those who are directing them," said Mr. McElreath. "Someone ought to call their hand. Of course, they would not stand by it, but if they did they would surely lose their money."

WOODWARD TO RUN.

Along with the announcement that the recall campaign had about accomplished the purpose which it was started—securing twenty-five per cent of the registered voters on a petition for a recall election, aimed against the seven police commissioners who voted to demote Police Chief Beavers—came the announcement from Mayor James G. Woodward that he would again be a candidate for re-election if recalled in the special election.

"Of course, I don't believe they can get the required number of voters to get the election called, but in the event they do, of course I will offer for election," said the mayor.

The law which provides for the recall also provides that the officials recalled have the right to offer for re-election again. The mayor claims that the recall movement will lose in the first election, and that none of the seven men who voted to demote Beavers will be recalled.

"There is one thing certain, that list to be turned in is going to be carefully checked, and it will be hard to get 4,000 names required for the election," said the mayor.

"Don't think we are going to sit quietly and allow just anyone to sign that recall petition and get by with it without first having an opportunity to challenge each voter. It will no doubt be necessary to publish the list to find out whether or not the signatures are bona fide. I understand that certain voters' names got on the petition without their knowledge or consent. How are we to know there are not others in the same box if we don't publish them?"

CALLS THEM FANATICS.

About the mildest term applied to the recall campaign workers by the mayor was "fanatics." He said they had begun the campaign by making the Beavers trial an issue, but had branched off to include every other act of the officials under fire, which does not meet their approval.

"If they keep up the campaign long enough they can call on every voter offended by some act of an official and get him to sign a recall petition," said the mayor. "In this manner they can recall every official in the city, but it will require such a long time that the terms of office would have expired before the election could be called, if they want to recall somebody, let them stick to the Beavers issue."

Mayor Woodward declared that by securing an indeterminate list of names to petitions, regardless of whether they were bona fide voters, he could easily secure within two or three days a sufficient number to call an election. He says emphatically that the list to be filed with the city clerk by the 4,000 leaders will be carefully purged and that any voter signing a petition will be allowed to withdraw his name.

The recall committee announced Saturday that the first public mass meeting of the ensuing week would be held Monday night at the South Boulevard public school, at 8 o'clock. This building is situated in the third ward, and not only third warders, but the general public is invited.

There will be several addresses on the recall and it is stated by the committee that they will expose at that time some of the methods they claim are being used to discredit the campaign and to intimidate the voters to prevent their signing the petitions.

RECALL MEETINGS.

There will be several other public recall meetings during the week in the various wards of the city and it is probable that a big general mass meeting will be held the latter part of the week at the Auditorium-Armory.

"Scores of voters are sending with their signed petitions letters saying they will be glad to have their names printed whether by the committee or friends of the police commissioners we expect to recall from office," said Dr. Joe Broughton, general chairman of the recall campaign committee of one hundred.

HARRIS MAY INCLUDE COTTON PROTECTION IN CALL TO SOLONS

Statement of Governor Saturday Indicates, However, That He Will Not Include Anything That Would Cause Deadlock.

CALL TO BE CONFINED TO EMERGENCY MEASURES

Although Governor Harris has not announced definitely, his remarks to press representatives on Saturday are construed to mean that he is inclined to include legislation for the protection of the cotton crop for consideration in the extraordinary session of the general assembly and to exclude prohibition.

Governor Harris stated that it is probable that he will set the date for the extra session some time in the early part of November. His call for the extra session will be issued about ten days before the date fixed for the session, the courts having held that ten days is sufficient notice and the governor sharing the view of the courts.

The question of whether prohibition will be included in the call is still open.

The consideration of the extra session, he intimated, will be confined purely to emergency measures.

He admitted that besides the appropriations bill, a cotton warehouse bill might be considered emergent.

Emergency Legislation.

"I am going to put in the call for the extraordinary session only emergency legislation," said Governor Harris. Asked if he thought prohibition an emergency matter, the governor replied:

"You may make such deductions from or speculations on what I have said as you like. I will merely say that only emergency matters will be included in the call, and it will be my purpose to put just as little in that call as I possibly can. I shall seek to include enough to make an opening for a long-drawn-out session; I think the session ought to be concluded just as quickly as possible. The longer the extra session runs the more the expense will be and, at a time like this, the people don't want to see the money derived from taxation expended for anything that is not absolutely necessary. Under present conditions we have got to run along pretty close to shore."

Governor Harris clearly indicated that the cotton situation in its prospect for this fall and winter is drawing as much of his attention and consideration just now as any other matter proposed for the extra session, and more than many of the things he is being urged to include in his call.

Wanted Extra Session.

"About a year ago there was more or less insistency that an extra session of the legislature be called to relieve a situation among the farming people of the state that was very similar to what may confront the state this year," he continued. "I have had a great deal of advice, and some of it very good advice, as to the action of legislation designed to protect and aid the agricultural interests of the state. The need for immediate passage of a warehouse bill has been very earnestly urged, and I am giving serious consideration to the facts that have been presented to me along that line. A great deal of this comes from members of the legislature and a great deal of it comes from citizens of the state at large. In much of it the contention presented to me is that the cotton situation this year will be just as urgently in need of state aid as it was last year, if not more so.

"I have had a consultation with Commissioner James D. Price on the subject, and from him I have gotten some very valuable information. It appears that this situation becomes an emergency, viewed in the light of the welfare of the state, I shall include consideration of warehouse legislation in the call for the extra session. That will be merely a question of whether or not it appears, after deliberation, to be an emergency, and on that I am giving serious consideration.

"Georgia is in good shape now. The cotton crop this year is going to be almost a surplus in that it was grown so much cheaper than is ordinarily the case, but if the farmer finds he can't get anything for it, then it will lose its value, not only as a cheaply produced crop, but otherwise, and then it would become a matter of the welfare of the state, in which legislative attention should be given; a situation where state aid would be needed."

Governor Harris' favorable attitude toward the consideration of a cotton warehouse bill by the extra session was emphasized by an interview between him and Commissioner of Agriculture James D. Price Saturday morning.

Mr. Price has just returned from a trip about the state and told the governor a great deal about the sentiment of the farmers regarding the protection of the cotton crop by state legislation.

Attended Many Meetings.

SPEEDY END SEEN TO CONTROVERSY OVER SUBMARINES

German Ambassador Has Impressed Washington With Belief That His Government Will Satisfy the United States.

HOPE FOR PEACE SPRINGS FROM RELAXING TENSION

Possibilities of American Mediation Seem Behind Adjustment of German-American Dispute--Liberal Element in Ascendant in Germany.

Washington, August 28.—Count Bernstorff, the German ambassador, will leave Washington tomorrow for New York, to await instructions from his government which he believes will bring a speedy and satisfactory conclusion to the entire controversy over submarine warfare.

Unless the situation in Berlin wholly changes before the dispatches are sent, the ambassador expects authorization to reopen informal discussions with Secretary Lansing to the end that a note may be framed by Germany entirely satisfactory to the United States.

German Report Awaited.

So far as the state department is concerned, formal presentation of the Arabic case to Germany waits receipt from Ambassador Gerard of the German admiralty report on the destruction of the ship. Dispatches from Berlin tonight said the report might be made any day or might be delayed a fortnight to await arrival in port of the last of the German submarines operating south of Ireland. Until the admiralty statement is received, however, and the Arabic case disposed of, it is unlikely that a discussion of the broader question of submarine warfare will be reopened.

In German circles here it is firmly believed Berlin is anxious to bring the whole submarine controversy to a quick and a friendly termination. Count Bernstorff's visit to Washington, acting on instructions from Berlin, is viewed as conclusive proof that the liberal element of the German government has triumphed and that every effort will be made to meet the views of President Wilson as expressed to the ambassador in an interview soon after the Lusitania was destroyed.

To Answer Note on Lusitania.

The German foreign office is believed to be ready to encourage an informal exchange of views between Count Bernstorff and Secretary Lansing so the drafting of a full reply to the last American note on the Lusitania, satisfactory to Washington, may be facilitated.

In was stated positively today that whatever the German admiralty report may be in the Arabic case, the Berlin government will give assurances that its submarine commanders had received explicit instructions that no passenger ships be attacked without warning. This was in accordance with instructions of Count Bernstorff, sent immediately after his interview with President Wilson. Even should the submarine commander attempt to justify his action, it is believed the German government will seek to make it clear that as a national policy the warfare against passenger ships has been suspended. Already offers of reparation for American lives lost with the ship have been made informally, and Ambassador Bernstorff feels that barring adjustment of minor details, the friction between the two countries is at an end.

New Hope for Peace.

Out of the relaxing tension of the situation, a new hope for peace in Europe has sprung. German observers here have noted that there is a group in each country which sees possibilities of American mediation behind the peaceful adjustment of the American-German difficulty. With one concession won from the belligerents by diplomatic means—the security of the lives of neutrals on the high seas—it is thought possible other proposals may follow with ultimate restoration of peace as their object. The ascendency of the liberal element in Germany, it is said, lends color to that view so far as Germany is concerned.

Negotiations concerning the general subject of submarine warfare, which, it is understood, Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, has been instructed to open with a disavowal of Germany's intentions to cause loss of life of Americans when the Lusitania was attacked will be begun when the state department announces its readiness. These exchanges will not be encouraged by the United States until the case of the Arabic has been satisfactorily disposed of. The American government believes that Germany's sincerity in her announcement that undersea warfare against passenger ships has ended, must be established before the Lusitania discussion can continue.

Rights of Neutrals.

Reiterations by American officials that rights of neutrals will be insisted upon in all quarters is taken by German officials to mean that when it is established that Germany has modified her submarine policy, England will be asked to relax the blockade against foodstuffs for Germany. German officials believe the change of their policy will permit an acceptance by the United States of the concessions which Germany will make when negotiations are reopened.

It is well known, of course, that the United States will not be satisfied unless American lives are paid for and assurances given that similar tragedies will not occur in the future.

While administration officials are much encouraged by the German am-

Sokolow Resents Exhibition of Photo and Threatening Crowd Gathers--Several Arrests Made.

Columbus, Ga., August 28.—Joseph Lee, J. Sokolow, a merchant, and several other men were arrested here tonight as the result of an altercation between Lee and Sokolow, resulting from Lee's showing in Sokolow's store a photograph of the body of Leo M. Frank as it hung from a tree near Marietta, August 17. Extra police were called when a crowd, estimated at several hundred persons, gathered around Sokolow's store and assumed a threatening attitude.

According to bystanders, Sokolow attempted to take the photograph away from Lee. A policeman was called and placed Lee under arrest. After Lee was arrested, it is charged, Sokolow struck him with a soda-water bottle, inflicting a scalp wound.

Those under arrest, besides Lee and Sokolow, are held as the result of threats against Sokolow. The police reported that an attempt was made, after the trouble, to burn Sokolow's store. The extra police remained on guard throughout the night.

Barred at Mobile.

Mobile, Ala., August 28.—Chief of Police F. W. Crenshaw issued instructions tonight for the arrest of any person selling, displaying or possessing a photograph of the body of Leo M. Frank, as taken after the hanging at Marietta. The order resulted from numerous complaints that picture postcards of this character were being sold here.

EIGHT MEN ARE SHIPPED FROM MARIETTA IN CAR

Aroused Suspicions of Citizens and Could Not Account for Presence.

Marietta, Ga., August 28.—Eight men whose actions aroused suspicions of citizens of this little town and who did not give satisfactory explanations of their presence here were rounded up late last night, placed in a box car attached to a freight train ready to leave, and sent away. No arrangements, as far as could be learned today, had been made with the railroad to transport these persons out of town, but the car was guarded safely until the train left the town limits.

Since Leo M. Frank was lynched here August 17 several persons whose business in the town were not known have been invited to leave. Five men who had the appearance of laborers and said they were seeking employment here were ordered away yesterday and today could not be found. In the opinion of the police they did not seem to make a serious attempt to get work. The eight men sent away last night also appeared to be laborers.

These events and the continual receipt of letters threatening various sorts of vengeance because Frank was lynched caused police officials here to increase the number of officers by fifteen. The letters are being received from all parts of the country by town and Cobb county officials and by persons who have given interviews to newspapers outside the state on the Frank case. Some of the letters have been turned over to postoffice inspectors at Atlanta.

BABY IS KILLED IN MOTHER'S LAP; MOTHER NOT HURT

Ocala, Fla., August 28.—A six-months-old baby of Perry Sawyer was killed here this afternoon when a Seaboard Air Line train struck an automobile at a crossing. The mother, in whose lap the child was sitting, was not injured. Mr. Sawyer was badly hurt.

ALLIES SPEND $150,000 IN ATLANTA FOR MULES

Agents Are Now in This City Selecting the Animals for Shipment.

Another war order for $150,000 worth of Georgia mules is now being filled in Atlanta.

This is the second such order to be filled here, making a total of approximately $800,000 which will shortly have been spent in Atlanta by the allied governments for mules alone.

R. F. Wall and H. F. Scott, purchasing agents for the allies, are registered at the Winecoff hotel, and for the last several days have been purchasing their second big order of mules through the Miller Union stock yards, their check for more than $150,000 for the first order having been received in Atlanta about two weeks ago.

They have already selected about half of their desired consignment of 1,000 mules, and will endeavor to select the remainder of the consignment this week.

The total value of the 1,000 mules will amount to $150,000 or a little more.

This trainload of animals, it is expected, will be used in the western theater of war by the allied governments. They will be shipped from Atlanta probably to New Orleans or Newport News.

JULY TRADE BALANCE TOTALS $124,879,370

Washington, August 28.—Exports of the products of American farms and factories in July—valued at $267,978,990—were the greatest ever recorded in that month, the commerce department announced tonight. The nearest approach was in July, 1913, when the total was $160,990,778.

The favorable trade balance for the month was $124,879,370, compared with a balance of $21,929,008 in July, 1913. One year ago in July, when war clouds were gathering in Europe, exports were less than imports by more than $5,000,000.

Exports for the first seven months of the year, valued at $1,969,787,495, gave a favorable trade balance only a little short of one billion dollars. The total was $960,878,054, compared with $60,388,789 in the first seven months of 1914.

July imports were valued at $143,099,620, compared with $159,677,291 last year; for the seven months $1,008,999,441, against $1,100,889,349. The change in the flow of gold from east to west since the war began was emphasized by the department's figures showing gold exports in July of $2,191,735 compared with $32,669,424 in July last year, and imports last month of $17,262,938, compared with $3,391,716 in July, 1914. For the seven months there was a net inward gold movement of $152,413,112, contrasted with an outward movement of $83,508,822 in the same period last year.

$100,000 TAXES SOUGHT BY CITY

Atlanta Due Approximately That Sum From Georgia Railroad Owners, According to Samuel H. Sibley.

Atlanta city officials who have been troubled over the city's financial condition have begun to see a ray of hope in the offer of Samuel H. Sibley, an attorney of Union Point, who proposes collecting back taxes from the Georgia railroad owners, Atlanta's share to be between $75,000 and $100,000.

Mr. Sibley has been put in charge of this work by the general council, and besides seeking to collect back taxes on 440 shares of stock, to be apportioned among the counties traversed by the road, he says that six years of back taxes are due from the owners of the road on property owned in Atlanta.

The largest item due Atlanta, according to Mr. Sibley, is that due on the joint terminals of the Georgia railway and L. & N. road here. This property, he says, was valued in 1910 at $119,000 and in 1915 it is valued by the comptroller at $1,110,000.

Mr. Sibley proposes to collect taxes on this property which have not been paid for the past six years, it is stated. On the terminals alone, at the city's rate, the taxes would be more than $12,000 annually.

Arrangements have been made with officers of the several counties traversed and the municipalities served by the road, and among them will be apportioned, if collected, the back taxes on 440 shares of Georgia railroad stock.

The counties through which the road passes are Fulton, DeKalb, Rockdale, Newton, Morgan, Greene, Taliaferro, Warren, McDuffie, Columbia and Richmond.

In the past the Georgia railroad has paid its taxes at Augusta, Richmond county, its legal domicile. Mr. Sibley contends that taxes should be paid to each municipality served by the road.

In 1910 Judge John C. Hart, now state tax commissioner, was associated with Mr. Sibley in carrying the case affecting the taxes on the 440 shares of stock through the courts. They finally lost in the supreme court.

At that time the matter of taxes on the Atlanta terminal properties of the company was not involved. The case will now be taken up along a different line and city officials, as well as Mr. Sibley, are confident that it will be decided in favor of the plaintiff.

Bryan Says Roosevelt Might Be of Some Use As a Horrible Example

Chicago, August 28.—William Jennings Bryan, criticising here today Theodore Roosevelt's Plattsburg speech, indicated the colonel might be useful as a horrible example.

"It is said to have been an ancient custom for parents to teach their children the evils of intemperance by taking before them persons in an intoxicated condition." Mr. Bryan said. "It is possible that Mr. Roosevelt is serving a useful purpose in warning the public of the effects which the doctrine of preparedness may have on a man when he gives himself up to it as a regular business."

ARMIES OF RUSSIA STILL RETREATING BEFORE TEUTONS

Austro-Germans, However, Are Still Far From the Capture or Destruction of the Forces of the Czar.

RUSSIANS ARE RETIRING TO PREPARED POSITIONS

It Is Said the New Line Has Been Strongly Fortified. There Is No Evidence of a German Offensive in West.

London, August 28.—The Germanic allies have not yet exhausted their efforts to crush completely the Russian army. In the Baltic provinces, Von Hindenburg again has become aggressive, and is attempting to drive the Russians back to Dvina, while far to the south the Austro-Hungarians, in southeastern Galicia, have broken through the Russian positions on the Zlota Lipa, Berlin and Vienna claim, and are advancing north and south of Brzezany.

RUSS RETREAT VERY ORDERLY.

Along the rest of the front also the Germans claim to be gaining some ground, but apparently they are as far as ever from their main endeavor—the capture or destruction of the Russian armies. The latter, although pressed hard at many points, continue their orderly retreat, leaving little or nothing useful to the invaders.

Whether the Russians can maintain a stand in the new positions they are said to have prepared, the next few days should tell. There are reports that Teutonic reinforcements are being sent from the east to the western and Serbian fronts, but military writers here agree that so long as Russia's armies remain intact, it would be dangerous for the enemies to detach troops for operations elsewhere. Now that the Dvina lines are reduced, however, big guns might be transferred.

GERMANS QUIET IN THE WEST.

There is no evidence of a German offensive in the west, while Serbian aviators are said to have discovered that the Austro-German force gathered at Orsova for a rumored effort to force a way through Serbia and Bulgaria to aid Turkey, is not of the strength reported.

On the western front the activity of the airmen continues. Six German aviators attempted an attack on Paris, but were driven off with the loss of one machine, while the allies threw bombs on Ostend, Middelkerke and Lichtervelde. On the dunes at Middelkerke the Germans have some of their most formidable batteries for use against attacks from the sea, which Bruges the objective of the airmen would be the canal and docks used extensively by the Germans for transportation purposes.

LITTLE CHANGE IN DARDANELLES.

Little change in the situation in the Dardanelles is indicated by recent advices, both official and unofficial. The Turkish official statement of the attack made at Anafarta while the recent landing was taking place are declared by a correspondent at Turkish headquarters to have been extremely heavy, the killed alone being estimated at about 5,000.

The Balkan situation still holds a great deal of interest, and confidence is expressed that with Serbia showing an unyielding attitude, it will be settled to the advantage of the entente allies. Serbia's reply to the ultimatum, it has not yet been delivered, and Bulgaria, Greece and Rumania are holding their hands until they see how it is drawn.

COTTON CONVENTION CALLED FOR ATLANTA

Growers, Bankers and Warehousemen Are Asked to Meet Here on September 21.

To discuss the warehouse and financial situation as regards the next cotton crop, a call has been issued by Charles S. Barrett, president of the National Farmers' union, and J. J. Brown, president of the Georgia Farmers' union, for a convention of cotton growers, bankers and warehousemen in Atlanta Tuesday, September 21. The meeting will be held at the state capitol at 10 o'clock in the morning.

The call of the heads of the state and national farmers' organizations, which is self-explanatory, follows:

"To the Officers and Members of the Farmers' Union and All Farmers and Business Men Who Are in Favor of the South Receiving a Fair Price for Her Staple Crop, Cotton: We hereby call a meeting, to be held in the city of Atlanta Tuesday, September 21, at 10 a. m., at the state capitol, for the purpose of discussing the warehousing and financing of the 1915 cotton crop. A system of warehouses will be advocated.

"While this is a meeting of the real farmers and producers of the cotton crop, we cordially invite and earnestly request every business interest in the state of Georgia who is interested in Georgia's welfare to attend this meeting. We realize that the cotton belt is now facing a situation that is more serious than possibly any other time for the past half century, and our only hope of averting a crisis is by close cooperation on the part of all concerned.

"The meeting will take place just after the convention of the National Farmers' union at Lincoln, Neb. A minimum price will be fixed at which we propose to sell the 1915 cotton crop. Respectfully,

"CHARLES S. BARRETT,
"President National Farmers' Union.
"J. J. BROWN,
"President Georgia Division."

PLANS LAID FOR SECOND "SEEING GEORGIA" TOUR

Preliminary Routing Mapped Out at Meeting Held on Saturday Morning.

At an enthusiastic meeting Saturday morning in the assembly hall of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, definite plans were laid for a second "Seeing Georgia Tour," to be run this time from south Georgia into north Georgia, the people of the north section of the state to be hosts to the people of south Georgia.

Hon. J. D. Price, commissioner of agriculture, was unanimously and enthusiastically elected general chairman of the general tour committee, for the second tour over Georgia under the auspices of the Georgia Chamber of Commerce. Frank L. Boud, of Atlanta, was elected secretary.

In a speech praising the plans of the proposed tour of the state, Commissioner Price grew eloquent on Georgia and said that the people of the state ought to know each other better and this was the best way he knew of for them to get acquainted.

An executive committee of five was appointed by the meeting with full authority to act in all matters pertaining to the preliminary arrangements for the tour, as follows: T. R. Gentry, W. J. Dabney, chairman; A. C. Webb, W. J. Stoddard and George D. McCutcheon. This committee is to report back to another meeting of the general committee on the 16th of September in Atlanta.

Towns to Be on Route.

The following towns were adopted as those to be absolutely on the route, and not subject to be dropped for any considerations: Macon, Athens, Commerce, Gainesville, Tallulah Falls, Dahlonega, Tate, Canton, Marietta and Atlanta. Other towns may be added, but these towns are to keep their places in any routing of the tour that is made by the executive committee.

Speeches were made by the following: Hon. J. D. Price, Hon. Charles J. Haden, T. R. Gentry, W. J. Dabney, A. C. Webb, Frank L. Boud (who spoke for Colonel Sam Tate, of Tate, Ga.), Fred Houser, Atlanta; J. W. Hancock and P. G. Brumby, Marietta; Edward Young Clarke, Quitman; A. H. Sykes, of Athens; J. G. Carter, Gainesville; J. D. McCartney, Rome; E. S. Hunnicutt, Tallulah Falls; H. B. Smith, Dahlonega.

Those Present.

Those present at the meeting were: J. D. Price, Charles J. Haden, A. M. Smith, W. J. Dabney, F. L. Boud, T. R. Gentry, A. C. Webb, George D. McCutcheon, Sidney Parham, Fred Houser, Dan G. Hughes and E. A. Crane, of Atlanta; E. S. Hunnicutt, Tallulah Falls; J. D. McCartney, Rome; A. H. Sykes, Athens; J. W. Hancock and P. G. Brumby, Marietta; J. F. Carter, A. S. Hardy, E. R. Byrd, J. H. Hosch and B. S. Barker, of Gainesville; H. B. Smith, Dahlonega; E. Y. Clarke, Quitman.

The meeting was worked up by Frank L. Boud, of the Ruralist Press, who had been appointed as chairman of the committee to ascertain if north Georgia was desirous of extending an invitation to south Georgia to be their guests on such a tour.

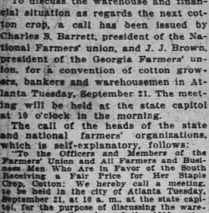
Because Everybody Tries It, Everybody Likes It, It's Painless and Takes But a Moment to Apply.

"Gets-It" is the wonder of the cornpestered world. Millions say so, because millions have used it. That's what makes it the biggest selling corn remedy on earth today. "Gets-It" will surely get that corn or callus you've been trying for a long time to get rid of—take it right off "clean as a whistle." Apply it in 2 seconds—put your stocking and shoe right over it—nothing to stick, nothing to hurt. You needn't fuss with thick bandages that make a package out of your toe. No salves, pads and scissors, no tape, no trouble. It's simplicity itself, sure, quick, painless. Try it also for bunions and warts.



"Never in My Life Saw Anything Act So Quickly and Magically as 'Gets-It'"

"Gets-It" is sold at all druggists, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago.

What Causes Tuberculosis?

In the opinion of many medical authorities, tuberculosis is aided, if not actually caused, by a loss of lime from the system. "Where there is a decalcification, the lime salts must be supplied medicinally," says Dr. J. W. Cathart, of San Antonio, in the May, 1913, issue of "Medical Progress."

To supply these salts often is difficult, since in some forms they are not easily assimilable.

In Eckman's Alterative, however, calcium (lime) is so combined with other valuable ingredients as to be assimilated by the average person and to do its part in its success.

We make no boastful claims, but many cases of tuberculosis apparently have yielded to it. It contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, so is safe to try. From your druggist or direct.

Had Pellagra; Is Now Cured

Hillsboro, Ala.—J. W. Turner, of this place, says: "I ought to have written you two weeks ago, but failed to do so. I got well and then forgot to write you. I can get about like a 10-year-old boy; you ought to see me run around and tend to my farm. I can go all day just like I used to. I am so thankful to know there is such a good remedy to cure people of pellagra."

There is no longer any doubt that pellagra can be cured. Don't delay until it is too late. It is your duty to consult the resourceful Baughn.

The symptoms—hands red like sunburn, skin peeling off, sore mouth, the throat and tongue a flaming red, with much mucus and choking; indigestion and nausea, either diarrhoea or constipation.

There is hope; get Baughn's big Free book on Pellagra and learn about the remedy for Pellagra that has at last been found. Address American Compounding Co., box 2002, Jasper, Ala., remembering money is refunded in any case where the remedy fails to cure.—(adv.)

AUGUSTA WILL HELP IN DIVERSIFICATION OF CROPS IN STATE

That the citizens of Augusta will aid in putting on a crop diversification campaign in the counties contiguous to that city was decided upon at a meeting of a committee from the Merchants and Manufacturers' association Thursday evening. Charles J. Haden, president of the Georgia Chamber of Commerce, attended the conference and made a talk on crop diversification.

The action of the committee will be reported to the board of commissioners of the association when it is said that steps would be immediately taken to complete arrangement for the campaign in Richmond, Columbia, McDuffie, Warren, Lincoln, Glascock, Burke, Jefferson, Jenkins, Emanuel, Washington, Wilkes and Taliaferro counties.

FAILURE OF PISTOL TO FIRE SAVES LIFE OF OFFICER NEWPORT

Officers Newport and Burton followed three negroes into Darktown last Friday evening after hearing one of them fire a pistol three times. When the officers approached the trio, one of them, Will Shields, whirled quickly and, pointing a pistol straight at the face of Officer Newport, pulled the trigger. The cartridge missed fire and the officer's life was saved.

The three negroes were arrested and were tried in the police court Saturday afternoon. They all came from Armour Station, near the city, and after getting partially drunk on beer proceeded Friday night to terrorize Darktown. They were getting the terror well under way when the officers came upon them. They gave their names as Will Shields, Henry Jackson and Will Dalton.

Recorder Johnson held Shields in a $500 bond for pointing a pistol at the policeman, and held the other two negroes $25.75 each.

Now Ready to Furnish The Children of Atlanta With New Geographies

With the geography controversy settled by the board of education, plans are already being made for supplying the children with the Tarr & McMurry publication, to be furnished by the Southern School Book Depository, which has headquarters in this city.

The board has accepted the bond of the depository, which has agreed to furnish the books at 55 cents for the first book and 81 for the second book. It was stated in The Constitution Friday that the McMillan company, publishers of the book, would guarantee these prices to the board. They guarantee only the wholesale prices, the retail price being fixed by the local distributors.

GOVERNOR REAPPOINTS JUDGE JAMES K. HINES

Governor Harris Saturday reappointed Judge James K. Hines as special attorney for the state railroad commission. This is the third such commission which Judge Hines has held, having first been appointed as attorney for the commission by Governor Smith in 1907, and reappointed by Governor Brown in 1911.

SAVANNAH-DARIEN ROAD HAS THRILLING HISTORY

Interesting Romance Connected With Primitive Military Highway of Georgia.

The romance of our roads is a subject of newly awakened interest among history loving and patriotic Georgians. Nowadays when the easy going automobile swiftly glides through the country it is no longer, in the thought, an uninteresting journey and an unattractive road, but the imagination goes swiftly backward and we "do" to perfection its early romance. Every bit of information, therefore, revealing the history of our old roads is eagerly read, and treasured for its helpfulness in aiding the traveler to acquire the seeing eye and the understanding heart. We, therefore, take pleasure in publishing the following interesting article on "The Old Savannah-Darien road," a part of which forms a link in the great Dixie highway now being built.

Savannah-Darien Road.

The request recently made of the Liberty commissioners, that they improve that part of the Savannah-Darien road which passed through their county, recalls the thrilling history of this primitive military highway of Georgia. Records tell of fearful perils, privations and hardships endured by the early pathfinders; for the broadening of the trails were not developed upon with suspicion by the Indians.

General Oglethorpe ordered the broadening of this old Indian trail leading out from Savannah to Darien on the Altamaha, for the convenience of the various settlements on the Savannah, Vernon and Great Ogeechee rivers. Captain Hugh Mackay, Jr., projected the road, with his company of rangers and Indian guides furnished by Tomochichi. General Oglethorpe's army as well as Tomochichi and his retinue of friendly Indians often passed that way on their marches from Savannah to the picturesque military town of Frederica.

The road was first built from Savannah to the Inverness in the Darien settlement in 1736, passing through the counties of Liberty, Bryan and Glynn in its onward course to Darien in McIntosh and later was extended to Camden county. It led through the swamp belt of Georgia and was very fertile and well suited for the cultivation of rice, cotton, corn, indigo and vegetables of various kinds; these productive lands of southeast Georgia attracted the attention of the colonists and planters of South Carolina, who soon began to move in with their slaves and settle plantations along the line of this road. Villages, with churches, schools and libraries were built in close proximity with the highway that led down through the moss-draped trees to the pathless wilderness of nowhere.

On this old road the Midway settlement was made and became an important place, for it was here that some of the best families in the state once lived. The old Midway village died years ago and the beautiful town has become the "City of the Dead." The history of Midway reads like fiction and is so inseparably interwoven with that of the cemetery that it is difficult to mention one without saying something about the other. In this quiet resting place are many who shaped the destiny of Georgia. It is beneath the shade of the moss-draped trees that the brave pioneers sleep, who not only broadened the old trails into wagon roads, but blazed the way and conquered the wilderness.

Cultivated Rice Plantation.

Dr. Lyman Hall, a signer, a congressman and governor of Georgia, along with James Maxwell, Kenneth Baillie and John Stevens, cultivated rice plantations on this road, a few miles from Midway meeting house in the direction of Savannah. Some of the prominent men who lived on this highway were Daniel Stewart, Grey Elliott, John Stevens, Parmenus Way, William and Benjamin Baker, John Winn, Edward Stevens and John Quarterman. In sight of the road on St. Catharine Island lived another signer of the Declaration of Independence, Button Gwinnett. He was constantly seen passing that way, for many of his private affairs were transacted at Midway.

In November, 1778, two British expeditions were sent out from St. Augustine for the invasion of Georgia; one by sea and the other, consisting of 100 British regulars under Lieutenant-Colonel Mark Prevost, was patched by land. After leaving Fort Howe, Prevost was joined by the notorious Daniel McGirth, with 300 Indians and refugees. They marched down the Savannah-Darien road and every man whom they found along the way was taken prisoner and every home they came to was robbed of every article of value that could conveniently be carried away. Colonel John Baker collected all the mounted militia that he could and took a position at the point where the Savannah-Darien road crosses Bull Town swamp, to dispute the advance of the invaders. A short but sharp skirmish ensued in which Colonel Baker, Captain Cooper and William Goulding were wounded.

Frequent skirmishes occurred between the whites and the Indians, and the militia was constantly called upon to repel these incursions. The citizens went armed to church in anticipation of these attacks. A protective company of horsemen under the command of Captain Elijah Lewis acted as scouts for the people who lived along this highway. In matters of home defense this military service was necessary and was continued until after the treaty of peace was concluded at Coleraine.

Although all traces of the old colonial settlement have passed, many land deeds still exist, and if the county records are consulted the history of every foot of the highway can be collected. The beauty and charm of this road should be heralded broadcast and Liberty county be congratulated on having such an historic highway within her realm to improve.

The work of collecting the history of this military road can be apportioned to the counties through which it passes. Every chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution which exists in the towns of Liberty, Bryan, Glynn, McIntosh and Camden, is urged to collect all available data concerning it and make a full and authentic record for the use and information of travelers who pass that way. Obtain pictures of the historic places with sketches of same and have three copies made, one to be placed in Continental hall, Washington, D. C.; one sent the D. A. R. chairman of Old Trails Roads, and one placed easily accessible to those who inquire concerning the road. If there is no D. A. R. chapter in the county, let some patriotic individual collect the records that are available. Each county should observe Arbor day and every vacant place along the way be planted in trees. This highway deserves a marker and the county commissioners should be strongly urged to place signs to designate the road in its onward course to Florida. It will be used for one branch of the Dixie highway and has possibilities of once more becoming important in the lives of men.

Executive Board Submits Resolutions to Convention

The sentiment of the club women of Georgia as expressed through the executive board will be presented to the annual convention in Savannah, October 26, 27, 28 and 29, in the following recommendations:

The executive board recommends:

That at the district meetings one member of the district be elected to represent that district on the nominating committee at the annual meeting.

That the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs indorse the movement of the General Federation to honor the memory of Mrs. Ellen Axson Wilson, by doing all in its power to restore the Bible to its rightful place in literature and to study it as a literary masterpiece and the word of God.

That the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs give their hearty indorsement to the Ellen Wilson memorial for the education of mountain children.

That the committee, Mrs. A. D. Murphey, chairman, recommends that the state flower of Georgia be the Cherokee rose.

That the situation of Cass Station school be presented by the district presidents and that the clubs be prepared to give contributions at the Savannah meeting.

That the Georgia Federation of Women's club take up the work of the Dixie highway through its conservation committee.

That the yearly dues of clubs be paid to the treasurer before the 1st of June.

That thirty minutes be given at each morning session of the Savannah meeting to miscellaneous business.

That our annual meeting one hour (to be designated later) be given over to the chairmen. Any chairman who desires to have a special talk on her department work can have the announcement made and all who desire can attend.

That the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs exerts influence outside of the legislative halls in order that there be no lobbying.

That each club be requested to donate a certain sum of money each year to Talbulah Falls school according to their membership, and that some idea of diligently of money to be subscribed each year will be known.

That the question of suffrage, either for or against, will not be discussed at the annual meeting in Savannah.

MRS. BLACK MAKES STIRRING APPEAL TO 1915 GRADUATES

Mrs. Nellie Peters Black, of Atlanta, president of the Conference of Southern Women, has sent out the following letter:

"To the Women Graduates of 1915: I have been asked to be president of the Conference of Southern Women, a constituent body of the Southern Conference for Education and Industry, and in accepting this position my first act will be to come to you to ask for your co-operation.

"I want you to join me in an active crusade against the illiteracy which exists in the southern states today. If each girl who graduates this summer from any college or normal school will agree to teach one or more persons to read and write during the summer months, black or white, young or old—it does not matter which—I will be very thankful. If you will play this 'glad game' in the right spirit of love and friendship, don't you see how quickly we can raise the standard of our people.

"If you agree to help me, I would like every girl who carries out this plan to write and give me the name and age of the scholar she has taught before the first of September.

"This will be a splendid opportunity for you to prove the practical value of the advantages you have had and to show your interest in persons less fortunate than yourselves.

PRESIDENT'S COLUMN

Mrs. Fitzpatrick calls attention to preparatory work to be done by the clubs and chairmen of departments of work for the success of the state federation meeting in Savannah. These messages should be carefully read, and every effort should be put forward to follow instructions intelligently.

The first letter will be sent to each club's chairman of reports on September 1, with the request that it be read before her club. With this letter will be enclosed the questionaire listed as follows. The prompt answers to those questions is absolutely necessary in order that Mrs. Fitzpatrick's annual report and the year's directory is full and correct. In the meantime chairmen will be found the place the department has on the program and the plan for the reports; also the request for literature which is most important.

September 1, 1915.

Dear Madam President: It is necessary that answers to the following questions reach me promptly. Please give them your immediate attention.

1. Name of your town?
2. Name of your club?
3. Who is your president for 1915-1916?
4. Who is your corresponding secretary for 1915-1916?
5. Does your club give one program through the year as given.
6. Has your club organized among the school children a junior civic league?
7. Does your club maintain a rest room.
8. Has your town a library and does your club have any part in its management?
9. Does your club observe Arbor day?
10. Has your town parks?
11. Has your town playgrounds?
12. What department of work is your club most interested in?
13. Has your club a Federation reporter?
14. Has your club a legislative chairman?
15. Did your club work for legislative resolutions adopted at Albany.
16. Is domestic science taught in your schools?
17. How many members in your club?
18. Has your club lost a member by death this year? (Give name.)
19. How much money has your club handled for all purposes during the year?

My Dear Chairman: It is our desire to have a table of helpful literature at the convention in Savannah October 26-29. Will you please see that there is a supply covering your line of work?

We hope to have state federation literature made for the occasion, but there are other sources from which you may secure literature for the asking, and I hope you will see that this is sent to me at the DeSoto hotel, Savannah, care of Mrs. W. L. Wilson at least a week before the convention.

We must not leave anything undone that will add to the success of the Savannah convention. Our meetings in the past have been great; this one must be even greater. Let our motto ever be "Advance."

An hour has been given for conferences of the different departments Wednesday afternoon of the convention. Any chairman is at liberty to invite any speaker she wishes for her conference and should have necessary announcement made both on the club program and at the convention.

The executive board recommended that chairmen give inspirational reports of three minutes in the convention and have fuller typewritten reports to hand to the secretary for the year-book.

The program committee has adopted this plan which, we believe, will prove most satisfactory.

With very best wishes and sincerest appreciation of your splendid work this year, I am, faithfully yours,

IDA M. FITZPATRICK.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All members of the Georgia Federation who desire resolutions to submit at the annual meeting in Savannah will please send them as soon as possible to the chairman of the resolutions committee, Mrs. Frank Fleming, Augusta, Ga.

Any proposed amendments to the constitution of the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs must be submitted to Miss Rosa Woodberry, Atlanta, Ga., chairman of rules, before September 15. These amendments must be published when the preliminary issues the call for the annual meeting.

All clubs are urged to send the names of their delegates to the annual meeting as early as possible to Mrs. Isaac Minis, 218 East Bolton street, Savannah, Ga., chairman of homes committee.

Attention of club members is called to the resolutions on club paper recommended by the executive board. All recommendations and resolutions from clubs or club members must be sent to the chairman of resolutions, Mrs. Frank Fleming, Augusta, Ga., before the annual meeting.

MRS. HOWARD M'CALL,
Recording Secretary.

MRS. FITZPATRICK, STATE PRESIDENT, HIGHLY HONORED

Our federation president, Mrs. Fitzpatrick, has been informed of her election as an honorary vice president of the International Longfellow society. Georgia is glad to be so ably represented in the worthy purpose for which this society stands, and the club women are ready to help in any service their president is called upon to render.

The society has actively associated with it some of the most distinguished men and women in America. The three past presidents of the general federation, one, Mrs. Henrotin, a native of Portland, where Longfellow's birthplace is sacred to the lovers of the poet.

More than 500 women's clubs, representing every state of the union, have contributed to a fund for the preservation and maintenance of this international memorial.

One hundred and eight years ago Longfellow, one of the world's best beloved poets, was born in Portland, Me., and in October, 1914, the birthplace was dedicated as a permanent memorial under the auspices of the International Longfellow society.

The house where Henry Wadsworth Longfellow was born has since been open as a place of visitation for all who would.

The International Longfellow society was organized "to secure and preserve the heritage of America's greatest poet, Henry W. Longfellow; to collect, exhibit and preserve printed or other material relating to him; to encourage a world-wide observance of each succeeding anniversary of his birth; to promote the study of his writings, and other literature; to honor him and other writers in such ways and by such means as the society may be able."

Since the transfer of the ownership of the house to the control of the society there has been a wonderful transformation in the more than a century old place in both the exterior and interior appearance.

As someone has said, "The city of Portland may regard this ancient house as the impertinence eagle's nest from which there game one who soared to greater heights without ever forgetting the 'beautiful town that is seated by the sea.'"

The world-wide regard for Longfellow is best shown in the fact that his works have been translated into and are read in almost every language and that his best stands in Westminster abbey, prominent among those who have done the best things in literature and those who have been the advisers in the building of the brotherhood which awakens a quick response in the hearts of all who love the true and the beautiful.

The brief appeal made to preserve the birthplace of a poet who is loved as well as honored has met with a generous, prompt response. It is fitting that the Uncle Remus Memorial association heads the list of Georgia clubs to contribute to this memorial.

SYMPATHY IS EXTENDED MRS. J. LINDSAY JOHNSON

Acting upon the wishes of the federation board, it is our privilege to publish the letter of love and sympathy sent through the recording secretary to Mrs. Lindsay Johnson on the death of her husband.

Atlanta, Ga., August, 1915.

My Dear Mrs. Johnson: The president, Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, and members of the executive board of the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs, Mrs. Nellie Peters Black, Mrs. John K. Ottley, Mrs. Hugh M. Willet and Miss Rosa Woodberry, wish to extend through me, as recording secretary, their most sincere sympathy in this sad hour of bereavement and distress in the loss of your husband, Colonel Lindsay Johnson. His life has always been an inspiration and a blessing, for he always gave his best to Georgia and his friends.

You have always been so loyal and true to your Georgia Federation, never losing an opportunity to slip by to help in the work, always lending such a willing hand in every undertaking, and now your club women would like so much to help you bear your heavy burden of sorrow.

At the meeting of the executive board in September, resolutions will be passed and sent to you.

Again expressing the love and tender sympathy of the Georgia club women for you, our beloved ex-president. May God help and comfort you.

Sincerely yours,
MRS. HOWARD H. M'CALL,
Recording Secretary.

Visiting Birmingham Relatives

SOCIAL LIFE IN MACON

Macon, Ga., August 28.—(Special Correspondence.)—Two charming Athens girls were the inspiration for several delightful affairs during the past week. Miss Martha Nicholson, with Mrs. William E. Martin and Miss Gwendolyn Griffith, with Mrs. Nisbet Tinsley, Tuesday afternoon they were guests of honor at a boating and swimming party at the Recreation club, motoring afterwards to the suburban place of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Ellis, where Mr. Roland Ellis, Jr., complimented them with an elaborate supper party. Those present were: Miss Martha Nicholson, Miss Gwendolyn Griffith, Miss Katherine Bowdre, Messrs. George Leonard, Kenneth Dunwody and Roland Ellis, Jr. Wednesday morning Miss Lily Griffith gave a most enjoyable bridge party for the same two popular visitors, her guests being Misses Nicholson and Griffith, Misses Annie Cubbedge, Katherine Bowdre, Helen Powers, Minnie Goodwin Artope, Elizabeth Peiton, Edith Humphries, Sarah Pellew and Nell Etheridge. Wednesday afternoon Miss Elizabeth Burke entertained informally at auction for Misses Griffith and Nicholson. The guests were seated on the spacious porch of this lovely country home, beautiful with quantities of roses and coreopsis.

Mrs. Nelson Mallary was hostess at an informal sewing party Wednesday morning, complimentary to her visitor, Miss Louise Atkinson, of Newnan; the other guests were Miss Anne Rogers, who leaves soon to make her home in New York; Mrs. Robert H. Plant, Jr., Mrs. Gray Coleman, Mrs. E. J. Willingham, Jr., Misses Winnie Mae Hill, and Leila Rogers.

Miss Sarah Taylor entertained at a beautiful afternoon tea Thursday at her home in Vineville, the guests of honor being Miss Mary Ponder, of Forsyth, so pleasantly remembered on former visits to the city, besides being a popular Wesleyan girl; and Miss Mary Wes Craig. The latter leaves soon to resume her studies in voice in New York, where her musical talent, beauty and charm of manner have already won for her an enviable reputation. Easter lilies, ferns and Killarney roses were used in profusion for decorative purposes. Margaret Berch and Gertrude Smith. Friday afternoon Miss Mabel Marsh entertained at a similar delightful affair for the same two attractive girls.

Mrs. Raiford Fulligant, of Savannah, who is visiting Mrs. Louis E. Pellew, was guest of honor Tuesday afternoon at a pretty bridge party given by Mrs. Nisbet Tinsley. There were two tables of players, chiefly among the girlhood friends of Mrs. Fulligant in Macon.

A pleasant affair of the week was Mrs. Marion Massee's bridge game on Tuesday afternoon. Her guests were Mrs. Sol Hoge, Mrs. George Riley, Mrs. Taylor; assisting in entertaining were Misses Mabel Marsh, Annie Taylor and Katherine Smith and Mrs. Frank Rogers, Jr.; Mrs. Charles Holt and Mrs. Will Billings presided at the punch bowl and those who assisted in serving were Misses Elizabeth McEvoy. Miss Taylor and the two honorees were assisted in receiving by Miss Ruby Harry Robert and Mrs. J. A. Selden.

Montpelier Springs was the scene of a delightful moonlight picnic supper on Tuesday evening. Those going out in cars were Mr. and Mrs. Ed Harrold, Mr. and Mrs. Cruger Chase, Mr. and Mrs. J. Gilford, Mr. and Mrs Will Kilpatrick, Mrs. Robert Plant, Jr., Misses Corn Burr, Lily Griffth and Ruth and Kitty Coleman.

Returning from North Carolina resorts during the past week were Miss Sarah Tinsley, Mr. and Mrs. Jordan Massee, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Holmes and Miss Fleta Holmes, Dr. and Mrs. M. M. Stapler and Mr. Walter S. Stapler. Misses Willie Hall Reeves and Annie B. Haden, Mrs. Robert W. Barnes and small son, Mrs. A. T. Small and Miss Addie Small, Mr. and Mrs. Pliny Hall.

A congenial party enjoying the pleasures of Lakeside Park Wednesday afternoon were Misses Mary Jelks, Elizabeth Domingos, Loula Eden and Nathalie Bell, of Gainesville, Fla.; Messrs. Luman Marsh, Kenneth Bryant, Frantley Burns and B. L. Johnson. Mrs. F. L. Neely chaperoning the party.

WEST POINT, GA.

Mr. and Mrs. Reed Roberts entertained the following guests at a lovely breakfast on Tuesday morning Misses Annie Laurie and Mary Kate Varner, Miss Nan Logan, Mrs. J. T. Roberts and Mrs. H. W. Scott, Messrs. Geiher Strain and William Owens, of Calhoun, Ga., and Evans Pattillo, of West Point.

On Wednesday in the grove near the home of Mr. J. C. McKenzie quite a number of friends enjoyed a delightful neighborhood picnic.

The young men of West Point will give on Saturday night a complimentary dance at the Charles hotel to the young ladies of the town.

On Friday afternoon a few friends were entertained at a lovely informal tea by Mrs. Edgar Mitchell at her home in Lanett.

Forty young people were entertained at a delightful dance on Friday evening by Miss Mary Eunice Horsley at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Huff.

In the beautiful grove near the Amara Williams home quite a number of young people were entertained at a delightful picnic on Wednesday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Grady Webb.

Little Miss Martha Hart entertained Misses Nancy Booker, Ada Ferrel Gatlin and Julia Forrester at a spend-the-night party on Monday in honor of Miss Julia Mitcham, of Auburn, Ala.

On Wednesday afternoon Mrs. William Huff entertained a number of friends at a lovely party in honor of Mrs. Edgar Henderson, of Cedartown, and Mrs. F. K. Boland, of Atlanta, who are her guests.

Mrs. Ellen Fuller entertained on Saturday at a spend-the-day party.

Miss Sadie Jones entertained in honor of Miss Mary King, of Columbus, and Miss Carrie Belle Clark, of Atlanta, at a rook party on Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Barrow entertained a number of friends at a barbecue on Tuesday.

About Wedding Invitations

These absolutely necessary articles for the wedding occasion are subject to criticism more than any other feature.

Even the wedding dress is not scrutinized so closely as the invitation, for the latter goes into the hands of strangers as well as of every invited guest and is apt to be considered the forerunner of the style which characterizes the wedding.

These days, most people are well informed concerning the requisites for stylish invitations.

The material of which the envelopes and sheets are made should be of approved shade of white; the shapes should be those that fashion has most recently decreed and the engraving should be done by artists whose reputation insures the highest degree of skill. All these requirements are met in the extensive plant and thirty years experience of the J. P. Stevens Engraving Co. This house has established a high standard of product known all over the United States; the imprint of its name upon an envelope is a guarantee that the invitation is of correct form, latest style and finest quality.

If you are particularly interested send to this house for samples and prices which will be sent free of charge in a sealed package. Address J. P. Stevens Engraving Co., 47 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Georgia.

The Close of Another Summer

Another summer is nearly gone, and the few remaining holidays bring the annual home journeyings, school openings and various things to be done for the members of families reuniting under the home roof.

This store is the most helpful place we know of in solving such problems.

Strangers are always welcome here. We try to make them feel at home and endeavor in every way to create and cherish that comforting sentiment.

All our accommodations and conveniences belong to visitors—they were inaugurated with that sole end in view.

Visitors are always welcome here, whether they come to buy or not.

EVERY DAY, now, something new—something with the charm and tinge of Autumn—a new fashion season is coming on rapidly.

A Stirring Month-End Clearance In the Women's Apparel Section

The Best of the Season

The best usually comes last! So this sale for Monday—the last of the season, is the best of the summer in actual value giving.

We have gone over the entire remaining stocks blue-penciling their tags for the last time, and are marking them at prices which, indeed, seem absurd and which will take them out in a hurry.

There are two months, or nearly so, still in which to wear such garments, and they will be welcomed at such small cost.

For instance:

Pretty Linen and Crepe Dresses at $2.75

Here are stylish, high-class Dresses made of pretty linens and fine crepes in a number of most pleasing and becoming ways. There are various colors, too, to select from, and they are dresses which were, a little earlier in the season, priced at $10 to $15.

Silk Street Dresses $1.98

A dress for street, just ready to put on now, and wear right on into the fall.

Only a small collection of these good Dresses for which you are asked to pay a mere trifle—the colors are grays and blues and black.

Only $1.98

Women's Crepe and Lawn Kimonos at 49c

Long Kimonos—Empire Style

There will be a rush for these, for this price is just about one-third what they are worth. There are various pleasing color tones and designs to choose from.

They will not tarry long, you may be sure, at this price—49c.

Other Summer Dresses at 98c

Cool Dresses for street and afternoon wear. All of good value and formerly priced up to $7.50. They need pressing and freshening up a bit. Wonderfully desirable at this absurdly low price—98c—they will be eagerly chosen Monday.

Margaret Wilson Is Away Chautauquaing Most of the Time, So Her Cousin, Helen Bones, and Miss Bones' Lovely Friend, a Charming Widow, Have to Do Much of the White House Entertaining.

EVERYONE who is at all familiar with the situation says that Margaret Wilson is entirely to blame. She should not have deserted the President and his household as she did just at the time when the White House had begun to entertain a little after its period of mourning.

If Margaret had stayed at home and stuck to her position as social head of the first family in the land instead of flying hither and thither to fill her Chautauqua engagements, to help along Montessori schools and to accomplish the hundred and one other estimable uplift things in which she is engaged, Helen Woodrow Bones, the President's niece, and her friend, Mrs. Norman Galt, the lovely southern widow, would never have usurped Margaret's place as the social head of the Wilson family.

This is exactly the situation. Helen Bones and Mrs. Norman Galt are the life of the social gatherings that have the President as their nucleus. If it were not for them the President would die of ennui. They give him the only relief not only from the routine affairs of state, but from the great problems of international relations that have raised their threatening heads before him with a discouraging persistency. His appreciation of them knows no bounds. He makes no efforts to hide his pleasure when their cheerful, lovely faces are near him and when they are planning little gatherings for his recreation and entertainment.

All this in the early part of the winter Margaret Wilson accomplished very nicely. She was a great comfort to her worried father and he was greatly appreciative of her attentions. But Margaret is more of an intellectual than a social type. She is keenly interested in a thousand things that have to do with education. Her heart was with her father, but by no means was it in her position as a society woman.

More and more frequent became her absences on lecture tours, on recital engagements, on visits of social investigation. And then finally she gave up entirely her position as first lady in the land to carve out for herself a professional career. It took the last ounce of courage she possessed to part with her father. But he was willing and gave his blessings.

Then came Helen Bones and Mrs. Norman Galt. Helen Bones, of course, came first. She is beautiful to look on in every way. She is well educated and has a fair amount of money to do with. But above all she is a charming woman of society.

She took the President under her social wing immediately. And immediately there was a difference in the social atmosphere in the White House. Also in the smile on the President's face. For while Margaret Wilson was successful as a hostess she is of that rather cold intellectual type which always operates against its possessor ever reaching the distinction in entertaining as expressed in the words "charming hostess."

Miss Bones' taste in matters social as well as domestic has made a deep impression on not only the President, but on the whole of social Washington. She has all that tact, amiability and grace that mark the successful hostess. And besides, she had her friend, Mrs. Norman Galt—the lovely, smiling, witty Mrs. Norman Galt to help her whenever it was necessary.

An unusually interesting occurrence took place just a few days ago at the summer capital when Margaret Wilson, former head of the White House, and Miss Bones, present head of the White House, met at a social gathering.

Margaret herself assumed the social reins at the White House for the afternoon when she invited the artist colony at Cornish, New Hampshire, to her father's home. The party was augmented by Miss Helen Bones and the President's house guest, Mrs. Norman Galt. Just how Margaret enjoyed sharing honors with Miss Bones and the pretty and attractive widow is only to be conjectured.

Margaret's tea was the first informal affair that the Wilsons have given since Mrs. Wilson's death a year ago, and but for the distinguished summer colony at Cornish would probably never have happened. So many of the renowned artists and authors are assembled there, however, that Margaret thought it well to open Harlakenden House and break the monotony for everyone.

Jessie Sayers also was present. Eleanor McAdoo, however, was too busily engaged in maternal duties to participate in the family party. Dr. D. Cary Grayson, the Wilson family physician, has been dividing his attention, by the way, between the President, who is far from well, and the young McAdoo baby, who has not been as strong in his early life as his parents would wish.

It is with less surprise than interest that Washington and the society that has followed the President down to Cornish sees how completely at home Mrs. Norman Galt seems to be as the guest of Helen Bones at the summer White House.

The charming little woman with her sprightliness and gentleness has made friends with the entire White House menage since Margaret Wilson saw fit to abandon her filial and social duties to Helen Bones.

It was Dr. Cary Grayson himself who thought of introducing Mrs. Galt at the White House. He has an eye for pretty women and has not yet come to regret that he stood sponsor for Miss Bones' friend.

From the very first Mrs. Galt was a success as a guest. During the late winter and spring she rolled around luxuriously in limousines bearing the White House crest. The President has taken a keen delight in having his niece's friend as a frequent, in fact, almost a daily guest, at dinner at the White House in the last few months.

"We are all so southern and congenial," says Mrs. Galt concerning her relations with the President and his household. "We have the same musical and literary tastes and our informality is delightful."

As it seems very probable that Mrs. Galt is to take a more and more active part because of her prettiness, vivacity and sympathetic qualities in social affairs at the White House, it is interesting to know that she is a Virginian about forty years old, who comes from a good family and who occupies a high placed social position.

She was a Miss Bolling when twenty years ago she married Norman Galt, one of the four sons of William Galt, of Washington, a very rich jeweler. Three of the sons died following the death of their father and Norman succeeded to the control of the business. He conducted it himself up to the time of his death four years ago.

The widow then bought out the interests of the other heirs and is now sole owner. Her brother conducts the business. The Galts, although in trade, have always had a prominent place in the best society in Washington. Norman Galt was for many years vestryman in St. Thomas' church and the widow is prominent in parish affairs.

The death of her husband was a deep grief to Mrs. Galt. She has never discarded her weeds, partly, perhaps, because they have been very becoming to her.

stadt stubborn fighting continues, the enemy attempting to break through the railway from Kreusburg and Mitau in the direction of Vilna on the right bank of the Viliya, and also between the Viliya and the Niemen. On Thursday and Friday the German offensive was checked by counter attacks on the middle Niemen and also on the front between the Bobr and Pripet.

"Yesterday our retreat continued with rear guard fighting, the offensive being concentrated in the direction of Bialystok and along the eastern border of Belovesksja, and Puszka and also of Kobrin.

"On the right bank of the Bug on Thursday the enemy started an offensive movement from Vladimir-Volynski toward Grochi, Lokachi and Poritsk. On the upper Bug river, the Zlota Lipa and the Dniester on Friday night and today the enemy attempts to attack in many sectors, especially in the region north of Brzezany and also to the west of Podgaitzi, where he got a footing on the left bank of the Zlota Lipa."

GERMAN LOSSES REPORTED HEAVY.

Dvinsk, Russia, August 28.—(Via London.)—Wounded members of the former garrison of the fortress of Osowets, recently evacuated by the Russians, in hospitals here, declare that the German losses before that fortress surpass the imagination. These prisoners are represented as declaring that their officers said the fortress had cost them five times more men than were in the garrison.

The Germans, it is asserted, stormed the fortress almost daily, expending altogether more than 2,000,000 shells.

RUSSIAN LINES AGAIN PIERCED.

Berlin, August 28.—(Via London.)—Teutonic pressure against the Russians in eastern Galicia has resulted in the piercing of the Russian lines on the Zlota Lipa river, it was officially announced today by German army headquarters.

It was also announced that the town of Narev about twenty miles south east of Bialystok, had been occupied by the Germans.

The statement is as follows:

"A French hand grenade attack on Lingekopf, north of Munster, was repulsed on a great part of the front.

"There has been much activity by artillery and airmen. Enemy aviators bombarded Ostend, Middlekerke and Bruges without much effect. Mulhelm in Baden, three civilians were killed by bombs dropped by aviators.

"Eastern theater of war:

"Army group of Field Marshal von Hindenburg: The army Eichhorn has defeated in battles north of Bausk and Schoenberg. More than 2,000 Russians were taken prisoner and two cannon and nine machine guns were captured.

"Attempts of advance against parts of our front between Radaiwilischki and Syjadosze were repulsed.

"Enemy advances of the troops of General von Eichhorn are making further victorious progress. The enemy is being pursued between the Bobr and the Berbrzaiowieska. The town of Narew has been occupied.

"Army Group of Prince Leopold of Bavaria: This army group is penetrating into the Bielovieah forest and across the Lesnaprawa, the lower course of which that of Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg and Foreign Minister von Jagow against complications with the United States. The opinion is held here that there is no reason to change the hopeful view of the situation expressed after the chancellor's statement.

The exact wording of instructions issued to naval commanders has not been divulged, and higher officials, when questioned, avoid an answer; but it is stated that they include the limit in order to attack no passenger steamers without adequate warning. Whether this applies to freighters cannot be learned. The difficulty of distinguishing a freighter from a passenger ship through a periscope is considered as likely to be an important point of consideration.

The American government now is officially in possession of the same declaration of policy as contained in Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg's statement, and acquainted with the same limitations. It was conveyed by Minister Gerard, now in Germany, for ex-American ambassador, at a conference Wednesday noon.

To report the sinking of the Arabic has yet been received, none of the communications from Ambassador Gerard has been involved having returned to port. The admiralty says the report may come any day now or be delayed another fortnight. At least that interval must elapse before the last of the submarine operating south of Ireland return.

BLOW FOR PEACE SEEN BY WILSON.

London, August 28.—The Daily News in an editorial today hazards the suggestion that the submarine which sank the steamship Arabic has itself since been sunk, and that Commander Pustkuchen, captain of the action of the underwater boat commander becomes comparatively easy. The editorial continues:

"If it is true that Germany is prepared to abandon or suspend her attacks, the United States has won a considerable diplomatic victory. There is not the slightest reason to suppose that Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German imperial chancellor, abandoned the attack upon the Arabic or desired to accelerate the relations with America. The sinking of the Arabic may be assumed with some degree of certainty to have been the unlucky trick of his opponents, the Tirpitzites, designed quite as much to embarrass him as to drive America to action."

The paper says that the submission of official documents to the United States demands is a fact of historic importance and that the formal recognition of the force of public opinion and insofar justifies President Wilson's "gentle diplomacy."

The editorial adds:

"If this finally has been accomplished the president has struck a shrewd blow for peace in other continents than America. As the United States can impose conditions and limitations on Germany's war methods, other nations can do the same, and Germany's claim to be her own judge in such matters is once and for all shattered."

The Standard in an editorial on the subject expresses the opinion that there are several good reasons for supposing that Count von Bernstorff, German ambassador to the United States, is not bluffing, but that it is not probable Germany will abandon her "submarine savagery" altogether.

"There will be fierce complaints over the relinquishment of so potent a weapon at American dictation," says the Standard. "For their own satisfaction the Germans will adopt a pose of making important but not vital concessions out of pure friendship for the United States, and it is not likely that President Wilson on his part will stand for the strict letter of his demand. The probability is that the concession is doubtless the conviction that Mr. Wilson's patience is nearly exhausted and that his next step would mean business."

GERMAN EXCUSES RIDICULED BY FIGARO.

Paris, August 28.—The Figaro, in an editorial today on the situation growing out of the sinking of the steamer Arabic, says:

"Germany is a universal distributor of excuses. She handed them to Denmark and Holland and would like to hand them to the United States. The point is, will the American government be satisfied with such base coin? For German excuses imply neither repentance nor intention not to relapse. Wilhelmstrasse experts think she will insist for a platitude. But the German pitcher has gone to the American well too often. It is too badly cracked for further use; a new one is wanted. President Wilson and Secretary Lansing will not longer be satisfied with empty words. Berlin is well aware of it and is doing everything to gain at least a few days."

SUBMARINE ATTACKS NORWEGIAN STEAMER.

New York, August 28.—Officers and crew of the Norwegian steamer Capito, which reached here today from Cardiff, said that a submarine fired upon without warning by a German submarine August 22 in the English channel.

Two shots were fired, it was said. The Norwegian flag was then displayed and the submarine disappeared. The Capto is a freighter and carried no passengers.

According to the story told by those aboard, the submarine came to the surface and sent a boat without warning, fired a shell which exploded on the starboard side of the bridge. Fragments of the exploding shell, it was said, penetrated the bow of a lifeboat and the steam ventilators.

FRENCH ARTILLERY PLAYS ON GERMANS.

Paris, August 28.—This official statement was given out tonight:

"In the region of Nieuport, Hetzas, to the north of Arras and to the east of the road to Lille, the German trenches have been violently and effectively bombarded. A fight in which bombs and mortars were employed has taken place in the Quennevieres sector.

"Artillery fighting is reported in the Argonne, where our batteries have silenced the enemy's attempts at bombarding. At Ville Morte, at Marie-Therese, at St. Hubert and at Four de Paris.

"Artillery fire is reported at Le Prêtre wood, in the forest of Parroy, and in the sectors made west of Flirey and Launoise in the Vosges.

"This morning toward 10 o'clock three German aeroplanes started from the region of Soissons and three from the region of Compiegne, heading for Paris. They were unable to reach their goal and only dropped a few bombs on Senlis, Pont-Sainte-Maxence, Montmedy, Fermeil, Ribecourt and Compiegne. The only victims thus far made were a chicken in which city two male nurses and a child were killed. The hostile aeroplanes, promptly detected, were shelled at various points and chased by our own aeroplanes. The combats and one of our aerial squadrons chased one of the aeroplanes at a height of nearly 11,000 feet and brought it down to the north of Senlis. The pilot and his machine were found incinerated."

KAISER CONSIDERING SUBMARINE POLICY.

Berlin, August 28.—(Via London, August 29, 12:35 a. m.)—Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German imperial chancellor, and Admiral von Tirpitz, minister of marine, who left together Wednesday to join the emperor, still are at army headquarters, where Austro-Arabic case and the submarine policy generally undoubtedly have been the subjects of consideration.

No word has reached Berlin concerning the conference and there have been no developments of any sort in the case here since the chancellor's declaration of policy, given in a statement to the Associated Press Wednesday.

Admiral Behnke, chief of the private marine cabinet, and the emperor's official personal adviser on naval affairs, is with the emperor. The admiral's influence, it is known, is thrown with that of Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg and Foreign Minister von Jagow against complications with the United States. The opinion is held here that there is no reason to change the hopeful view of the situation expressed after the chancellor's statement.

The exact wording of instructions issued to naval commanders has not been divulged, and higher officials, when questioned, avoid an answer; but it is stated that they include the limit in order to attack no passenger steamers without adequate warning. MAHARAJAH AND QUEEN IN SUBMARINE ZONE

Feared Germans May Get the Royal Couple and Hold Them for Ransom.

New York, August 28.—Somewhere in the dangerous waters that wash the British Isles, the steamship Rotterdam is nearing Falmouth tonight with an Indian prince aboard, whose chief apprehension is that he may be captured by the Germans and held for ransom. He is Jagatjit Singh Bahadur, Maharajah of Kapurthala, whose rich principality lies in the Punjab of India, and reckoned one of the wealthiest and most powerful of Indian rulers; he sailed from this port on August 21 on his way back to his kingdom after a two months' tour of the United States and Canada.

With the maharajah are his queen, a Spanish beauty, whom he wed in Madrid five years ago; his secretary, M. Roy, a consiaderable retinue of servants and an American girl, Miss Maggie Cullen, to whom the maharaine took a liking while in Asia.

Friends of the royal couple are very much afraid German submarine commanders might hear of the maharajah's departure from New York, were it published here. To make certain that this public should not know of his plans, the maharajah and his party boarded the steamer two days before she was due to sail, and remained aboard in seclusion. They made the trip to the Hoboken pier in a closed automobile at night. Meantime, to preserve outward appearances, the maharajah's assistant, Residence, a big house on Long Island rented for the season, was kept open as usual, and an interview was given out, in his name, in which he said he had sailed, telling that he preferred England to Germany in these days of submarine warfare.

TEUTONS USED BAYONET TO TAKE BREST-LITOVSK

Austro-Hungarian Headquarters, August 28.—(Via London.)—Brest-Litovsk was taken largely with the bayonet, according to official communication issued by the Austro-Hungarian army. Only the Croatin and Cracow infantry are said to have distinguished themselves in charges against the southern and western fronts, while the German reserve corps forced its way in from the north.

The Russians had, during the war, erected new works beyond the swamps encircling the fortress, three to four kilometers outside the permanent fort girdle, and had fortified with a new series of barbed wire entanglements and a broad belt of buried mines. The storming began late in the afternoon of August 25.

The infantry of Field Marshal von Arz, advancing on both sides of the Bialsk turnpike, brewed their way with entrenching tools and gun butts through the entanglements, under heavy rifle and machine gun fire, and then charged with the bayonet.

The resistance was irresistible. The cheering infantry in the gathering darkness pressed forward. At 9 o'clock last fort was taken by 11 o'clock at night.

The Russian survivors across the Bug river were destroying the bridges behind them.

The Teutonic troops reached the river at 3 o'clock in the morning, but were obliged to wait for pontoons. Meantime, the Germans, attacking from the northern front, section of the fort girdle, and, unhampered by the river, stormed the citadel and forced a way into the town.

The Russians fired the city in their retreat. Most of the 52,000 inhabitants left before the siege, and only a few thousand Jews, unable to sell their goods has not yet been ascertained.

STORMING STORY DENIED BY RUSSIANS

Petrograd, August 28.—(Via London.)—An official statement concerning the Austro-German occupation of Brest-Litovsk, given out tonight, says:

"General headquarters declares that the German report that Brest-Litovsk fell after an assault by Austro-German troops is inexact. For some time already it had been decided that to retain a garrison of 100,000 men in this fortress was not conformable with the Russian plan. Hence war material useful to the enemy was removed in time and relatively small forces left on the left bank of the Bug solely to enable the army operating in this region to retire eastward. When this retirement was completed the fortifications and bridges were destroyed and the garrison rejoined the army in the field."

NO GERMAN XMAS GOODS FOR THE UNITED STATES

Berlin, August 28.—(Via London.)—American business men in Germany are taking a gloomy view of the fate of great quantities of goods ordered in Germany for the American Christmas trade. They say the loss of these goods will amount to millions.

Orders totalling about $50,000,000 for such wares as toys, Bohemian glassware, bronzes, Christmas cards and optical goods have been placed, mostly last autumn for summer delivery, it is stated, this being the usual practice in order to give American wholesale dealers an opportunity to place their orders. The article all are for seasonal value and become virtually valueless unless delivered immediately. The British order in council, therefore, is not effective when the orders for the goods were placed, prevents such a delivery.

American dentists, who constitute one of the most numerous elements among the Americans in Europe, also are suffering because they are unable to get dental supplies and artificial teeth from America.

From the lighter side, the order in council also is playing havoc with golf supplies. Golf balls and clubs are being exhausted rapidly and dealers are objurgating England and planning an appeal to their fellow enthusiasts in America.

BULGARIA WILL FIGHT IF DEMANDS ARE MET

Sofia, Bulgaria, August 28.—(Via London.)—An inspired statement appearing in a publication controlled by the government contains the announcement that if conditions affecting Bulgaria should be changed by the granting of Bulgaria's territorial demands, to obtain entrance as to call for intervention in the war, the government will convoke parliament immediately.

This statement was elicited by the action of the opposition in parliament, which has been responsible for the publication of statements condemning the attitude of the government as contrary to the interests of the country. The immediate convocation of parliaments of the exploding shell, it was said, penetrated the bow of a lifeboat and the steam ventilators.

RUSSIA PREPARES FOR FINISH FIGHT

Gen. Polivanoff and M. Sazonoff Declare That There Will Be No Peace Until Victory—More Armies Being Organized.

London, August 28.—Despite the recent Russian reverses there is a determination in high quarters to continue the war until victory is achieved, according to Reuter's correspondent.

The correspondent quotes General Polivanoff, the war minister, as follows:

"We are confident of our ability to safeguard Petrograd. Our armies can stand the winter without inconvenience. Everything is ready for that purpose.

"A new force of two million men will be trained far behind the fighting line and will be ready to take the field in the spring. General Russky is commander-in-chief of the Petrograd front with several armies at his immediate disposal.

"It is my settled purpose to do everything in my power to work in harmony with the duma and public opinion."

General Polivanoff, says the correspondent, characterized the suggestion that the allies were not helping Russia to the utmost of their power as "senseless gossip."

German Propaganda Charged.

The correspondent also sends a statement credited to M. Sazonoff, in which Sazonoff declares that Germany, unable to break the Russian army, is now trying to break the morale of the Russian people by a propaganda which has followed every Russian setback in the past year and including the fall of the Warsaw, has been pushed with increasing cleverness and force both in the Russian army and in all circles in Petrograd. Its main method, according to the statement, is an attempt to convince the Russians that their allies have left them in the lurch. This alleged propoganda has so far succeeded, according to the statement, that some people in Russia have become pessimistic as to the real situation, the idea being conveyed to them that the attack in the west is delaying operations and that the highest authorities are planning peace.

The statement of M. Sazonoff, which the correspondent says is an authorized one, is given as follows:

"Unwillingly the Russian government takes note of the malicious rumors. Three months of continuous efforts to break our army have been unsuccessful and the enemy is now trying a new kind of poison mixed through specious and plausible reasoning at breaking the spirit of the Russian people and the Russian army by creating the impression of lack of harmony between the allies, failure of our munition supplies and the prospect of an independent peace with Germany.

Allied Commanders Agree.

"I am ashamed that any Russian can seriously discuss such subjects, which clearly are the enemy's latest attempts to accomplish, by intrigue, results which he has never yet attained by arms."

M. Sazonoff then is quoted as declaring that there is absolute unanimity in the high allied commands and in Russia, and that Germany has been able to replenish the munitions of the Russian armies.

Finally he says the statement, "I wish forever to disabuse the public mind of any intention whatever on the part of the Russian government to make any independent peace with Germany as long as a single soldier remains in Russia."

In conclusion the minister is quoted as saying that it behooves all patriotic Russians to assist in the struggle at the hands of the Germans by listening to and repeating "these vile reports."

M. Sazonoff expresses strong conviction of an ultimate Russian victory.

NEW MINISTRY FORMED IN RUSSIA.

Moscow, Russia, August 28.—(Via London.)—After a series of conferences held by the business men and the representatives of the public bodies in Moscow, and municipalities participating in the work of preparing war stores, a resolution was adopted today declaring that the lack of co-ordination between the Russian cabinet ministers and the uncertain course of the government were hindering the efforts of the munition producers and that the ministry should be reorganized under the guidance of an energetic premier.

RUSSIA DEPRESSED, ACCORDING TO BERLIN.

Berlin, August 28.—(By Wireless to Sayville.)—The Overseas News Agency today says:

"Private reports reaching Berlin state that the rapid succession of German victories has caused depression all over Russia, especially at Petrograd, where there is much uneasiness. The early loss of Vilna, Dvinsk and Grodno is expected. Captured Russians from all parts of the front declare that they were without officers and that no ammunition or food was distributed."

LOSS OF 50 SUBMARINES IS DENIED BY GERMANY

Berlin, August 28.—(Via London.)—German naval officers say the statement made in an official publication that Germany has lost fifty submarines is ridiculous, as also is the statement credited to British sources placing the number at thirty-eight. The naval men do not deny that the British have had successes against the submarines, but say they have been nothing like such figures.

Several successes announced by the British admiralty are declared unfounded. For example, the admiralty today stated that the British report of destruction of a German submarine off the Belgian coast by a bomb thrown by an aviator is untrue. Upon receipt of the announcement that this submarine had been lost the admiralty queried a coast station by telephone, it is said, and received the report of the commander of the submarine in question. It was stated that the aviator did drop a bomb, but that the submarine was untouched and got away from the aeroplane by diving.

The admiralty also made a report on the attack on August 16 by a German submarine on the English coast. The announcement is as follows:

"One of our submarines on August 16 destroyed by gunfire the bensol factory with its attached benzol warehouses and coke furnaces near Harrington, England. The statement of the British press that the submarine attacked the open towns of Harrington, Part-on and Whitehaven is inexact.

"The same submarine on August 15 was fired at from a great distance in the Irish sea by a large passenger steamer, probably a Royal Mail steam packet, but was not hit.

"The British admiralty announced on August 27 that a German submarine had been destroyed and sunk off Ostend by a British seaplane. This is inexact. The submarine was attacked but not hit, and returned to port undamaged."

The British statement referred to by the German admiralty was made on August 26. It is stated that Squadron Commander Arthur Bigsworth had destroyed single-handed a German submarine off Ostend. The announcement contained these words:

"The submarine was observed to be completely wrecked and sank off Ostend."

EX-SECRETARY LONG SUMMONED BY DEATH

He Ordered Dewey to Manila to Destroy the Spanish Warships.

Hingham, Mass., August 28.—John D. Long, former secretary of the navy and former governor of Massachusetts, died at his home here tonight.

Mr. Long's death was generally unexpected. He returned from a trip to Maine two days ago suffering from an intestinal trouble with which he had been afflicted for several years. He was ordered to rest by his physicians, but reports that his condition was critical were denied.

Ordered Dewey to Manila.

John D. Long was secretary of the navy during the Spanish-American war. It was he who is on record as having dispatched the famous cable of April 25, 1898, to Commodore George Dewey, commanding the Asiatic squadron, then awaiting orders at Hong Kong. The message read:

"War has commenced between Spain and the United States. Proceed at once to the Philippine Islands. Capture or destroy the Spanish ships. Use the utmost endeavor."

It was on the sixth day after the receipt of these orders that Dewey reported his great victory in the battle of Manila Bay. As to the message which had thus sent the fleet into action, Mr. Long afterward said:

"My name was at the bottom. Gloriously the President rather like to have the credit of it. But it was not mine. I directed Chief Crowninshield, of the bureau of navigation, to have such a dispatch made ready, but Crowninshield did not write it. Who prepared it? Some subordinate clerk in his bureau. Who? God only knows. As to the fell blame for the order—that dispatch came in the name. I took it to the president, saying to him: 'Mr. President, I have a message for you.' He said: 'All right, sign it.'"

Mr. Long was called to head the navy department when President McKinley took office, in March, 1897, and he served four years in the cabinet of President Roosevelt.

Rumors of his resignation were frequent during the Spanish-American controversy, when Mr. Long was accused of favoring Sobley, but he declared he would not resign "under fire" and retained his position until 1902, after the close of the war and the death of his daughter and his own ill health. In announcing the resignation President Roosevelt wrote:

"It has never been my good fortune to be associated with a man more single-minded in his devotion to the public interest."

Born in Maine.

In addition to directing the navy during the war with Spain, the official acts of his term as head included the placing of thousands of navy employes under the civil service rules and the prohibition of the sale of beer on naval vessels.

John Davis Long was born in Buckfield, Maine, in 1838, the son of a prosperous farmer, and from early youth predilection was for law and politics. Settled in Boston after his graduation at Harvard, he served four terms in the state legislature, was three terms speaker of the house, was lieutenant governor, and in 1879 defeated General Benjamin F. Butler, the democratic candidate for governor by a plurality of 13,000. He was twice reelected with large pluralities, and sent to congress for three terms. There he formed a warm personal regard for McKinley.

In 1884 he made a strong speech nominating George F. Edmunds, of Vermont, for president in the republican national convention. He was one of the most polished debaters in congress, his speeches being models of terse excellence and a dry humor which made him popular as an after-dinner speaker. At leisure at his home in the quaint old town of Hingham, near Boston, he wrote poetry, and published a translated Virgil's Aeneid. He was a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and a total abstainer from early life, he was also for many years president of the Massachusetts Total Abstinence society.

Notwithstanding his many prominences as fraternal and social, among his New England friends he was affectionately known as "Governor" Long to the end of his life.

WAR MEANS BANKRUPTCY FOR THE GERMAN EMPIRE

Amsterdam, August 28.—(Via London.)—The Berlin Vorwaerts in discussing the new German war loan directs attention to what it characterizes as the alarming financial situation which Germany must face at the conclusion of the war.

"After the war," says the paper, "the imperial debt and pensions alone will demand an annual expenditure of at least two and a half billion marks ($625,000,000) or a little less than the united ordinary and extraordinary and imperial expenditure for 1913. In other words, the income of the empire hitherto will only suffice to pay the interest on the national debt. For all other expenses new sources of taxation must be created. Whoever remembers the taxation controversies of 1908 and 1909 can easily imagine into what internal political difficulties the war is leading us."

MELON PATCH RAIDED BY INTERNED GERMANS

Norfolk, Va., August 28.—Farmer Carey, of Deep Creek section, has complained to the county police that he has had a three-acre watermelon patch on the southern branch practically ruined by men separated recently by sailors from the interned German cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich. He declares that there was a descent on the patch in force on August 19, another raid on Monday last, and other last Thursday.

Carey's attorney called on the commanding officer of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich and laid the facts before him. It was agreed that the German commander should appoint an attorney to accompany him to the melon patch and estimate the damage, and payment will be made by the commanding officers of the Prinz Eitel on the award agreed on by the attorneys.

The loss to the melon grower would not have been nearly as great as it was if the Germans had known how to select the ripe melons. But they appeared to have been about as new to it as the average farmer would be at telling except by cutting the melons open. Many gathered ripe and unripe, big and little melons alike. Not a melon is said to be hardly anything left in the patch except the vines. Carey puts his loss at $200.

BATTLE IN AIR WON BY FRENCH AVIATORS

Paris, August 28.—Four German military aeroplanes attempted to make a raid on Paris this morning. They were attacked by a French air flotilla and one of the German machines was shot to pieces in midair. The German machines crossed the French lines flying at a great height and driving toward the city of Paris. When over a point to the north of the capital they sighted a French air flotilla and three of the German aeroplanes headed about and headed for the German lines. The fourth machine dropped five bombs at Mont Morency, a town fifteen miles from Paris. No one was hurt. The batteries at Mont Morency opened fire on the aeroplane, but it got away in the haze.

HUNGARIAN AVIATOR INJURED IN FLIGHT

Allentown, Pa., August 28.—Lieutenant Baron von Pigyimanay, a noted Hungarian aviator, was critically injured in a flight here today. He had ascended about 700 feet when his engine stopped. He tried to volplane to earth, but in an effort to avoid striking a big crowd of spectators he crashed into an electric light pole. It was said tonight his condition was serious.

LUDERUS ASSUMES BATTING CROWN

Phillies' First-Sacker Ousts Snyder, of the Cardinals, From Lead in the National League.

Fred Luderus, the hard-hitting first baseman of the Philadelphia Nationals, has assumed the batting leadership in the National league, climbing ahead of Catcher Snyder, of the St. Louis Cardinals, who led the league a week ago.

Tommy Long, the former Cracker, now with the Cardinals, continues to hit over the .300 mark, and stands in seventh position on the list.

Here are the players who are hitting .270 or better and who have participated in fifteen or more games through the games played Wednesday, August 25:

Hole by Hole Description Of Championship Course

Detroit, Mich., August 28.—A description of the local golf course, over which the twenty-first national amateur championship is being played, should be of interest to the golfers the country over, as it is regarded as one of the most difficult courses in America.

The course is 6,615 yards long and includes six holes that are 40 yards or more apart, three that are 500 yards or more, five in the 300-yard class and four of 200 yards or less. A description of the grounds follows:

No. 1, 420 Yards—The tee is on a rise, and a carry of 155 yards is required to get onto the clear. Two large traps guard the green, which is banked and traps are arranged to catch sliced or hooked second shots. Par, 5.

No. 2, 447 Yards—It is this hole Vardon called the best of its kind in America. It will take two long shots to get green to the green, which is on a rise. It is well guarded by traps, as also is the green, the front of which, however, is open. Par, 5.

No. 3, 175 Yards—This hole is an absolutely straight drive will be necessary. A diagonal bunker makes a hook or slice costly. A long shot to the left opens up the hole considerably. This hole is a splendid test for accuracy and power. Par, 3.

No. 4, 341 Yards—A ditch runs diagonally across the course, protecting otherwise well-guarded green. About 165 yards from the tee, on the right, is a trap, and there are several other traps on the same side and at the rear of the green. Hooks and slices on this hole are costly. To play a par, 4, will require great accuracy.

No. 5, 164 Yards—This hole must be crossed by a drive from an elevated tee. Pulled or sliced shots here mean trouble. The green is well guarded by traps at the right. Par 3.

No. 6, 424 Yards—A sliced drive again discovers a ditch. A well placed drive, however, gives an easy second shot to cross the ditch. The green is raised and guarded by a mound at the right and is banked at the rear. Par, 4.

No. 7, 144 Yards—The ditch is encountered diagonally. A pulled shot with a mashie will find the creek, while traps, which guard the right and rear of the green, will catch over-drives and slices. Par, 3.

No. 8, 515 Yards—It will take three shots to reach the green. Traps and mounds catch inaccurate drives. A ledge which raises the green about three feet must be cleared. Banks at the rear, and traps, right and left, add to the difficulties. Par, 5.

No. 9, 401 Yards—Believed to be experted to be the best two-shot hole on the course. Heavy rough grass stops a pulled shot; a drive to the left offers opportunity for a good midiron second. Topped seconds, or slices or pulls to the green, will find traps. Par, 4.

No. 10, 208 Yards—Woods to the right and a ditch to the left complicate this hole, but a good drive, accurately placed, will avoid these difficulties. The green is guarded right and left by traps and in front by a cross bunker. A picturesque and beautiful hole. Par, 3.

No. 11, 535 Yards—About 440 yards from the tee is a creek and the fairway up to that point is well guarded by traps. A topped second shot will discover a cross-bunker, 300 yards from the tee. The green also is well protected. Par, 5.

No. 12, 365 Yards—A troublesome hole, requiring great skill and careful play. The course is crossed diagonally by the ditch and either a long or short drive calls for a careful second. Traps at right and left and a bank at the rear guard the green. Par, 4.

No. 13, 380 Yards—The ditch is directly in front of the tee. It catches a badly-topped shot. A long carry is required for a straight shot toward the hole; otherwise traps complicate play. The green is elevated about 25 yards beyond a cross-bunker. Par, 4.

No. 14, 216 Yards—Play for this hole depends upon the wind. If it is against the player, a long wooden shot is required; if with him, an iron will reach the green which is banked. This is a splendid one-shot hole, but mounds, and a more or less undulating surface on the green, disturb well-laid plans. Par, 3.

No. 15, 364 Yards—Here there is a diagonal bunker which a long drive will carry, permitting an easy mashie for the second. A drive to the right, however, discovers a big trap. There also are traps right and left of the course, which narrows toward the green. The latter is banked at the rear. Par, 4.

No. 16, 382 Yards—This permits a clear drive, but topped or sliced second shots will land in a cross-bunker. Large mounds along the course make an accurate third shot necessary. The green is banked, and the course narrows as the green is approached. Par, 5.

No. 17, 415 Yards—A mound at the left catches a hooked drive and a slice will find rough grass and a mound. In the center of the course are three traps for poor second shots. The green at either corner is guarded by traps. Par, 4.

No. 18, 182 Yards—The green is slightly elevated with a large trap in front of it, requiring accurate direction and carry. The green has a difficult slope. Par, 3.

New Orleans, August 28.—Two singles and errors by Knaupp and Higgins gave Chattanooga two runs and the game in the eleventh inning today, 3 to 1. The locals scored one run in the first inning but after that Clark was effective. Bagby did not allow a hit until the seventh. Manager Dobbs protested today's game on the ground that Clark used the "mud ball." Clark was ordered from the grounds for disputing a decision by Umpire Chestnutt.

Douglasville Wins.

Douglasville, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Douglasville defeated White's All-Star team of Atlanta, in the second game of the series here this afternoon, 5 to 4.

Head, for the locals, allowed only three hits, and with perfect support would have scored a shut out.

Batteries, All Stars, White and Wise; Douglasville, Head and Hutchens.

Charles A. Stevenson has been engaged for the cast of "Search Me," by Augustin McHugh. It will be produced the middle of the month at Long Branch.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Dodgers Win Two.

Brooklyn, August 28.—Brooklyn beat Pittsburg twice today. Both games were pitchers' battles.

Rucker made two hits off Harmon in the first game, which the Superbas won 2 to 1 by a ninth-inning effort. With the score tied in the last half of the ninth, Harmon walked Stengel, who came home when Hinchman let Wheat's single roll to the right field wall. The second game went to Brooklyn 3 to 0.

Giants 2, Cubs 0.

New York, August 28.—Tesreau duplicated Marquard's fine game yesterday and pitched New York to a 2 to 0 victory over Chicago. The big Giant pitcher held the visitors to three hits and received great support. Humphries also pitched fine ball for Chicago, but New York scored an earned run in the first inning on singles by Archer, Tesreau and Meyers.

Boston, August 28.—Boston took today's game from Cincinnati 2 to 0, after a pitchers' battle, during which Rudolph and Toney each allowed five hits. Boston got a run in the third when Evers doubled, was sacrificed along by Snodgrass and scored on Magee's single. In the fifth a pass to Evers, with an infield out and Magee's sacrifice, put the Boston captain on third. Schmidt's single scored him.

Goodyear Tires Now on 500,000 Cars
There are now two million users of automobile tires.
Figuring four tires yearly to a car, we are now supplying 500,000 cars.
That means about two million tires this year.
Tires Not Alike
Goodyears are Fortified tires. They have five exclusive features, each of which combats a major trouble. These and other extras are costing us millions of dollars. They are saving our users ten times as much, perhaps.
Yet note how many users still buy tires without them. They are not opposed to Goodyears, we are sure. But they believe—most of them, probably—that standard tires will average much alike.
Worth Will Tell
But Goodyears outsell any other tire. Every month they are winning armies of new users. And they will win you if you'll let them.
Some may meet with mishap and misuse. But a Fortified tire will, on the average, outlast a tire that isn't. A double-thick tread, like the Goodyear All-Weather, will outlast a thin anti-skid. Extras in size, strength, features and fabric are bound to mean extra service.
We urge you to try the Goodyear tire as we are building it this summer. We have added $500,000 in new extras this year.
These are the best tires built with fabric. Not a single rival approaches them in some important ways. Let them prove how they save trouble, how they save money. Their super-quality has won a half-million users. Give them a chance to win you.

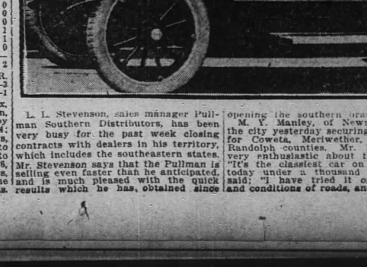
PULLMAN CAR IS SELLING FAST



L. L. Stevenson, sales manager Pullman Southern Distributors, has been very busy for the past week closing contracts with dealers in his territory, which includes the southeastern states. Mr. Stevenson says that the Pullman is selling even faster than he anticipated, and is much pleased with the quick results which he has obtained since opening the southern branch.

M. V. Manley, of Newnan, was in the city yesterday securing the agency for Coweta, Meriwether, Heard and Randolph counties. Mr. Manley was very enthusiastic about the Pullman. "It's the classiest car on the market today under a thousand dollars," he said. "I have tried it on all kinds and conditions of roads, and it has certainly stood up to the test."

Among other dealers closed last week were Gainesville Pullman Sales company, C. N. Pike, of LaGrange, and D. E. Eakes, of Buchanan, Ga.

Mr. Kelly, of the Glover Realty company; George P. Howard, J. Lipschutz and B. B. Jarnigan are among the recent purchasers of the Pullman in Atlanta.

OUR COMMERCIAL RIGHTS.

There is much both of truth and error in the following comment from The Philadelphia Record concerning the attitude of the south toward England's declaration of contraband against cotton:

> Judging by newspaper comments, the southern states are taking Great Britain's declaration of cotton as contraband with entire serenity. The crop now being gathered is rather small, as the planters materially reduced their acreage allotted to cotton, and for some time the amount exported to Teutonic countries has been trifling. The attempt of some senators, headed by Hoke Smith, to get up a scare on this subject, apparently with a view to embarrassing the administration, seems destined to failure. The southern newspapers are practically unanimous for the president's stand, and the whole situation seems likely to adjust itself, just as it did last year.

It is true that the south is not tearing its hair or kicking up any big racket about it. But the southern states are firmly and vigorously insisting upon their rights under international law, and they will continue to do so.

If we should succeed, under favorable financial conditions, in carrying the present cotton crop for six months or a year, if need be, that fact would in no sense alter the problem in so far as England's unlawful activity is concerned. It is England's unwarranted and unlawful attitude which forces us to adopt this plan. Otherwise, the markets of the world would be open to us as they lawfully should be, and with the comparatively small crop which has been made, the producer would receive a fair and remunerative price for his product. He may succeed in doing that ultimately, anyhow, but in the meantime he is put to the expense of storing and insuring his crop and of paying interest charges upon the advances which he must have to meet his obligations. Thus, regardless of the ultimate outcome, England's action has put a tremendous expense upon this section which is both unwarranted and unnecessary.

The suggestion in The Record's statement that there is an attempt on the part of Senator Hoke Smith and others to embarrass the administration is utterly absurd. The Constitution, Senator Smith and others who are insisting upon the withdrawal of the contraband order and the opening of neutral European ports to commerce which cannot be legally classed as contraband, stand squarely upon the protest against these unlawful acts which has already been voiced by President Wilson in his various communications addressed to the British government. Therein the south does indorse the administration's stand and has gone no further than to urge that it be made as firm and emphatic as were our statements to Germany relative to the sinking of the Lusitania.

Already cotton producers of the south feel that they are dealing with a question of principle. Their protest has been voiced in hundreds of communications which have been sent to Washington. Under the most favorable conditions for storing and holding the crop, the producer, cut off from an open world market, must necessarily suffer. Even if he did not, if his loss were only theoretical, we should still contend, and justly so, that the British government in transcending international law, had wantonly violated our unquestioned rights.

GEORGIA PROSPERITY.

The country merchant, the country banker and the country trader are all agreed that business is going to be good, exceptionally good, this fall. It is from these that the city merchant and city banker have derived information based upon which they make most optimistic predictions.

The Georgia Chamber of Commerce is conducting a referendum upon business conditions in the state, with a view to ascertaining through multiplied opinion just where Georgia business stands. Hundreds of inquiries have just been sent out and the replies are beginning to come in. The Constitution publishes today a number of these answers which are typical of the general business sentiment over the state.

In the replies which the Georgia Chamber has already received, there are assurances sufficient to convert the most pessimistic. It is made clear, as pointed out in the statement of President E. W. Stetson, of the Citizens' National bank, of Macon, that we have passed through all the intermediate stages between two periods of prosperity — extravagance, adversity and economy—and are now upon the threshold of the recurrent prosperity period which promises to be the greatest and most far-reaching Georgia and the south have ever known.

Georgia merchants are anticipating a prosperous season and preparing for it. They are filling their shelves, which were depleted as the result of recent conditions, as never before. Local jobbers and manufacturers have scarcely prepared themselves to fill the orders which are pouring in upon them—another healthy sign in that both the city and country merchant are buying more extensively than ever right at home. People are beginning to find out that the homemade product is just as good as that manufactured a thousand miles away, and the difficulty which the merchant once experienced in satisfying his trade with it has almost disappeared.

First indications of healthful business conditions, as shown in the replies received by the Georgia chamber, come direct from the farm. While the cotton acreage has been reduced, the crop has been made with more than 40 per cent less fertilizer, with less expenditure for mules and machinery and less cost for labor than at any time within the last decade. It is not that labor has not been used at remunerative wages, but practically every farmer has himself become a laborer, handling both plow and hoe.

It is of interest, too, in this connection, although it has been frequently commented upon, that Georgia and southern farmers have made more foodstuffs than ever before, and far less of their cotton money will go to the west for these articles. Every bushel of wheat and every bushel of corn grown at home, over and above the ordinary crop, means just that much more money for home expenditure, and the home-growing spirit has brought about the home-buying spirit, which means we will come nearer to living at home this year in every respect than we have done at any time in all our history.

The cotton situation—England's declaration of contraband and blockade of neutral European ports—is the one disturbing feature. But people throughout the south are beginning to feel more confident regarding that element. The opinion is growing that, with the preparation which has been made to meet it, the effect will not be nearly so serious as some have anticipated. That does not, however, relieve the government from insisting with all its vigor upon a revision of England's attitude. If the damage were only constructive, instead of actual, we should still insist with all our force upon the observation by England of her solemn treaty agreements and our rights under international law.

Fortunately this single cloud upon the business horizon is clearing. There is reason to believe a few more weeks will see it altogether removed, when we shall be on the highroad to the era of the most abundant prosperity Georgia or the south have ever enjoyed.

THE STATE TAX RATE.

Georgia is to be congratulated upon the fact that the state tax rate just fixed at 4.8 mills has been kept under the constitutional limit of 5 mills, notwithstanding the fact that one of the most depressing years within the state's history followed a year of extraordinary increase in taxable values.

There were two good reasons why a big slump in tax returns was anticipated this year. First, there was the business depression brought on by the war, which, including the cotton crisis of last fall and winter, naturally tended to depress values in every direction. In the second place, it would have been only natural, following an extraordinary increase in tax values, for the state to experience, under the business difficulties which have beset it, a slump of almost equivalent proportions in the opposite direction.

There is just one thing that saved Georgia from this disaster—her tax equalization law. It was that law which brought up the returns to their splendid maximum in 1914, and it was the same influence which maintained them this year within approximately $3,500,000 of that high-water mark.

Had it not been for the tax equalization law which has been conservatively and carefully administered, Georgia would not have shown an increase of $85,000,000 in her tax returns last year, and she would have lost many times $3,500,000 in her tax values this year.

Without the tax equalization law, the result this year would have been a substantial deficit in the state treasury, even with the full constitutional tax levy of 5 mills.

Georgia is indebted and must give tribute to that law for financial conservation of the state at a time when she could not possibly have gotten through without its assistance. It would have taken us several years to catch up with the deficit which would undoubtedly have been created.

The Georgia tax equalization law has accomplished this without imposing undue hardship upon any citizen. It has increased taxes in comparatively few instances, and only where they were unduly low and out of proportion to true valuation. In many instances it has lowered them, but its chief work for the state has been in bringing onto the tax digests property subject to taxation, which had formerly escaped.

Certainly no one can complain of this achievement. Its work has been well and acceptably done and under capable and conservative administration there is room for still greater effort ahead of it. With the sincere and undivided support of the people there is scarcely a question that it will ultimately solve Georgia's every financial problem.

HUBBY HOLDS HIS OWN.

A story from the west of a woman who said she had bought a husband, and was willing to sell him again to any one who would buy, will hardly hold in the light of another story which comes from Long Island City.

The New York Evening World says it took fifty policemen of that city "to hold back the women who wanted to rush into a burning building and rescue their husbands."

Commending them for their devotion and willing self-sacrifice, The Evening World says:

> Everyone remembers what happened at a Dutch city which, after a terrific siege, fell before the armies of the cruel Alva. The one mercy granted the conquered burghers was that the women might bring out such of their most prized possessions as they could carry on their shoulders. When the gates were opened a line of ladies staggered forth, each bearing a husband, booted and armed, upon her back.

Notwithstanding all the marital troubles aired in the divorce courts, hubby still ranks high on the list of human valuables, and the sentiment of the old Scotch sweetheart-wife's song of "John Anderson, My Jo," is as popular today and as true to life as it was in the old days when the gray-haired lovers whose loyalty it celebrates were going down the hill together.

ANOTHER RETIRED CAPITALIST.

Recently a critic, who is also a humorist, said that even Longfellow's "Village Blacksmith," in order to keep abreast of the times, had been compelled to abandon his "spreading chestnut tree" and open a garage and general automobile repair shop.

But "that's as may be." Here is an other turn to the story, as cited by The Jacksonville (Fla.) Metropolis. It is a story of financial success, with a village blacksmith as the hero:

> Under a spreading chestnut tree the village blacksmith lies in a comfortable chair smoking a two-for-a-quarter cigar. His name is Matthew McNulty, and the chestnut tree stands in front of his colonial farmhouse just outside Lafayette, Ind.
>
> Day in, day out, from morn till night, as the poet sung, you could hear McNulty's bellows roar, for nearly sixty years—if you count from boyhood. During those years he shod more than half a million horses and mules. He used to have a monopoly on shoeing the towpath mules that hauled the canal boats between Lafayette and Toledo.
>
> McNulty has retired now, with a fortune of $40,000 and a farm, over and above the good living he made in his blacksmith shop all these years.

The Metropolis thinks it is safe to say that "no retired banker or farmer gets more satisfaction out of his millions than the blacksmith gets out of his anvil memories, his farm and his forty thousand dollars."

He hammered out his success in his own way; he was efficient in his line and provident of the future, and now he rightfully ranks himself with the retired capitalists of the country!

THEIR STRENUOUS HOLIDAY.

The New York Evening World makes the proposal of a parade on Labor Day of "the provisional regiment of patriotic public officials"—bankers, lawyers—big and little business men—"who have been putting in hard work for their country's good at the Plattsburg camp of instruction." The World says "it has been a strenuous holiday" to these men," but it has given them the fine and fit feeling, and there is a general wish to see them in the line of march:

> Their example has already been useful in that it has produced stirrings of similar feeling in others who have had to stick to tasks at home. The world is in a strange and parlous state. Even in this tranquil country thoughtful men are urging the need, not of war spirit, but of soldier spirit, the kind that in sudden emergency will have ready hundreds of thousands of men more efficient by several grades than volunteers—and who, besides their ordinary pursuits are familiar enough with the business of soldiering to make them forces to be reckoned with.
> There are no "classes" in the Plattsburg camp: the millionaire is but an earnest, working man there, a private in the ranks, a patriotic American citizen, "under orders," fitting himself for service to his country if the call should come.
>
> The Boy Scout movement, too, has recently given evidence of new life, with leading universities providing a course of training for scout masters. The Baltimore American says of it:
>
> > A movement which has spread into twenty-seven different countries and which now includes an enrollment of over 2,000,000 members, has surely reached a stage of development where further development is not reasonably to be looked for. It has progressed reasonably be expected that the novelty having worn off, the Boy Scout movement would by this time be showing some signs of decline. But, according to the indications, it is reaching into new territories continuously and has gained a status in the United States that puts it on a basis of permanent acceptance comparable to that of the public school system.
>
> It is the true American spirit in the camp—training of man and boy. It is good work for peace in that the military exercise thus obtained makes healthier, happier citizens, aside from the knowledge gained as to being helps, and not hindrances, to their country in time of need.

FALSE IDEALS OF WORK HOLD BACK SOUTHERN BOYS AND GIRLS.

By Iona Dooly.

There are many lucrative positions open to young men in Atlanta today which they do not take advantage of, because of a mistaken idea as to the dignity of the positions.

"A change of ideals about occupations is more needed in this section than anything I know of," remarked a man who employs a large number of men and women in one of the city's largest institutions.

"There is needed in Atlanta right now trained men to head the departments of many of our manufacturing institutions; there are men hunting positions who pass by good opportunities.

"Technical education is doing a great deal to make the ideals of our young men more practical, and there is at present a popular readiness for men to equip themselves as engineers along all lines, and to look forward to growing accomplishment in that direction, but they are neglecting opportunities the industries open."

In a well-known Atlanta factory a position was open recently which paid a salary of $4,000 a year. It required a knowledge of practical chemistry, among other things, and the man who filled the place would have had to have some college training, yet a young man had to be secured from outside of the state to fill the position.

There have been many applicants for positions in the offices of this same institution, young men in the community seeming to feel that a clerkship in the president's office or a stenographer's place were preferable to the position of superintendent of this particular department of the factory. The latter's duty not only gave him charge of the work in the department and the engaging of labor therefor, but the purchase of machinery and equipment and the business development of the department. It gave a man the opportunity to so familiarize himself with the work of the department that he might have succeeded in time to the highest office with the giving of the institution, yet the position fell to one on the outside. There were no trained applicants here.

With such cases it is not unusual to hear that the operatives are not pleased at having a man from the outside employed as director of their department. If this spirit were to crop out very strongly, and the false ideals continue to prevail when young men of the community would refuse to accept positions eagerly sought by men from the outside, employers of labor in industrial institutions would find themselves in rather an embarrassing position.

The Truth.

The truth is, with the dependence of the south to a large extent on the success of her industrial institutions, and the logic of her own men heading, leading and directing the forces of these institutions, it would seem a very beneficial movement if the positions which can be filled in the larger factories beyond those filled by operatives, could be known of, and the young men of the community have an open door to the advantages within their reach.

In one of Atlanta's factories there are four different departments, which require men of education and training to head them, and there have been no applications for these positions from Atlanta, though not one of the positions pays less than $2,000 a week. A question whether many offices of any kind in Atlanta pay at that rate of wage; many young professional men fail after many years to show the sprinkling of the rich, and very few commercial institutions have young men drawing those salaries.

It is rather amazing to hear that these ideals of a traditional nature could prevail in the twentieth century spirit of the men of the industrial south—the south now in her most constructive spirit—and that they do not call among women wage-earners. The same institution which offers much to the trained young man makes a similar offer to women who have had training along special lines, long false ideals hamper the careers of many young women.

The Woman's Mistake.

A clergyman presiding over a faithful flock in a small town in north Georgia wrote a personal letter to the president of an Atlanta factory in the interest of two young girls who desired to go to the city for employment. They were good, well-reared girls, and their work from the start was satisfactory. Before they were in the institution six months one was making $20 a week, the other $18. Their wage they were told, would increase with their efficiency, but at the end of a year they failed to appear one Monday morning at the factory. Inquiry proved they had left the factory and found employment in a department store, starting with $8 a week. The case was investigated, as the head of the factory desired to make a report to his friend, the clergyman, who had asked his interest in the girls. He found that the girls believed that working in the department store, though for less wage and with surroundings less comfortable, their position as wage-earners was more dignified than when they were in the employ of the factory.

It would be interesting to know just how the fine distinction is made which places the retail institution which sells the wares so far above in dignity the institution which manufactures the wares.

Dignity of Industries.

It is a good time now for the south to have a clear understanding of just what her resources are; what her responsibility of development is, and how far in this development her boys and girls are factors. What positions are open to them in their own institutions? What are their chances therein, and how are they being trained to meet their responsibilities? Too much has been said on the outside generally discrediting the industrial institution or factory; its mode of operation and direction. People are too ready to "class" the factory operative, and to question the dignity of labor therein. If it is snobbishness that is leading the boy and young man of the community to hesitate about occupation in the industrial institution, then the sooner his viewpoint is changed the better. Through him, in direction of operatives less trained than he, but of his own country and community, he could become and is the logical one to raise the dignity of industrial labor and to begin the upbuilding and encouragement of that large element of our population whose improvement and increased efficiency would lead directly to a new life in the industrial south. There is a great deal to be done before we can see the change, but now is the time to begin. We need better legislation, better enforcement of the laws we have in relation to our institutions. Every agency should be put to work for better trained people who could earn better wage. Who can better bring on this evolution than the young men of the community upon the efficiency and achievement of whom the community and state and section depend for present and future prosperity?

May Cool Ardor of Outlaws.

(From The Brownsville Herald.)

The coming of a thousand more troops to the lower border, while perhaps not altogether necessary at present, will nevertheless tend to increase the feeling of security throughout this section, which has been considerably shaken in some of the outlying districts by the recent outbreak of outlawry. As The Herald has said previously, the soldiers may as well be here as at Texas City or Fort Sam Houston, and no doubt their arrival will go a great way towards cooling ardor of those adventurous Mexicans who thought they were called upon to take the entire lower tier of the United States in order to form a new republic.

Song of the People

By FRANK L. STANTO.

I.

THE world is feelin' the changes, the People are thinkin' hard,
An' there ain't enough o' the kings now to make up a corporal's guard;
The clock o' Time is tellin'—however the pendulum swings,
An' the song o' the People's swellin' over the courts of kings.

II.

ONCE the king's courts were holy, an' the People, with grief an' moan
Came with their cruel crosses to kiss the steps o' the throne;
World's gold for the king was shinin', the crown had many a star
No wonder the darkness wrapped 'em—they followed the kings so far!

III.

BUT it's just so much o' the shadows—so much o' the crowdin' Night,
An' the People hear God sayin'—once more: "Let there be Light!"
An' they rise from the long-time kneelin'—up from the humble sod,
An' shout, in the dawn's revealin': "It's Light, by the grace o' God!"

IV.

O THAT'S the voice o' the People! It rises an' it rings,
An' the woman with the babe at breast the song o' the Mornin' sings;
Joy in the song o' the harvest, with the war-clouds rolled away
An' Man, as the good God made him, God's king o' the new-made Day.

V.

O THE world is feelin' the changes, an' I joy to see the dawn;—
You'd almost think that the angels were cheerin' the People on!
For they see the light in the darkness: Life's in the trampled clod,
An' if God be with the People, they'll stand in the strength of God.

The Holland Letter

It does not appear to be a very large plant which Charles W. Schwab, if reports from Cape May are correct, contemplates building along the ocean front or Delaware bay front. For if it is to cost only $30,000 that sum will be regarded as a mere trifle in comparison with some of the other investments Mr. Schwab has found it expedient to make whereby the manufacturing facilities of his Bethlehem plant can be improved. Still it is in line with some things which other great industries that are now occupied with war orders have undertaken.

The great arms company which is located at New Haven, Conn., which is a private corporation, has been busily engaged not only in the manufacture of rifles in great amounts, but also in substantially doubling the capacity of the great plant. When the late Governor Winchester abandoned the manufacture of shirts—a business in which he amassed a considerable fortune—and determined to undertake the manufacture of the rifle which bears his name, he made choice of a level tract of land far out in the outskirts of New Haven, remote from the buildings and yet convenient to the tracks of one of the New Haven Railroad company's subsidiary lines. He was persuaded that while a residential colony might be built up around his works, nevertheless it was too remote from the business and residential section of New Haven to make it possible that there would be any contact by them with these great manufacturing plants. Governor Winchester was a wise man in many things, but he was not farseeing enough to realize what the building of a plant of that kind meant to New Haven. That city has grown up to the Winchester plant. He did not foresee enough to witness the stupendous growth of the organization which he created. Since the European war began the corporation has found it necessary not merely to double the capacity of its plant, already very large, but also to construct a great storage warehouse on the shore of New Haven bay, with a long pier to the channel, to facilitate the loading upon steamers of the arms and munitions of war manufactured by the plant, which is located five miles distant.

Existing Plant at Bridgeport.

In Bridgeport it has been found necessary greatly to enlarge plants for industries now occupied with the manufacture of various munitions of war.

The Nitro-Bement-Pond company, one of the great American industries whose output is tools and machinery, has a subsidiary company at Hartford, the Pratt & Whitney company. When the war began in Europe this Hartford company was busily occupied in the manufacture of machinery and equipment designed for the national arsenal in Australia and also for the great Chinese arsenal. With the inflow of orders for machinery of the kind used in manufacturing munitions of war, the company was compelled to take head of its emergency. It could not accept orders of this kind unless its Hartford plant was enlarged. It happened that an adjoining plant, that of the Pope Manufacturing company, was in the receiver's hands and an order of court was obtained whereby the receiver was permitted to add this plant to the Nitro-Bement-Pond company. It has been occupied to its capacity since it was bought by this company.

Occasionally criticism has been voiced, associated with the enlargement of plants by industries which have received war orders, because these plants will be found useless after war orders have been executed. Criticism of this kind does not apply to Charles M. Schwab or to the manufacturers of rifles or tools or machine tools and the evils, within themselves, that the people machinery because the enlargement of their plants is in line with business which occupied them before the war began. This is especially true of the great powder manufacturing companies.

Powder Making at City Point.

It is inevitable that there should be some sentimental and traditional interest aroused by the fact that the great powder manufacturing corporation whose headquarters are at Wilmington, Del., is now constructing at City Point, Va., one of the largest powder manufacturing plants of the world. Powder played an important part in the history of City Point as that was written in the years 1864-1865. There General Grant established his headquarters after he had advanced by the flank from the Rappahannock almost to the outskirts of Richmond. Thence the great advance began in the spring of 1865 was made. There in enormous quantities was brought by powder ships and landed at City Point. Now the Du Pont de Nemours company is constructing a powder manufacturing plant near General Grant's headquarters. The plant is in convenient reach of deep water, and when completed it will occupy 1,200 acres. What until this time was rich farm land along the James river is hereafter to be a great powder plant. The plant is to be protected and safeguarded in every conceivable way. A barbed wire barricade ten feet high will surround the plant. The undertaking has converted a little station on the Norfolk and Western railroad, where almost slumbered a population of less than 500, into a considerable city of a population of 17,000. It is a cosmopolitan city, since the workmen representing laborers who not long ago were peasants in Italy, Greece and Poland. The magnitude of this undertaking is shown by the fact that upon the pay roll are some 12,000 employees.

The construction of this powder and high explosive plant does not represent merely facilities for meeting the demands of the belligerent nations for powder and explosives. The industry will be continued at this place after the European war is ended. If the present temper of the American people is continued the corporation will be busily occupied in providing the United States with ample war material. It will make it impossible to repeat the experience which President McKinley was compelled to face on the eve of our war with Spain, for he was told by army officers that there was not powder enough in the fortresses along the Atlantic coast for more than one round of cannon service.

A considerable part of the money received from belligerent nations for war orders will be invested in increased plants. One American industry was paid a bonus of some $300,000 after it bound itself to deliver certain war munitions within a very short time. This bonus is now represented by an increase of the plant, the increase itself being spoken of as almost a gift to the company.

Commends Editorial On "Simplifying Law"

Editor Constitution: I am glad to see your editorial of the 26th on "Simplifying the Law."

It is, indeed, a hopeful sign when such men as Senator Root severely arraign his own profession where it uses means through the courts to unnecessarily delay or in any way pervert justice.

The courts are maintained at the expense of the people for the protection of their just interests.

It was not intended that smart, shrewd, conscienceless lawyers should use the courts to subserve purposes just the reverse of what people maintain them for.

It is true that we have lawyers as high toned and honorable as men of any other calling or profession, but is there any doubt that we have lawyers who are dissatisfied with only their own profession, but who succeed in so perverting justice that they shake the confidence of good and honest men in the courts themselves.

Respect and Honor Courts.

Far be it from me to hold our courts in contempt. It is my desire to respect and honor them, but what is more contemptible than the lawyer who, by the exercise, not to obtain the just interests of his client, but to win an unfair advantage for him, regardless of justice, and even against justice, if he can put money in his own pocket by the transaction.

The people are told to be patient and let the law take its course, and I think this is right; but are these lawyers letting the law take its course? Are they not standing in the way of the law taking its proper course and perverting justice, which the people are depending on the courts, and have the right to depend on the courts, to give?

All good, honest men want to respect our courts and are patient with refined like errors that might be made (for our judges and jurors are human like ourselves), but the blood of many an honest man is made to boil with righteous indignation at the use, or rather misuse, disreputable lawyers are allowed to make of the courts, and the palpable perversions of justice they succeed in bringing about.

It is not my desire to be unfair to the legal profession, but it seems to me that it is high time for all honest men of every class, including the honest men of the legal profession, to be up in arms against that portion of the profession who undertake, through the courts, to keep the law from taking its proper course.

Mob Law Hurts State.

This article is not intended in any way to uphold parties who, not satisfied with the courts' decisions, take the law in their own hands, for I am opposed to mob or lynch law. All honest men should, in my opinion, be opposed to lynch law. It is a stain on the good name of our state, and every citizen of our state is hurt by it, for it puts us in disrepute both in and out of the country.

It hardly looks fair to me, though, to put all the blame on those men outside the courts who take the law in their own hands, men who do their work in the dark and cannot be found, yet allow lawyers, who are licensed to practice, to openly in the courts take the law in their own hands, delay the work of the courts and use the courts themselves to pervert justice, and this be allowed to pass unnoticed and unpunished.

It is not time for honest men who care for their own honor and the honor of their state to try and devise ways to stop this crying shame on our people and on our courts; in fact, is not time that honest men of every calling should more earnestly undertake to have our courthouses stand as temples of justice in fact, and not only in name; to have our courts entirely free from any of the evils, within themselves, that the people expect them to correct in others; to have them such places as honest men can always hold in reverence and that evil doers must always hold in awe?

Whiskers in Kentucky.

(From The Bowling Green Messenger.)

The late Governor Proctor Knott, who knew more different things and knew them better than anybody, once said to the writer that the fashion of wearing a beard was the first direct outgrowth of the American war. The Kentucky boys went down clean shaven. At home there was always a negro servant to act as barber. Down in the land of cotton and sunshine there were no such advantages and the young Kentuckians allowed their beards to sprout. When the war was over they started the style, of course, after having the beard trimmed into comely shape, and thus the practice lasted for many years.

The first governor of Kentucky to wear a beard was Lazarus W. Powell (1851-55), and while he was not a Mexican soldier, he caught the habit. The first president of the United States to wear a beard was Abraham Lincoln. Some of his pictures show him clean shaven, but his latter pictures always showed "wind-teasers" on his face.

Marist Scholarship.

A vacancy in the Marist College scholarship given the Atlanta Chapter U. D. C. Applicants will apply at once to the chairman, Mrs. W. S. Coleman, Marlboro apartments.

House Party.

One of the pleasant events of the week has been a house party at the country home of Miss Frances Sholar, at Goodwin's, on Peachtree road. The house is an old one, at one time being occupied by General Sherman on his march to the sea. Each night was given over to a moonlight porch party, the veranda being made a Japanese garden, with lanterns and wisteria. Marshmallows were toasted over a campfire, and a Victrola added the finishing touch of music to the occasion. Swimming at Silver lake and Brookhaven made the daylight hours pass pleasantly. Visitors to the camp were treated to an old-fashioned watermelon cutting. They were Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Shelor, William and Grover Shelor, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Retsch, Miss Lillian Retsch, Mr. F. M. Grogan, Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Call and Miss Cornelia Orr.

Those of the party were Misses Mildred and Lucile Parr, Annie and Marguerite Retsch, Margaret and Louise Gay, Lula Belle Grogan, Ruth Hutchinson, Florence Dallas, and Frances Shelor; Messrs. Clinton Hutchinson, Sterling Melvin, Gus Bass, Wilson Dallas, Donald McIver and Walter A. Dumas. The efficient chaperons were Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Dooley.

Week-End at the Clubs Assembles Social World

The dinner-dance at the Piedmont Driving club last night assembled more than one hundred guests, and was one of the brightest events of the week.

Miss Dorothy Arkwright entertained for her guest, Miss Katherine Bunn, of Cedartown the party completed by Messrs. Edwin Broyles, Willard McBurney and Edwin McCarty.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry DeGive had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Adair, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gregg, Dr. and Mrs. Atchison.

Mr. John Ashley Jones entertained in compliment to Mrs. Sarah Grant, of New Orleans, who is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Harmon entertained in compliment to Captain and Mrs. Jack Hayes, who leave this week for Honolulu.

Others entertaining were Dr. J. D. Osborne, Mr. and Mrs. Preston Arkwright, Judge and Mrs. Walter Colquitt, Mr. J. H. Nunnally, Mr. and Mrs. Sam C. Porter, Mr. Prince Webster, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Collier, Mr. and Mrs. Gus T. Dodd, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Hall, Mrs. A. F. Fitz Simons, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Kiser, Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Slaughter.

At East Lake.

At East Lake several hundred members enjoyed the outdoor sports during the afternoon, and assembled on the porches and in the spacious lobby and dining room for dinner and dancing.

At Druid Hills.

At Druid Hills golf club, the golf players were out in the afternoon, and most of them remained for the tea-dance, and were joined by many other parties.

Walton-Mathews.

Dr. and Mrs. Fletcher Walton, of Griffin, announce the marriage of their daughter, Helen, to Mr. C. B. Mathews, the marriage taking place at Cartiella, Ga., June 30. Dr. Walton is the presiding elder of the Griffin district, North Georgia conference. Mr. Mathews is principal of the Griffin high school.

W. C. T. U.'s Silver Tea.

The Atlanta Frances Willard Woman's Christian Temperance Union believes that social meetings will bring members into closer touch with each other, and they will also meet the ladies in the neighborhood of the home of the hostess. Last Thursday afternoon a large number assembled in the home of Mrs. M. E. Ingraham, 14 East Alexander street. Mrs. Ingraham had previously arranged a splendid program for the occasion, also delightful refreshments. Both were thoroughly enjoyed by the women and children. After a brief season of songs, scripture reading and prayer, according to W. C. T. U. usage, Mrs. MacMillain sang "My Rosary." Mrs. Reeves, who is a winner of a silver and a gold W. C. T. U. medal, recited "College Oil Cans." Mrs. Ingraham, representing two colored club women, rendered in a most fetching manner a monologue entitled "The Passersby." Mrs. Saul made a few remarks along the line of rescue work.

A report was made of the W. C. T. U.'s visit to the colored Baptist church last Sunday, and the hope was expressed that a union might be organized among the colored people in that neighborhood, as the pastor is in thorough sympathy with the work. The president, Mrs. McLendon, pinned the white bow on the beautiful little granddaughter of Mrs. Ingraham. Master George MacMillain recited a charming selection. The white bow was also pinned on him and on his younger brother and Miss Carter; all of these children will become members of the Loyal Temperance Legion which will be organized with Mrs. MacMillain as leader. Mrs. Ingraham's home was beautifully decorated for the occasion with white ribbon bows and beautiful sunflowers, because the sunflower is the selection of the National American Woman Suffrage association. The W. C. T. U. and suffrage are twin sisters in the fight against the liquor traffic. Cards were distributed to the members to get the names of three voters on each to be mailed to Governor Harris, asking him to include prohibition legislation in his call for an extra session. The next social meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. J. A. Adkins, who is the recording secretary of the Atlanta Frances Willard Union. She invited everybody and hopes her large house will be filled.

Birthday Party.

The eighty-fourth birthday of Mrs. Rufus L. Moss, Sr., was very happily celebrated on August 27, in the Tallulah Falls home, "Pine Terrace." The occasion brought together a little assemblage of Georgia and Alabama friends who are still lingering in the mountains.

Those present were: Mrs. O. H. Jones, Mrs. Moss' only sister, and Miss Jones, Mrs. John Miller and Mrs. Milam, of Atlanta; Mrs. James R. Luckie and Miss Luckie, of Birmingham; Mrs. Rittenhouse, Moore, of Mobile; Mrs. Edward Groover, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mrs. Fenn, of New Orleans; Mrs. Murry Lamar Fuller, of Macon; Mrs. H. N. Snead and Mrs. R. S. Cleghorn, of Savannah; Miss Julia Moss, Mrs. F. S. Morton, Mrs. McGregor, Mrs. Holliday and Mrs. Barrett, of Athens; Miss Rembert, Miss Sarah White and Miss Athea Stone, of Tallulah Falls.

Mrs. Moss adorns her four score and four years with the grace and sweetness of mature Christian womanhood.

Children and grandchildren were present and many messages and tokens from far and near added gladness to the day.

She, with her daughter, Miss Lily Moss, left on the afternoon train for an added celebration of the day with Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Bryan in their lovely mountain home "Rabuncroft" in the Rabun Gap.

For Miss Daniell.

Miss Dorothy Ellis, of St. Charles avenue, entertained a few of her friends Thursday afternoon for Miss Imogene Daniell, of Turin, Ga., who is the guest of Miss Ellen Magnus Gordon.

Heart-dice was played, high score being made by Miss Clarice Stewart, Miss Ruth Jolly winning the consolation.

Those present were Misses Imogene Daniel, Ellen Magnus Gordon, Ruth Jolly, Delia Stone, Clarice Stewart, Georgia May Hunt, Ducsella Roberts, Mary Long Callaway, Sara Whitaker, Laura Haynes Waitt, Donna Stone and Dorothy Ellis.

For Mrs. Richmond.

Mrs. Arnold Broyles entertained at the tea-dance at Druid Hills Golf club yesterday afternoon in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Richmond, of New Orleans, the guest of Mrs. W. C. Jarnagin.

College Park Play Grounds.

The College Park playgrounds will close Tuesday, August 29, with a rally, at which the mayor and council will be the guests of the children and their mothers. Match games of all kinds will be played and the prizes delivered by Mayor Longino. After the various contests the mothers will take charge and lunch will be served, the mayor and council being the honor guests. All interested in playground work are invited to the morning exercises, beginning at 9 o'clock.

Certified Holstein Cow's Milk for Family Use
Probably you have heard that Holstein Milk is the only cows' milk physicians consider suitable for infant feeding, but do you realize it is the very best milk for every member of your family?
Babies thrive on Holstein Milk because it is more digestible than ordinary milk. That's reason enough for everyone to use it for its family use.
In Holstein Milk the moderate amount of butterfat is in the form of minute globules less than half the size of those in ordinary milk. These small, even globules yield rapidly to the action of the digestive fluids and are easily absorbed, while the fat globules in ordinary milk form large, tough curds that resist digestion.
Holstein are the healthiest of cattle. Their milk has the strongly vitalizing quality that children and the aged especially need. Use it freely and there will be less sickness in your home.
A visit to our farm will give you confidence in our methods of handling milk.—Certified by Fulton County Medical Association.

Will Aeroplane Kill the Deadly Tuberculosis Germ?

Fifteen Minutes at High Altitude New Cure for Ills

AEROPLANES, long looked upon by military experts as the greatest destroyer of lives known to man, now promise to become the greatest aid to health and longevity.

Dispatches from Berlin assert that aviation is looked upon as an almost certain medium for the cure of the most dreaded of human ills—tuberculosis. Moreover, it is expected that many other diseases of germ origin that hitherto have defied the efforts of medical science will now be placed upon the list of curable ailments.

The new hope of medicine, briefly, lies in the knowledge that direct rays of the sun will kill any germ. The aeroplane, as now used in experiments in Germany, carries the patient up above the clouds to an altitude where the air is free from moisture and dust and the rays of the sun are direct.

Although details of the experiments now in progress are meager because of the surplus of war news that crowds the cables, it is known that Dr. Hugo Bruenstein of Berlin is making numerous experiments in connection with aviation as a cure for disease, especially tuberculosis.

In a statement attributed to the Berlin physician it is asserted that but fifteen minutes' exposure to the rays of the sun at a certain altitude is necessary to kill every germ in the body of a man.

Rays of the sun long have been used as an aid to the cure of all germ diseases. All of the big tuberculosis hospitals throughout the country now are using the sun as their chief medicine. But the slanting rays, together with the moisture and dust in the air, combine to prevent the light from reaching its greatest efficiency.

It was during military experiments in Berlin that the idea of using the aeroplane to conserve rather than destroy human life first was conceived. Dr. Bruenstein began experiments at once and it is declared that they have opened up the most promising field for work among the tubercular known to medical science.

American medical men were reticent in discussing the subject because of the general lack of information. Dr. Theodore B. Sachs of the Municipal Tuberculosis Institute of Chicago, and recognized as an expert on the subject, said that the chief advantage of the new method lay in the fact that the patient would be carried up to a point where the rays of the sun were more direct than those that ordinarily were played upon the germ-ridden parts.

"The greatest obstacle to a general use of this plan, to my notion, lies in the fact that aviation hasn't reached a sufficiently advanced stage to make it safe to carry the sick into the air," said Dr. Sachs. "Until aerial navigation is safer a physician would hardly feel justified in sending a sick man up into the clouds to face dangers as great, if not greater, than those attending his physical ailment.

"There is no doubt, however, that the rays of the sun have great curative power in the treatment of tuberculosis, and they now are being used in the great hospitals for the treatment of the tubercular in Colorado and the West.

Wireless System Saves 500,000 Lives in Year—

FRESH evidence of the value of the wireless as a saver of lives has been found during the disasters and threats of disasters following in the wake of the European war.

Repeatedly the Atlantic Ocean has been combed by wireless in the sending of warnings to threatened passenger ships. Although no figures are at hand, a wireless operator just has estimated that not fewer than 500,000 lives that would have been lost before the invention of the Marconi instrument have been saved by it since the beginning of the present war.

The most dramatic of the war incidents having to do with wireless operation followed the attack on J. P. Morgan by Erich Muenter.

A letter written by Muenter to his wife induced the suspicion that he had planned to destroy ships. One paragraph read as follows:

"A steamer leaving New York for Liverpool should sink, God willing, on 7th. It is the Philadelphia or the Saxony (Saxonia), but I am not sure, as these left on the 2d or 3d."

Immediately after this revelation had been communicated to officials in Washington a warning was flashed by wireless. The Minnehaha was only a few days out of New York harbor, bound for London, when the message was received. Captain Claret, the commander of the vessel, ordered the small boats swung out so that they could be ready for use in the event that the explosion occurred. The ship's fire hose was also prepared for an emergency and a search of the cargo was begun. The search was still under way late in the afternoon, the explosion occurring while the members of the crew were trying to make sure that there were no bombs aboard.

The explosion shot off a hatch cover, carrying two sailors into the air with it. One of the men was slightly injured. Then the fire was discovered, the flames spreading so rapidly that it was decided to point the prow of the Minnehaha toward Halifax. She reached that port on July 9.

The Saxonia of the Cunard Line and the Philadelphia of the American Line sent prompt answers of reassurance by Marconi wireless in response to the message of warning.

A High and Dry Dropper Scheme

THE holder (figure 1) is an eyebolt with pointed screw, which is screwed into the cork as shown in figure 2. The medicine dropper is then placed in position shown.

With eyebolts of varying sizes the idea can be applied to many household uses, such as holding tooth brushes, button hooks, scissors, tools, etc.

Your Wife Can Make This Hat

THE accompanying sketch shows how an ordinary suit box can be utilized to give protection against sun or rain and leave the hands free. This is particularly adaptable to campers and fishermen.

It will provide protection against sun, but its use is indicated more in preventing rain from getting on spectacles (for those who have to wear glasses), getting on the pipe or cigar, etc., while at the same time leaving the hands free to use the rod.

By varnishing or shellacing the box its life will be greatly prolonged.—[Contributed by P. F. Q.

Do You Wish Brilliant Expression?

THE diamond beauty spot, which now may sparkle from the cheek, throat or shoulder of anybody who can afford the luxury, is the latest contribution of science to the accessories of milady of fashion.

An eastern inventor has patented a method of setting and affixing to the skin a diamond or brilliant in such a manner that it will remain securely in place as long as desired, but may be removed at will.

This scintillating mark of beauty is expected to take the place of the grotesquely shaped animals of court plaster that have had a brief period of popularity. The stones usually are set in black enamel, in star or circular designs, then are faced with a rough bit of cloth that will take up an especially prepared paste with which it is attached to the skin of the wearer. The advantage of the paste is that it is sufficiently adhesive to make the loss of a valuable jewel extremely unlikely, but may be removed with the aid of a moist cloth with little difficulty.

Why It Is Called Death Valley

ONLY one man ever spent more than a day in Death Valley and lived to tell the tale. That man is H. W. Manton of Rhyolite, Cal. For more than a week he was lost in the heart of the valley, tramping over eighty miles of sand so hot that it burned through his heavy boots.

His tongue was swollen to such a size that his mouth could no longer contain it, and his eyelids were cracked open. Finally he staggered up to Cub Lee's Furnace Creek ranch more dead than alive. At first he could not drink. The touch of water was as fire to his parched lips and tongue. Ranchmen had to force the water into his mouth through a straw.

Why cannot human beings live in Death Valley?

According to records of the California mining bureau, men have gone into the valley with plenty of water, but died of thirst—the arid air sapping the moisture from their bodies faster than they could supply it. In summer the air is kiln-arid until it contains but 1 per cent of humidity, and well shaded thermometers soar to 135 degrees Fahrenheit.

Bricks Now Made Without Clay

BRICKS without clay of an Illinois works open up a new industrial field. In this case the chief material is the tailings from coal mines, but it is claimed that the process is adapted for utilizing siliceous wastes of all kinds, thus providing a source of building material to localities having no clay. The coarse siliceous substance is brought into chemical combination with a binder of lower fusing point, consisting of suitable proportions of pulverized silica, alumina, potassium or sodium. The proper mixture is forced into molds under high pressure.

The new process, it is claimed, will do much toward keeping down the high cost of living. As timber becomes more scarce its price has increased and in many localities builders have found it cheaper to buy brick, even though forced to pay for a long freight haul.

When it was first announced that bricks were to be made of coal many people laughed at the thought of using such material in fireproof construction. As a matter of fact, no part of the material used is combustible after being treated in the new process. It is said that the cost of the new material may be lower than brick even in territory near clay pits.

ALTHOUGH the year 1915, in the automobile business sense, has been the most wonderful in the history of the industry, next year promises to eclipse it entirely. The manufacturing plans of all the large companies have been completed, orders for parts and accessories have been placed and a fair estimate can now be made of the number of new cars to be turned out next season. In this compilation twenty companies are listed under letters of the alphabet separately, the remainder being grouped in their entirety.

The figures are based on knowledge of parts and materials ordered, and not on the "estimates" given by the companies themselves. A, 500,000; B, 100,000; C, 80,000; D, 75,000; E, 60,000; F, 40,000; G, H, I, J, K, 25,000 each; L, M, N, O, 20,000 each; P, Q, R, S, T, 10,000 each; the remaining eighty odd companies turning out less than 75,000 cars together. The total number for 1916, therefore, will be in excess of 1,000,000 new cars!

New Scientific Facts Developed by War

Puncture Cure for Tires

A TIRE pump that not only pumps up any tire within a few minutes but that keeps the tire at that pressure regardless of punctures is a British invention. The pump can be attached to the hub of the wheel in less than a minute by any person. It works on the rotary pump principle, each revolution of the wheel, while running the car, driving air into the tire, and so effective has this device shown itself during a recent official test by the Royal Automobile Club of Great Britain that a tire, deliberately punctured in five places, was kept at full pressure as long as the car was kept running.

The device appears to have solved the roadside repair problem. No car need stop because of a puncture if fitted with one of these pumps, as it can be run with ease and without danger to the nearest garage or repair shop.

Armored Car Like Turtle.

A NOVEL type of armored motor car has been designed by a resident of Lowell, Mass., which contains some very original ideas as to protection from rifle and gun fire. The car is shaped exactly like a turtle, the upper and lower shell being joined at a distance of about sixteen inches above the ground.

The wheels are almost entirely covered by the armor. The latter is composed of steel shells, curved to represent a turtle's back, the inventor claiming that such construction renders the persons in the car immune from rifle and machine gun fire, as the bullets are deflected into the air. Loopholes for firing, a periscope for steering, emergency doors in the rear and on both sides, a powerful motor under the driver's seat and a quick-firing gun mounted on a revolving base—these are all parts of the design.

For Bayonet Practice

ENGLISH recruits are being taught how to skillfully use the bayonet by means of a mechanical device consisting of a wooden frame, from which is suspended a wire on which several thickly woven straw balls are threaded. These balls may be dropped in rapid succession by means of a spring. As each ball falls the soldier tries to pierce it with a bayonet, working hastily so as to stab each one in turn. Besides training the fighting man to use the weapon quickly and accurately, this exercise also develops his wrist muscles.

Grain Established Weight Measure

THE grain, as a measure of weight, has its name from being originally the weight of a grain of wheat. A statute passed in England in 1266 ordained that thirty-two grains of wheat, taken from the middle of the ear and well dried, should make a pennyweight, twenty of which should make an ounce, while twelve ounces were to make a pound.

The pound, therefore, consisted then of 7,680 grains.

Dyers Depressed By Some Colors

THE word "blues," a mental depression that makes the acquaintance of most of us at some time or another, is supposed to have originated from the well-authorized belief that persons who work in indigo dyeing establishments are subject to melancholy.

Paracelsus, an author of the sixteenth century, asserts that blue dyes are injurious to the health and spirits. Another accredited origin of the word derives it from the German blei, or lead, since lead from its weight and resemblance to darkened skies has always been held to typify melancholy.

DRUG USERS

Rich or Poor

In a few days it will be an appalling question with the drug "addict," rich or poor, as to what to do for their accustomed drug, because the government is determined that the illegal selling and prescribing of narcotic drugs shall be stopped and has induced the city and county authorities to open the Detention Camp for the treatment of the extremely poor who are not able to pay for treatment. You understand the above plan will be carried into effect by the United States government in other cities of Georgia as well as in other parts of the country.

The establishment of such institutions will relieve the physician, in the first place, from having to prescribe to save life, and the druggist from having to fill questionable prescriptions. The answer to all such appeals will be "go and get cured, if able to pay for it, and if not, go to the Detention Camp." This will be the only safe answer by these two classes of professional men, because the Government will consider the thing "fixed" for all classes, both rich and poor.

What will those who are able to pay have to do? They will have to look around for a treatment, and have to pay for it. What is wise for such people to do? First of all investigate the merits of the treatments offered and then the reliability of the people offering them. The Modern "Neal Way" invites the closest scrutiny as to its merits and as to the men who are operating it.

The treatment of the morphine habit by the gradual reduction method means a period of weeks of the most agonizing form of slow torture that lies within the power of man to inflict upon his fellows; while, upon the other hand, the sudden withdrawal of so powerful a narcotic has always associated with it, aside from the very unpleasant nervous and mental manifestations, the danger of sudden collapse, and if collapse is survived, fifty per cent will lose the power of assimilation, then a slow death begins. The body becomes the easy prey to all kinds of diseases.

The Neal Treatment acts as an "ANTIDOTE" for drug poisons, drives them out of the system quickly, painlessly and permanently overcomes the diseased condition, and soon restores normal, mental and physical conditions, leaving the patient in perfect health, fully able to nourish himself.

The secret of the great world-wide success of the "Neal Way" is that it does MORE for drug users in a FEW days time, than can be done by the "old way" in several WEEKS. It effects a PERMANENT cure quicker, easier and at less expense than the TEMPORARY relief of mineral springs and baths and PREVENTS High-Class men and women from becoming "wrecks," and RESCUES those considered "almost beyond all earthly help."

For full information regarding the "Neal Way," call or address the Atlanta Neal Institute (successor Georgia Keeley Institute), 225 Woodward Ave. Phone Main 3795. Dr. J. H. Conway, for more than 10 years, Medical Director of the Keeley physician in charge.

VIOLATED THE LAW BY STOPPING CARS

So Karl Brittain Is Informed by Company Official—Mayson Now Preparing Answer to Injunction.

Karl Brittain, assistant chief of construction of the city of Atlanta, was considerably perturbed Saturday when he learned through an official of the Georgia Railway and Power company that the penalty for barricading a street car track and preventing the passage of its cars is an offense the penalty for which is four years in the state penitentiary.

Mr. Brittain had fences built Thursday on Grant street to prevent the passage of the trolley cars, after the company had refused to comply with an ordinance requiring them to lay concrete under their tracks.

The company secured a temporary restraining order against the city interfering with the passage of their cars, and the fences have been removed pending the action of the superior court Monday on the petition which asks for a permanent injunction against the city.

Preparing City's Answer.

City Attorney James L. Mayson and Mr. Brittain are preparing an answer on the part of the city to be filed at 10 o'clock Monday morning.

"I have been with the city of Atlanta eight years and have had considerable experience in road building," said Mr. Brittain Saturday. "I would no doubt make a good worker for the grand jury commonwealth of Georgia if sent up. No matter what county my prospective gang was assigned to, I could give them some good service."

Mr. Brittain said that he was acting under the direction of the city attorney when he ordered the street fenced in and was ignorant of the law in the case. He says, however, that he felt he was fully aware of the law as regarded the street railway company, and as a representative of the city sought to enforce it.

The company in its petition for a permanent injunction against the city claims to have sustained loss in two days of $2,000 as a result of the closing of two blocks of Grant street.

It was brought out in the street railway company would put up the argument that the passage of the ordinance directing the wood block paving on Grant street antedated the passage of the concrete ordinance, and that under those conditions they should not be required to conform to an ordinance which was not in existence when they agreed to lay a new track foundation on Grant street.

Defense of Company.

Their contention in this regard is true in that the ordinance to pave Grant street was passed by general council on May 11, and the concrete ordinance was not passed until May 17. It was approved by the mayor on May 21.

Both the Gordon street work and the Ponce de Leon avenue job were passed subsequent to the passage of the "concrete ordinance."

City Attorney Mayson declared Saturday that the ordinance in question is for public safety and is, therefore, under police regulation, and that no matter whether it was passed prior to or later than the ordinance to pave Grant street, it must be complied with by the street railway company.

If the street railway company violates the "concrete ordinance" and a conviction follows the city code fixes a penalty of $200 for each offense.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT REPLIES TO GARRISON

Oyster Bay, N. H., August 28.—Theodore Roosevelt tonight issued another long statement replying to Secretary of War Garrison in the controversy over the colonel's Plattsburg speech. He took issue with the secretary on the administration's attitude toward Mexico and Haiti, and called attention to what he considers the unpreparedness of the American fleet.

"I point out to him that for nearly two years, in 1913 and 1914, the ships of the navy were never exercised in fleet maneuvering," says the statement. "And, as I am reliably informed, were never exercised in fleet or squadron gunnery. A moderately intelligent child of six knows that the failure for two years to undertake such maneuvers means a literally criminal deterioration in the fleet, and cannot possibly mean anything else.

"The very great falling off in the gunnery that was shown by the results last spring and the early part of the summer are directly due to this culpable misconduct in handling our navy; and it represents unpreparedness of the very worst kind because unpreparedness that takes the shape of letting the weapons that have been made ready utterly deteriorate is even worse than failure to provide new weapons."

ALEXANDER PRAISES GEORGIA DRUG LAWS

Will Be of Great Aid in Campaigns Against Sale of "Dope," He Says.

Any apprehension felt by the anti-opiate campaigners over the inadequacy of laws governing the eradication of the drug habit among the 2,000 addicts in the city was banished Saturday, when United States District Attorney Alexander announced that the Georgia civil and penal codes covered whatever loopholes might be found in the Harrison act. Mr. Alexander also stated that he considered the Georgia laws on excessive dope using better drawn to meet the situation than those of any other state.

"The majority of the physicians and druggists are working with the government heart and soul in remedying the unspeakable conditions, and with the use of the Georgia law, which has been heretofore a dead letter because of lack of evidence, the dope evil is entirely in hand, and I can safely say that there will be no habitual users of the drug living here within the coming year," said Attorney Alexander.

"The Georgia law makes it a misdemeanor for a physician to sell opiates to any other than his regular patients. The government's files we now have the names of all users of drugs and the physicians attending them. We shall keep tab on the amounts prescribed each addict and see that they are consistently treated with the 'tapering off' process. We shall add the names of addicts to a special list as fast as they are cured. If found at any time thereafter a prescription registered here or elsewhere in the state granting dope to such a cured person the government will immediately bring to court the physician issuing the prescription.

Mr. Alexander said that only Saturday there came into his office in company with the prescribing physician a user of dope for four years who had been absolutely cured since April last. The person had commenced the use of opiates in 1881 at the age of 18, while suffering excruciating pains in the legs. The habit had increased until, according to the continuously kept records of the physician, the victim was taking .30 grains a day, after the passage of the Harrison act by the physician, who Mr. Alexander said was not a "dope specialist," undertook to cut down the daily amount of his patient with the idea of an ultimate cure. On April 24 the patient took the last 30 grains. On August 7 the last dose was taken, three-quarters of a grain. Since then the patient at the age of 52 has not taken the slightest amount. The statements of the physician, the patient and Mr. Alexander attest the permanent cure. Mr. Alexander also stated that this instance was only one of many coming before him.

Wins Promotion By Use of Fists And by Gun Play

Shriners Bring Back Story of the J. Frank Meador Who Shot Cigar Clerk and Then Disappeared.

Here is a story of J. Frank Meador —not the Meador who lives in Atlanta now—but the J. Frank Meador that older citizens will remember. Those who used to be the men-about-town around the Kimball house lobby years ago will remember the J. Frank Meador about whom the Shriners, coming back from their trip through the west, have brought this tale, and in the principal character of this story they will doubtless recognize the same dashing, daring, devil-may-care former Atlantan who, a decade ago, for certain good reasons, took up his abode in the west.

Some of the older inhabitants say it was ten years ago, others say it was more, that he happened to become entangled with a clerk behind the cigar stand in the Kimball.

The unfortunate affair revolved around a package of cigarettes, of which the debonnaire Meador was fond, and was brought to an exciting climax with a fusillade of pistol shots that left some of their leaden memento permanent but uncomfortable possession of the cigar vender, who, according to the morning paper, would, and did, survive.

Goes to the West.

The victim of Meador's impulsive marksmanship "pushed matters," so to speak, and the grand jury offered no bill in response to the victor of the Kimball lobby affray. To ease matters, Mr. Meador took a trip west.

Which brings us down to the story brought back by a number of the Shriners who recently left Atlanta for the Shrine convention in Seattle, coming back via San Francisco, where they encountered Ray Knight, the Alabamian who also figured in the news of the past in connection with a railroad investigation in his own state.

Ray Knight had told the Atlantans of how J. Frank Meador had won his promotion into the general supervision of the Charles Butters Mining company, of Nevada, by gun play and heroism, in which he was forced, by dint of circumstances, to play a few unruly gentlemen.

Three years ago—more, perhaps, the story coming back to Atlanta in rather indefinite form—J. Frank Meador had applied for a position with the Charles Butters company, which is situated near Virginia City, the famous "Comstock" of Nevada, and the home of the original "big bonanza." The management gave him a minor connection with the plant, and, shortly, luck began to break for the fugitive Atlantan in the form of a young but healthy mutiny among the miners.

It "peeved" the Atlanta gallant, so the story goes, to sit idly at a desk when there was live-blooded fighting going on a few miles away.

Meador Takes Hand.

The uprising grew more and more serious.

"Here, let me go down there and take a hand in that business," he appealed to the mine heads.

"Go as far as you like, only leave us your home address," they replied.

With a collar, sox and two pistols, he departed for the mining scene.

"Let me take charge of situation."

"Go as far as you like—the situation's all yours," retorted the management.

Meador first proceeded to depose the superintendent of the mines, who was in collusion with the mutineers. This was not accomplished until that official had first been thoroughly whipped with bare fists, and then shot in the shoulder.

Mr. Meador, who danced as well as he fought, had seen fit to stage both the fight and shooting before the startled eyes of the hundred or more revolutionists. When the superintendent had been sent from office to the hospital the ex-Atlantan proceeded to subdue a number of the more forward rebels with a few well-placed bullets and invited the remainder to resume their labors forthwith, using the muzzles of his pistols rather than stationery to issue the invitation.

Meador then remained at the plant just long enough to convince the miners that all the gunmen weren't raised in Nevada and answered a recall to the office in Virginia City, where he was promoted to an office from which he has steadily risen since.

Atlanta Boy Serves Uncle Sam in Haiti As Captain of Corps

E. A. Green, Graduate of Tech, Writes of Service in the Island Republic—Took Possession Without Opposition of Natives.

E. A. Green, former Atlanta boy, but now a captain in the United States marine corps in Port Au Prince, Haiti, elected to see service nearer his native land than with the allies in Europe. In a letter to a brother, C. C. Green, of the Atlanta branch of the Remington Typewriter company, Captain Green relates in an interesting way some of his experiences in the West Indies.

Captain Green is a graduate of Georgia Tech, and shortly after leaving school took his examinations and received his commission in the marine corps. His mother, Mrs. C. W. Green, also makes her home in Atlanta.

"I thought that some incidents connected with my duty here would interest you," writes Captain Green. "The recruiting of the fusiliers very reminds me somewhat of the Fort Gaines guards. You know that when the august captain of that noted organization desired to have a drill he would open the armory, arrest a member of the company, arm him and send him out to arrest other members. In this manner enough members would be gotten together to start the drill."

New President Elected.

Captain Green, writing to his brother on August 12, states that the president of the republic was elected August 11. He says that the president had appointed one of his generals even before he had been made president of the republic and had commenced to make plans for his administration.

"We have collected all the arms and ammunition that we have been able to find," says Captain Green, "and have put them in a secure place, where we can safely guard them. We found in the national palace about 2,000 rifles of every make in use since the invention of the breechloaders, and thousands of rounds of ammunition of every type under the sun. I even saw a few of the old muzzle gun variety."

The writer states that the marine corps has collected thousands of rifles and firearms of every kind which they have dumped into an underground magazine. "We also found about twenty cannon of various types," he states.

Killed Two Natives.

Captain Green says that since the marines have been in Haiti they have had to kill two negroes and wound one. "The two killed were trying to escape after being placed under arrest for rioting," he states.

"We have about thirty prisoners here; one of them, it is asserted, is a cannibal, and the other twenty-nine are either horse thieves or would-be soldiers.

"This is some expedition where we walk right into a country and take possession without any serious opposition from the people. The bank in the city the other day announced that it had taken over the customs of the city of Port Au Prince, and, so far as I have been able to learn, there has been no objection on the part of the native population."

Jacobs' Malt Extract

Delightfully Agreeable Tonic—Nutrient and Digestive Agent

The strengthening, tonic properties of barley malt are well known, and in our preparation its medicinal value is brought to the highest degree, for analysis shows that Jacobs' Malt Extract contains more diastase and nutritious matter than any other. It is also free from the stimulating effect of nearly all others, which makes them undesirable for delicate women and children.

Jacobs' Malt Extract is a nourishing food tonic which quickly builds up a delicate or run-down system. For nursing mothers it is especially desirable, supplying lactic juices, increasing the flow of milk and giving nourishment to both mother and child. It is the ideal tonic for frail women and children, to create appetite and make strength. As a digestive agent, for all dyspeptic troubles, it gives immediate action without objectionable dieting or starving. Splendid tonic for any one in a nervous, weak or run-down condition.

Prepared with or without iron. A bottle, 15c; dozen, $1.50; cask of ten dozen, $12.50.

The Look of Youth

It depends more upon the condition of the hair than upon the features of a woman's face. That is why any woman can keep young looking, because, by a little attention to the condition of her hair, thin, faded or gray, it can be restored to its natural color and beautiful softness and luster with Robinnaire Hair Dye.

This wonderful preparation keeps the hair in a beautiful condition, restores the original color to faded or gray hair, and does not stain the scalp or make the hair sticky. Prepared for light, medium and dark brown and black hair.

For sale by druggists and toilet goods departments, 75c. If you cannot obtain it, sent by parcel post, 90c.

If you will give us the name of the druggist who cannot supply you, we will send you FREE samples of the world-renowned Robinnaire Face Powder. At all Jacobs' stores.

KELLY'S FAREWELL GAME A VICTORY

But the Southpaw Has to Hurl Brilliantly—Milton Reed Makes His Debut at Shortstop.

By Dick Jemison.

Herbert Kelly bade farewell to Atlanta fandom yesterday by pitching the Crackers to victory over the Nashville Vols in a hectic pitchers' battle with Jack Frost, coming out on the large end of a 2 to 1 count.

The game was typical of all Kelly games. The southpaw played like a demon and the Crackers refused to make hits when hits counted runs. It was hardly that bad on Saturday, however. The Crackers tried and tried hard, but the breaks in the game seemed to go against them in the early innings, everything turning in favor of the Vols.

Kelly held the Vols to five hits and deserved a shut-out game, but Paulet hit one on the handle and dropped it safely in the outfield in the fourth inning, tying up the ball game, the Crackers winning it in the eighth.

To Bill Rumler belongs a lion's share of the credit for the victory. It was crippled big Bill that slammed the pinch hit that kept Kelly's efforts from going to waste as they have been going in the majority of the games he has pitched this season.

Bill was on the coaching lines, but with house slippers on, nursing a badly swollen toe that he hurt in Friday's game, Moran was on second and Kauffman on first and one out and Matthews was walking to the bat, when Bill Smith gave Rumler the high sign.

Bill hobbled to the bench; Sam, the club house boy, hustled for his spikes and he donned them. Moran was steaming for third on the first ball pitched and had the base clearly stolen, but Bill liked the offering of Frost and sent it streaking through there for a single and the ball game. We hope Bill hurts another toe if that is the way it acts.

Two Great Catches.

Roy Moran and Billy Lee contributed the fielding plays of the game. Roy went to deep center for a line drive of Gabby Street's in the third inning, and with his back to the stands made a catch that looked next to impossible. Lee robbed Sheehan of an extra base drive in the fifth with a great one-handed running catch.

Dick Kauffman had his batting lamps trimmed during the fray, crashing a couple of hits and being picked once. He also swiped a couple of cushions.

Milton Reed, the Atlanta boy, made his debut at short for the locals and gave evidence of being a valuable acquisition and a worthy substitute for the injured Captain Bleland. Milton was robbed of a hit with the bases filled in the first inning, due only to Frost's height. He smashed a bounder that would have gone over the head of any other hurler in the league, but Frost is 6 feet 5 inches tall and when he stretches out his arms he is over 10 feet tall. Add to this the fact that Frost had to jump to get the ball and you can figure where it would have been had any one else been twirling.

How Runs Counted.

Breaks in the luck prevented the Crackers scoring in the first inning and kept them from making but one run in the second. In the latter session Kauffman opened with a single. Matthews sacrificed. He went to third when Jenkins grounded out. Kelly hit a slow teaser to Stark, who threw low to first, the ball hitting the ground and bouncing out of Paulet's hands. Sudderman had called Kelly safe anyway, so we gave the hurler a hit, Kauffman scoring on the play.

McDonald crashed a single to right field and Kelly raced to third. McDonald took second on the throw to third. Williams lined to third and Dodge caught the ball, and, as either way, the ball would have been good for two bases and two runs.

The Vols tied it in the fourth, Callahan opened with a single. Stark was inked. Baker bunted and Kelly threw Callahan at third. Paulet then hit one on the handle and it dropped safe in center field for a two-base scoring clout.

The Crackers won it in the eighth. With one gone, Moran walked. He stole second. Kauffman was hit, and Bill Smith yanked Matthews and put Bill Rumler in to hit. Bill was a busted toe from the game the day before, and time had to be called until he could put on his shoe.

On the first ball pitched Moran was off with the pitch and was right at third base when Rumler crashed a fast one at the pitcher. Well and good Moran reaching Dodge at the same time and so confused him that he could not find the ball, and it hurtled on into left field, Moran scoring what proved to be the winning run.

DETROIT-NEW YORK GAME TO BE CALLED

Caller Huffaker to Detail the Game at Matinee Parlors This Afternoon.

L. B. Huffaker, who has been detailing the baseball games for Dick Jemison at his baseball parlors on the Viaduct this season, has made arrangements to detail the game between New York and Detroit this afternoon, the game starting at 2 o'clock, Atlanta time.

For the interest of the fans, Mr. Huffaker will also give the score by innings of the Boston-Cleveland game to show how Detroit's rival for the pennant is progressing at the same time.

Four Scenes on the Capital City Country Club's Eighteen-Hole Course Which Will Open Saturday

By Dick Jemison.

Atlanta will boast of three eighteen-hole golf courses this week, when the Capital City Country club opens the second nine holes of their course this coming Saturday, and officially opens it the following Saturday with the qualifying round of the first tournament to be played over the new eighteen holes.

In addition to opening up the second nine holes which have been in the course of construction for the better part of a year, several holes of the original nine have been lengthened, tees changed, putting greens switched, and the course otherwise improved generally.

The course when completed will boast of a total yardage of 6,023, 2,955 on the first nine and 3,068 on the second. The bogey of the course will be 80, 40 on each nine, with the par 72, 36 on each nine.

I had the pleasure of playing over the course last Wednesday with Professional Scotty McKenzie. We played the first nine as it will be played when all changes are completed and went over the second nine as it stands and as it will be played commencing Wednesday.

In Splendid Shape.

To say that I was surprised would be expressing it mildly. I was delighted. The fairgreens on the second nine were a revelation to me, and they'll get better every day as they are worked, trimmed, rolled and filled in where the few bare spots appear. But the number of the latter are surprisingly few, for such a new course. I've seen more on courses considerably older.

The course as it will be played puts a premium on distance off the tee. Not only distance, but direction. The natural penalties of the course are such that direction with distance must be borne in mind at all times. There are few artificial hazards, bunkers or other such trouble on the course, but the topography makes this entirely unnecessary.

The entire course in its changed condition will also put a premium on full carry shots. The player with the longer carry will get the best results. This is not to disparage the poorer player, however. He'll get plenty of amusement out of the course, and with none too much trouble to encounter him.

In this connection, however, it must be pointed out that topped balls off the tee will, on the majority of the holes, get the player in trouble and that is as it should be. The recovery from a topped shot from the tee will be difficult.

Makes Handicapping Easier.

This was the chief drawback to the nine holes as they are originally played and as they will be played until Saturday. The shorter player had the advantage. The player who was forced to give strokes found it exceedingly difficult to do so, as with the exception of the seventh hole, a player could miss a shot and then with a full second be on the green with the better player, who, being well off the tee, had a short pitch or run-up shot for the hole.

But the player who believes the same condition will exist on the new course will find himself a sadder but wiser golfer after he has been badly beaten by the player who is giving him strokes.

This is as it should be also. The player who's game warrants his giving strokes to his opponent ought not to have the condition of the course preclude his successfully battling against the higher handicap men.

The condition of the course redounds to the credit of Professional McKenzie and the greens committee, Major J. S. Cohen, John K Ottley and H. G. Caldwell. These gentlemen have worked diligently hand in hand to make the venture a success, and they are on the road to succeed admirably.

It is safe to predict that after the course have been in operation a year, the greens rolled down, the few bare spots in the fairways filled with sod and other minor improvements always necessary, that with the aid of nature, the Capital City Country club's golf course will take rank with the best in the south.

Descriptions of Holes.

For the interest of the golfers of the city who plan playing the course in the near future, the following hole by hole description of the course merits attention. Clip it out and keep it where you can get to it. You may find it handy until you get used to the new order of things.

No. 1. 367 yards. A drive and a mashie will get you home. A sliced ball will go into the woods, while a hooked ball will get in the roadway and make a difficult second shot. Too bold a second shot to the green will result in additional trouble, should the golfer run over. Bogey 5, par 4.

No. 2. 183 yards. A mashie pitch hole, from a tee well above the green, with considerable trouble right up to the edge of the green. No place to top a ball. Woods beyond that make a difficult shot coming back. Bogey 3, par 3.

No. 3. 245 yards. The tee is in the woods on a rise. A well hit drive would reach the green on a dry day. But a drive and a pitch is the best shot. A hooked ball, spells trouble either in the ditch or woods and rough. A sliced ball gives a horrible angle for the second shot. Bogey 4. Par 4.

No. 4. 535 yards. This hole was formerly 311 yards, a drive and a pitch. Now it requires two full wood shots

YELLOW JACKETS TO START WORK

Heisman Issues Call for Candidates to Report on Thursday--Prospects Look Bright.

By Carl Taylor.

When Thursday of this week rolls around Coach Heisman will assemble his visible supply of Jacket grid warriors, and after calling the roll and going through the regular formality of "getting started," will start preparations for the coming season.

Of course no real work will be done for at least a week after the candidates are expected to report, nor is it expected that the greater number of candidates will report on the first day. Coach Heisman has asked that all men report on this date, but does not expect to have his full force in operation before the tenth of the month.

While it may be a bit premature, we would like to venture the assertion that Tech is going to have one great little football team, and is going to make the best of the bunch in the south hustle in order to down them.

Having made this bold assertion, it is best to bring forth the reasons, whyfores, therefores and whatnot to substantiate this claim.

Seventeen Varsity Men.

In the first place, Tech will return the following varsity men: "Big Six" Carpenter, "Froggy" Morrison, Jim Preas, "Woots" Fielder, Tally Johnson, Jim Senter, "Ole" Gloree, "Big Alex," Spence, Hountree, Beck, "Pug" Bryant, Glover, Lang, Hugh Mauck, Churchill and Struppa.

All of these men are vets, and have at some time or other played with the varsity. This gives Tech seventeen men that have been under Heisman at least a year, and will have this much experience to start with.

Other men who are not listed in the above, but are looked upon as strong possibilities, are Bell and Puckett, of Gordon. Bell started at Tech last fall, but withdrew and entered Gordon, where he made quite a rep as a football artist.

Barnwell, a 190-pounder, is also entering Tech this fall, and will be eligible to play. Barnwell held down the center position for the Sewanee Tigers in 1912, and did this in great style. He is expected to give all center candidates a hard tussle for the place.

Phillips, another powerful man, who was ineligible last season is also expected to make a valuable man. Arthur Byers, also ineligible last season, is another player that gives promise of developing into a real player in the course of time or so. Byers is a local product, and while at Tech High school, was one of the most dangerous players in the game. It was his formidable work that won the prep championship for the junior smithies in 1913. He was also a unanimous selection for the position of all-prep full.

Phillips, better known as "Pup," is also a local player, playing with the Donald Fraser eleven in 1913. Phillips was ineligible last season, but whether or not he will play this year is doubtful, as his parents are opposed to his playing. Phillips, as a prep player, was a wonder, and was responsible mainly for the great showing of the Donald Fraser eleven in 1913. Phillips is a 190-pounder and plays the backfield.

With this list of experienced men to choose from, together with some promising new material at their command, Tech's prospects can, therefore, be considered most rosate.

—Work on Grant Field is progressing rapidly and the new track will be blown for the first game of September 18, everything should be in splendid shape.

"LITTLE BOB" PLAYS "DAVEY" IN FINALS

Meet for Golf Championship of the Druid Hills Golf Club.

"Little Bob" Jones and A. Davidson will meet in the concluding matches for the golf championship of the Druid Hills Golf club, which has been in progress during the past week.

The third round has been completed, G. W. Brine defeating Jesse Draper in the final round, 2 up.

The finals in the other flights will be played today. The first flight is as from scratch, while club handicaps apply in the others.

First Flight.

A. Davidson defeated Milton Dargan, Jr., 6 up and 5 to play.

Bob Jones, Jr., defeated Lowry Arnold, 6 up and 4 to play.

Second Flight.

L. D. Scott defeated Dick Jemison, 1 up.

G. W. Adair defeated Robin Adair by default.

Third Flight.

G. W. Brine defeated S. A. Carter, 1 up (20 holes).

Jesse Draper defeated T. H. McRea, 5 up and 3 to play.

Finals.

G. W. Brine defeated Jesse Draper, 2 up.

Scribes' Golf Tourney Qualifying Round to Be Played Monday-Tuesday

The annual newspaper men's golf tournament will commence Monday over the Ansley Park golf course, with the qualifying round scheduled for decision on Monday and Tuesday.

Two days are permitted for qualifying, as some of the players will not be able to participate on one day, while they can on another. The players will qualify according to their net scores.

The tournament will last two weeks, three days' time being allotted between the first and second match play rounds, giving ample time for the players to play their matches.

The qualifying round, all match rounds, even the finals, will be 18 eighteen holes. When the players start on their qualifying round, they are requested to see Professional George Black and pay to him their $1 entry fee.

Practice will not be permitted over the course either Monday or Tuesday, but after the qualifying round practice will be permitted on any day, though the time limit by which matches must be completed, must be observed in all instances.

The match rounds must be completed by the night of the following dates or the player defaults automatically. First round by September 3, second by September 7, semi-finals by September 10 and finals by September 13.

There will be prizes to the winners and runners-up in each flight, and to the winner of the low net medal score. The sixteen lowest net medal players will form the first flight, the second sixteen the second flight, and those remaining the third flight.

The drawings for the match play rounds will be held Tuesday night and announced in Wednesday's papers. The committee, Innis Brown of The Journal, O. B. Keeler of the Georgian and Dick Jemison of The Consatitution, desire any one who has not already entered or who's name appears in the entry list below to notify them and they will be given a handicap.

Players can qualify in twosomes, threesomes or foursomes. The only rule in this connection is that there must be entrants from at least two different papers or publicity firms paired up. Players can choose their own partners for qualifying round if this rule is observed.

The following is the entry list with the handicaps allotted all the players. If any player listed does not desire to play he will confer a favor on the committee by notifying them.

0—Dick Jemison.
4—Doc Atchison, J. R. Gray, Jr.
5—P. W. Hammond, H. W. Grady, Jr.

MEMPHIS CHICKS ON LAST VISIT

Play Crackers Four Games Opening With a Double-Header at Poncey on Monday.

Briscoe Lord and his Memphis Chicks will pay their final visit to Poncey this week, opening a four-game series with the Crackers on Monday with a double-header, and playing single games on Tuesday and Wednesday.

The double-header was made necessary by reason of a postponed game on the last trip of the Chicks here. The Chicks got a four-run lead in the first inning, but the rain came in the second inning and saved the Crackers from defeat.

After the game with the Chicks on Wednesday, the Crackers go to Birmingham for three games with the Barons. Then they return home for double-headers with the Pelicans on Labor day, and the following day, and a series with the Barons, the home-stay coming to a close with the game with the Barons September 10.

The Crackers then go on the road, closing the season away from home soil, bringing the season to a close with a game in Memphis September 26.

JOHNSTON AND GRIFFIN WIN TENNIS DOUBLES

Southampton, N. Y., August 28.—William M. Johnston and L. J. Griffin, of San Francisco, Pacific coast champions, defeated G. M. Church and W. M. Hall in the finals of the doubles for the Meadow Brook cup today.

Seventy-Three Golfers Remain in Golf Tourney; Bush and Whitney Show

Detroit, August 28.—Seventy-three contestants almost evenly divided between the east and west today survived the preliminary qualification round of eighteen holes, medal play—first test of skill in the national amateur golf championship tournament.

Davison Herron, of Pittsburg, and D. E. Sawyer, of Wheaton, Ill., each turned in low cards of 72. Sixty had scores of 84 or better. Thirteen, who tied with 85, will be permitted to enter the second round Monday.

There were few surprises, though Herron's performance attracted much attention. A spectacular midiron shot enabled him to beat par by two strokes. Arthur V. Lee, of Detroit, after going out in 46, refused to be disheartened and came sailing home in 36—a feat that was not equaled.

The gallery split into four sections. "Chick" Evans, western amateur champion; national amateur champion Francis Ouimet; Jerome Travers, national open title holder, and James D. Standish Jr., the local youth who has been considered "Michigan's hope," shared popular attention. Evans topped his noted rivals with a score of 76. Travers took 79 strokes, Standish 81, and Ouimet 82.

The official program called for 84 survivors to compete in the Monday round, but the tie enabled several clever players, including Fraser Hale, of Chicago; J. B. Schlotman, of Detroit, and Dudley Mudge, of St. Paul, to compete for the right to enter match play, which begins Tuesday.

Qualifying Scores.

D. E. Sawyer, Wheaton, Ill., Davison Herron, Pittsburg, 73 each.

State of Georgia Facing Era Of Unprecedented Prosperity, Say Leading Business Men

That Georgia is facing an unprecedented era of prosperity, and that business conditions will be remarkably good this fall, is the prediction of leading bankers, merchants and citizens of Georgia in answer to letters which have been sent out by the Georgia Chamber of Commerce to sound public opinion in Georgia on the subject.

The replies received so far are very encouraging, and point to a general belief all over the state that business conditions will steadily improve from this time forward, regardless of the continuance of the war, and that when the war closes, an era of prosperity will set in unparalleled in the history of the state.

Some of the letters received by the Georgia Chamber of Commerce are as follows:

E. W. Stetson, President Citizens National Bank, Macon, says:

"Supplementing my statement during the early part of August, 1914, when I said that prosperity produces extravagance, extravagance produces adversity, adversity produces economy, and economy produces prosperity, thereby making a complete commercial cycle, will now add that we are just completing the economical stage.

Farmers Have Economized.

"The real producer, the farmer, through necessity in some cases and choice in others, has economized tremendously during the past twelve months. This has given the middle man, which includes the supply merchant, the banker, and I might say the manufacturer, an opportunity to readjust his condition. He has done so, and only needs to readjust a few remaining odds and ends, which still exist in his own business.

"Within the past few days, the writer has circled the entire United States, and in no place does he find a better spirit and confidence to meet any commercial conditions than right here in Georgia.

"The farmer has more meat, corn and other farm products of his own raising than ever before. The banks of Georgia owe less money at this particular season of the year than they have in the last ten years.

"Notwithstanding the legislature failed to pass the warehouse bill, as well as the acceptance bill, strong interests all over the state are quietly enlarging their facilities for warehousing cotton, and are making arrangements to enter into a holding movement, which, if intelligently handled by farmer, warehouseman and banker, will result in convincing the south that it is really independent.

"The effect of cotton being declared contraband by the allies will not be serious, in my judgment. The allies will take practically as much cotton as they took last year, and their purchases will be distributed over twelve months, rather than in three or four months' time—the latter fact because of the English government's desire not to store too much cotton and have to pay gold for same at once, and the fact that there is quite a stock of cotton in England at the present time.

"I look for Georgia and the south to fully take care of themselves until the end of the present European war, and then have unprecedented prosperity."

Crops Have Cost Less.

Jacob S. Collins, president National Bank of Savannah, says:

"It is my opinion that business conditions will be good. I base this opinion upon the theory as well as the fact that our farmers have made their crop at less cost, and the scare produced by the declaration of war a year ago has caused people generally to retrench. The apparent desire on the part of many farmers this season to dispose of their cotton leads me to the conclusion that even at a moderate price they will be supplied with sufficient funds to liquidate their indebtedness."

H. E. Kelley, president of the Cherokee National bank, Rome, says:

"We think that business this fall in this section is going to be good average fall business, while at the present time business is quiet; that is the natural condition here during August and September. We base our opinion on this from the fact that agricultural conditions are good, that the good prospects for good corn and cotton crops. Upon these two crops largely depend prosperity."

Last Improvement Already.

J. A. J. Henderson, president Ocilla Southern Railroad company, Ocilla, says:

"In my opinion there has been a vast improvement in business conditons in Georgia within the past sixty days, and I believe this improvement will continue. During the year 1911 all lines of business have been conducted along conservative lines. The farmers have made the cheapest crop they have ever made, and the indications now are that they will receive a fair price for their product.

"To sum up, the situation from the general conditions, as I see them, points very strongly to continued improvement along all lines. With the restoration of confidence and a determined effort on the part of business people to open up and do business throughout this country, a point has been reached when we may look for exceedingly prosperous times."

J. E. Yates, president Jones Grocery company, Macon, says:

"We do not think, as some few people do, that the whole country has gone to the bad, but think the prospects are good for fall business. Our largest banks in Macon are all in good shape, and, in fact, they report owing no money at all. Rather this was the information we had from them about three weeks ago. This goes to show that the farmers through this section have not had to borrow much money as usual. In fact, we think this crop has been made with less money than any crop we have had in a number of years. We cannot help but feel and look forward to nice, smooth business this fall."

E. P. Grant, manager the Fairbanks company, Rome, says:

"We anticipate excellent conditions will prevail in Georgia this fall.

"We base our belief upon the confidence that the people generally are showing in the future, and the unity of harmony which is prevailing throughout the south, and the fact that the human needs and requirements of this country must be supplied and maintained, regardless of the pessimistic views that some people naturally cling to."

E. A. Chappell, president Cox & Chappell company, Macon, says:

"If we get from 8¼ to 9 cents, we think the people will sell their cotton as it is brought in, and if they do not, we will have a good fall business. The crop of cotton is not as large as last year, but conditions will be very much better than last year, as the crop has been made at a very much less expense than last year."

Getting Back to Normal.

W. L. Couch, vice president and treasurer Couch Bros. Manufacturing company, Atlanta, says:

"We think there has been a gradual improvement for the last five or six months.

"We think the people have about become used to both hard times and the war talk, and are gradually getting back to normal. What the outlook for the future is, it seems to us that as the long that the time has about been reached when it will be necessary to get the markets for all commodities, which will, of course, help every line of business, as business all dovetails so into other business."

M. V. Mahoney, general freight agent Wrigley railroads, Dublin, says:

"I anticipate that the business conditions in Georgia this fall will be nearly normal, provided this country does not become involved in the European war.

"If cotton should bring as much as 10 cents the conditions in this section this season would be better than normal."

Situation in Savannah.

Thomas Purse, secretary Savannah Board of Trade, Savannah, says:

"After a conference with Mr. Motte, president of the board, he has requested us to say that while there are the abnormal conditions which now exist, it is next to impossible to give the future business conditions for the state of Georgia this fall, but the wanes time his views are most optimistic, due in a large measure to the fact that cotton will bring better prices than ever in the history of the state, and her farmers will raise the cheapest cotton crop since the war, and all indications point to a fair profit for the staple this year."

Arrington Brothers & Co., Augusta, say:

"You have referred us to a problem; however, there are some things that cause us to think business will be in better shape this fall than last. Last fall there was such an element of uncertainty that people went up in the air and a great many of them simply sat down and cried instead of making a desperate effort. That condition blew over, and the people found they were not hurt as badly as they thought, and we believe our people are taking a saner view of things now and have in some measure at least adjusted themselves to the conditions."

Great Grain Crop Will Help.

R. P. Spencer, president Phoenix bank, Columbus, says:

"Cotton is not our only agricultural production.

"The August report of the grain crop in the United States indicates an aggregate yield of nearly 6,000,000,000 bushels for 1915, 611,000,000 bushels over that produced in 1914. It also indicates an increase for 1915 of 25,000,000 bushels of white potatoes, 6,000,000 bushels of sweet potatoes and 5,000,000,000 tons of hay. Of the total grain production for 1915 the south's portion is estimated to be 1,570,000,000 bushels, a gain of 292,000,000 bushels over 1914. The grain crop of the south will exceed in value by several hundred millions of dollars, the most valuable crop ever produced. About 50 per cent of the total gain for the whole United States in grain crop for the year 1915 will be produced in the south. This gain alone is worth $250,000,000.

"Prolific Nature again blesses this whole land with these marvelous crops, and as we view this situation, against the background of Europe's wreck and ruin, of fields devastated, of poverty and sorrow everywhere, we ought to rejoice that we are permitted to live in a land so marvelously blessed by the Almighty, affording to the people of all sections and all classes opportunities never vouchsafed to any other people on earth."

Contraband Order Discounted.

J. A. Cooper, president the First National bank Waycross, Ga., says:

"We believe good conditions will prevail because the effects of the 'contraband cotton' has already been discounted. Our government and the government of Great Britain are showing a disposition to brace up the cotton market. This looks good and we will sell at a better price. Georgia will have a prosperous fall.

"Our state is in fine condition. The cotton crop has been raised at almost half it cost to raise the 1914 crop. The farmers have curtailed their expenses, they owe less debts, and in spite of the European war and its effects, Georgia will prosper in the fall of 1915."

J. A. Streyer, traffic manager Macon, Dublin and Savannah Railroad company, Macon, says:

"First, I expect a steady uplift in the business conditions will prevail in Georgia this fall.

"Second. My opinion is based upon the fact that during the depression of the last twelve months that the merchantman, farmer and in fact all classes have adjusted themselves to conditions and are building up a foundation better than we have had for years in this state. With our resources and the progressive spirit, we are bound to show healthy conditions in Georgia during the coming year."

PAYNE MEMORIAL WILL HAVE SPECIAL SERVICE

There will be a special young people's service at the Payne Memorial Methodist church on Sunday at 10:30 a. m. A special program has been arranged and speakers later to be named will be present.

The Sunday night service will be changed from 8 o'clock to 7:30 and Sunday night Dr. Duval will conduct the service.

To encourage enlistment the Manchester Home Trade association of England decided to give recruits four weeks' pay on leaving, re-engagement guaranty, half pay while serving, special terms to single men with dependents, and three weeks' holiday after the war.

LOW WAGES CAUSE OF LABOR UNREST

Chairman Walsh, of Industrial Commission, Will Report to Congress—Summary of the Findings.

Kansas City, August 28.—Low wages was found to be the basic cause of industrial unrest of the report which Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the federal commission on industrial relations, and the labor members of that body will present to congress as a result of the commission's two-year investigation into the subject.

The report embodying the personal findings of Mr. Walsh, and concurred in by Commissioners John R. Lennon, James O'Connell and Austin B. Garretson, was made public here today.

"The workers of the nation, through compulsory and oppressive methods, legal and illegal, are denied the full product of their toil," it was declared in the report, and the resulting industrial dissatisfaction was said to have reached "proportions that already menace the social good will and the peace of the nation." Responsibility for the condition under which they live was placed primarily upon the workers themselves, who, "blind in their collective strength and oftentimes deaf to the cries of their fellowmen, have suffered exploitation and the invasion of their most sacred rights without resistance."

Text of Report.

The report in part follows:

"We find that the material dissatisfaction to be low wages, or stated in another way, the fact that the workers of the nation through compulsory and oppressive methods, legal and illegal, are denied the full product of their toil.

"We further find that unrest among the workers in industry has grown to proportions that already menace the social good will and the peace of the nation. Citizens numbering millions exist under a sense of injustice and oppression.

"The extent and depth of industrial unrest can hardly be exaggerated. State and national conventions of labor organizations, numbering many thousands of members, have cheered the names of leaders imprisoned for participating in campaigns of violence, conducted as one phase of a conflict with organized employers.

"Employers have created and maintained small private armies and used their influence to intimidate and suppress their striking employees by deputizing, imprisoning, assaulting and killing their leaders. Blacklisting systems are maintained to discover and disclose the movements of the enemy. The use of state troops in policing strikes has bred a bitter hostility to the militia itself.

"Courts, legislatures and governors have been rightfully accused of serving employers to the defeat of justice, and while counter charges come from the employers, who, although with almost negligible exceptions, it is the workers who believe, assert and prove that the very institutions of their country have been perverted by the power of the employer.

Labor Gaining Support.

"To the support of the militant and aggressive propaganda of organized labor has come, within recent years, a small but rapidly increasing host of ministers, college professors, writers, journalists and others of the professional classes, distinguished in many instances by exceptional talent, who they devote to agitation with no hope of personal gain.

"We find the unrest here to be described as the latest manifestation of the age-long struggle of man for freedom of opportunity for every individual to live his life to its highest ends.

"The unrest of the wage earner has been augmented by recent changes and developments in industry. Chief of these are the gradual and universal introduction and extension of machinery by which unskilled workers may be substituted for the skilled, and an equally rapid development of means of rapid transportation and communication by which private capital has been enabled to organize in great corporations.

"Work formerly done at home or in small neighborhood shops has been transferred to great factories where the individual workers become an impersonal element under the control of impersonal corporations. Women in increased numbers have followed their work from the home to the factory, and even children have been enlisted.

"Now, more than ever, the profits of great industries under centralized control pour into the coffers of stockholders and directors, who never have so much as visited the plants and who perform no services in return, and while vast inherited fortunes, representing zero in social service to the world, roll up in enormous, automatically treble and multiple in volume, the toiling thirds of those who toil from eight to twelve hours a day receive less than enough to support themselves and their families in decency and comfort.

Entire Community Dominated.

"We find that many entire communities exist under the arbitrary economic control of corporation officials charged with the management of an industry or group of industries and we find that in such communities democracy does not exist and its forms are hollow mockeries.

"In larger communities where espionage becomes impossible, the wage earner who is unsupported by a collective organization may enjoy a fitful and uncertain freedom in the workshop, but there his freedom ends. And it is a freedom more apparent than real. For the house he lives in, the food he eats, the clothing he wears, the environment of his wife and children and his own health and safety are in the hands of the employer, through the arbitrary power he exercises in fixing his wages and working conditions.

"The responsibility for the conditions, which have been described above, we declare rests primarily upon workers who, blind to their collective strength and oftentimes deaf to the cries of their followers, have suffered exploitation and the invasion of their most sacred rights without resistance. A large measure of responsibility must, however, attach to the great mass of citizens. But, until the workers themselves realize their responsibility and utilize to the full their collective power, no action whether governmental or altruistic can work any genuine and lasting improvement.

"We call upon our citizenship regardless of politics or economic conditions to use every means of agitation, all avenues of education and every department and function of government to eliminate the injustices exposed by this committee to the end that each laborer may secure the whole product of his labor."

PAINT STORES APPROVE OF SATURDAY CLOSING

For a number of years past the paint stores have closed at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoons during the summer months. The public generally appears to have approved of this practice. Employers have begun to realize that there was nothing lost in giving this half-holiday once a week.

An agreement to close Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock throughout the entire year has been entered into by the following concerns:

F. J. Coolidge & Sons, Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., Tripod Paint Co., Southern Paint and Varnish works, Sherwin-Williams Paint Co., West Lumber Co. and the Georgia Paint and Glass company.

St. Paul Methodist.

The pastor, Dr. J. Wiley Quillian, will fill his pulpit today, preaching in the morning on the subject: "The Influence of Worldliness on Christian Life." At night his subject will be "The New Creature in Christ."

Convention Call.

To All Chapters of the United Daughters of the Confederacy—Greetings and Good Wishes:

The twenty-second annual convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy will convene in the city of San Francisco, Cal., on Wednesday, October 20, 1915. The opening exercises will be held Tuesday evening, October 19, at 8:30 o'clock.

Chapters are entitled to representation according to numbers as follows: "One vote for the first seven members, and one additional vote for every additional twenty-five members, provided per capita tax has been paid. Any one or more representatives of a chapter may cast the full vote to which said chapter is entitled, but vote must not be cast through the chairman of the delegation." Article VII., section 2.

It is advisable that chapters send delegates to convention but where this is impossible they may name as proxy any duly elected delegate from the same division." "No person shall be entitled to vote for more than one state and this only where no delegate is present." Article VI., section 6.

Three credential blanks are herewith inclosed and chapter presidents are requested to pay special attention to the new rules governing them, as they will be strictly adhered to. Please read carefully and prepare the first one according to the instructions given, and then send out as directed. One to be mailed to the president, by-law II., section 2; the third to be taken by your delegate to convention for the purpose of identification, by-law VII. No credentials will be recognized not in the hands of the credentials committee five days before convention, by-law VII., section 2.

Badges for elected members should be sent by September 1, to Mrs. F. W. Darr, 1514 Fourth street, Sacramento, Cal.

General officers, division presidents and chairmen of committees are requested to have their reports typewritten, and to leave them at the secretary's desk after reading in convention.

U. D. C. Chapter Reports

BARNESVILLE.

The chapter has been very enthusiastic ever since its organization last spring. They have regular monthly meetings and well rendered programs. The membership continues to increase and no doubt will make a remarkable showing at the next convention.

The Lily R. Turner chapter is planning a campaign of good works. They will undertake to send four children to the grammar school department of Gordon next year, who would not be able to attend otherwise, owing to financial depression. Mrs. Rogers is arranging to stage a play in the near future in which the children of the chapter will be the only participants. The proceeds will be added to the chapter's educational fund. Every one is becoming much interested in the noble undertaking of these little patriots and their devoted leader, and their efforts will meet with all needful encouragement and reward. It is probable that they may send more than four children to school during 1915-1916.

The chapter is gifted with unusual talent and visitors count it a great treat to be present at any of their meetings. The chapter can boast two violinists and pianists, who render the musical programs far above the ordinary. They always serve dainty refreshments and make their social features altogether lovely. The chapter is exceedingly fortunate in having a leader who can lead them into things worth while.

SIDNEY LANIER CHAPTER COMMENDS MRS. LAMAR

"Whereas, Mrs. Walter Lamar, our honored state president, Georgia division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, when it became known to her that our historian general, Miss Ruth Cerford, would again be a candidate for re-election, so generously and graciously withdrew from the race for president general, although her election was assured, and

"Whereas, Mrs. Lamar is the most distinguished member of our chapter, adopted by the chapter with confidence and affection of the entire membership; "Therefore, be it resolved, That we, the Sidney Lanier chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, while we regret the withdrawal of Mrs. Lamar and the loss thereby to the general organization, commend Mrs. Lamar's motives and express our confidence in her judgment and our appreciation of her high ideals.

"Respectfully submitted.

DEPARTMENT OF FLOWERS

Edited by BEAUFORT MATHEWS.

THE WINTER GARDEN

Follow our "Garden Calendar for Young Folks" and we will help you work out a good plan that will prove both a pleasure and success if followed carefully.

Your garden should always be green, and it can be if your are interested in it.

Suppose you try a row of lettuce for use before the frost comes. If you want to bring it to a head try the Big Boston. This is a hardy winter variety and it is easily cultivated.

Prepare your ground by fertilizing it with well rotted horse manure. Mix this thoroughly with the soil and use with it two or three pounds of nitrate of soda.

In transplanting let your plants be about 12 inches apart. Water them late every dry afternoon and thus force their growth.

But lettuce is not the only vegetable that will keep your garden green.

Suppose you plant turnips. Try rutabagas. Plant five rows of these, as they make a substantial winter dish.

Prepare a place for your seed bed. The white variety and keep a green spot in your garden from early fall until late spring.

A good salad, for salad greens in winter, is a vegetable sometimes sen in cities, but it is found on every Virginia and Carolina hillbrawl. Poke.

The Dwarf Essex variety of rape is a good kind to plant in Georgia. Sow as you would mustard or turnips.

If you wish to plant one acre and feed fifteen pigs on it for the cold months plant now and drill it.

For personal use on the table cut the leaves off freely and leave the stalk. Many like rape better than they do cabbage or winter collards. It is a cold weather plant and will be a fine thing to have in your winter garden.

The Flower Garden.

This is the month to plant perennial Oriental poppies, hollyhocks and larkspur. Old-fashioned flowers are always pretty and you will enjoy them next spring and summer if you will plant them now.

These are especially pretty for your side or back yard garden.

Other flowers that can be planted now are foxglove, canterbury bells and gillardia.

Prepare the soil for a rose bed.

HEBREW SCHOOL WILL GIVE PROGRAM TODAY

The United Hebrew school, located in the Jewish Educational Alliance building, 99 Capitol avenue, announces an interesting and entertaining program to be held in the assembly hall of the alliance this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

There will be a public examination of the pupils of the school, to be followed by a musical program. Addresses will be made by the rabbis of the various synagogues of the city. The public is invited and no admission will be charged.

Cleanse the Blood Banish Rheumatism

Rheumatism Due to Bad Blood. S. S. S. Your Remedy

Thousands have been made well. People in the poorest health, suffering from Rheumatism, with whom pain was constant. Who believed that their vitality was sapped beyond repair. It was proven to them that the cause of their trouble was the blood. That Uric Acid, the most faithful ally of Rheumatism, had gripped them. The poison in the blood had sapped its strength. The weakened blood had allowed poison and impurities to accumulate, and all energy was gone. They felt "poorly," were listless, pain was ever present, with poor digestion and dyspepsia. They tried S. S. S.—nature's blood tonic. They gave up drugs. This compound of nature's remedies of roots and herbs did what drugs failed to do. It literally washed the blood free from poison, and with the flow of pure blood came back health, strength, vigor and happiness. Get S. S. S. from your druggist. Insist upon S. S. S. Children's Ball at Greenbrier White.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., August 28.—The Ladies' Black and White cotillion this week was a great success. There were 160 couples. The ladies showed great originality in their novel costumes, and the men wore white trousers and black coats to carry out the color scheme. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Paine, of Atlanta, led.

The children's ball took place Monday night. From the tiniest tot, Emma Gray White, of Norfolk, dressed as Cupid, to the rhythmic dances of Anne Grant, of Atlanta, nothing more could be asked in the way of youthful beauty and grace. Beginning with the grand march, which was led through many intricate figures by Garrett B. Wall, of Richmond; Anne Grant, of Atlanta; Wilbur Preston, of Baltimore, and Douglas Paine, of Atlanta, there followed many quaint and novel dances. The first was "The White Sulphur Minuet," danced by Elizabeth Taylor, Mildred Hancock, Virginia Sterry, Mary Preston, Anne Grant, Douglas Paine, Burks Yuille and Mary Kaye. Then followed fairy-like Douglas Paine as Pierrette. She seemed like a breath of zephyr, so light and airy were her movements. Miss Nancy Yuille danced with real spirit a dashing Spanish dance. Anne Grant in a scarf dance was the poetry of motion. At the conclusion of her solo, she was joined by Douglas Paine, Elizabeth Taylor, Mary Kaye, Mildred Hancock, Mary Preston, Helen Wardlow, Nancy Yuille and Margaret Flick, who with rainbow-colored scarfs danced around her, completing a very lovely picture. A real Highland fling, danced by Elizabeth Taylor, brought storms of applause from the enthusiastic spectators. Anne Grant was next in an arrow dance that was almost professional in its perfection. One of the most enjoyable numbers was the Maxixe as done by John Taylor, of Richmond, and Helen Preston, of Baltimore.

The 1913 Embroidery Club.

A most interesting needlework contest was enjoyed by all. Mrs. E. L. Westmoreland being the lucky winner of the prize and Mrs. P. C. Lumpkin the consolation.

The game was followed by a surprise shower given in its president, Mrs. Charles Gilbert, a lovely bride of the summer season. Many good wishes for the bride had been spoken the club adjourned to meet with Mrs. Maude Sellars, on Ponders avenue, Thursday, September 2.

Those present were Mrs. Charles Gilbert, Mrs. B. T. Beasley, Mrs. Jim Newton, Mrs. E. L. Westmoreland, Mrs. Hub Huddleston, Mrs. R. H. Bell, Miss Helen Lumpkin, Miss Louie Mae Smith, Miss Annie Mae Jenkins, Mrs. Lumpkin, Mrs. M. K. Jenkins, Mrs. Kilpatrick and Mrs. Maude Sellars.

Club Entertained.

Mrs. W. H. Burgess entertained the members of her Forty-two club Thursday afternoon at her home in West End.

Those present were Mrs. H. W. Dillon, Mrs. R. J. Ingram, Mrs. W. M. Nichols, Mrs. E. P. Williamson, Mrs. Fred Hunter, Mrs. Newton, Mrs. Hale, Mrs. Ralph Clements, Miss Pearl Lacy, Miss Maybeth Richards.

Dancing Party for Visitors.

Miss Lillian George and Miss Mildred Andoe, of Gainesville, Ga., who are spending the week-end with Miss Miriam Orr, were guests of honor at a dancing party given by Mrs. Clifton Orr at her home on Washington street.

Mrs. W. S. Rouse, of St. Louis, assisted in entertaining.

The house was beautifully decorated with many plants and flowers. Important features in interiors lent a soft glow to the large vine-covered porch, where punch was served. The ices and cakes carried out the color scheme of pink and white.

Atlantans in Asheville.

Asheville, N. C., August 28.—(Special.)—Atlanta people are figuring prominently in the gayeties of the late summer season in Asheville, these gayeties centering principally at Battery Park hotel and Grove Park Inn.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Epps Brown entertained a party of twelve at the dinner-dance Friday night at Battery Park, this occasion a brilliant one in a series of dinner-dances, one of the most beautiful of which was that given by Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Phipps, of Charleston and Morristown, N. J., for their debutante daughter, Louise.

Mr. W. E. Patterson, of Atlanta, gave a dinner on Friday at Battery Park, and Mrs. J. Epps Brown entertained at luncheon in compliment to Mrs. Sara Seibels, of Columbia, S. C., when her guests were Mrs. Victor Hanson, of Birmingham; Miss Rose Lyons, of Mobile; Mrs. A. H. Graham, of Dallas; Mrs. Baldam and Mrs. Charles Webb, of Greenville, S. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Fairfax Montague are Atlanta arrivals this week at Battery Park.

At Grove Park Inn, Mrs. S. M. Inman, Miss Inman, Miss Katherine Inman, Mrs. Harry L. English, and Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Woodruff are recent arrivals from Atlanta.

A dinner party of forty guests, given by Miss Louise Wise, of Macon, niece of Mrs. Henry M. Flagler, was an event of the past week and one of the most brilliant entertainments of the season.

Hudson-Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wilson Hudson, of Palmetto, Ga., announce the marriage of their daughter, Helen, to Mr. Andrew Guy Smith, of Atlanta, which took place July 21 in Atlanta, Rev. John S. Purser, of West End Baptist church, officiating.

Dixie Court, Order of The Amaranth.

An artistic and social event of much interest is announced for the early fall season by the ladies of the newly formed Dixie Court No. 1, Order of the Amaranth. It is the plan of the ladies to give a musical in the nature of a joint recital, by two artists of high standing in the musical world, and there will be several features of unusual interest in connection with the program which will be announced at an early date.

Atlanta is the first city in the south to have organized a court of this famous old order, which has for more than fifty years maintained such a high standing among the Masonic fraternity in other parts of the country. The committee in charge of the concert will leave no stone unturned to assure a brilliant social and artistic success of the first undertaking of the new order in Atlanta. The date has been set for Thursday evening, September 30, at the Hotel Ansley.

Birthday Party.

Mrs. D. J. Moriarty entertained at a delightful party Friday afternoon at her home at Cravenwood for her young daughter, Florence Moriarty, whose tenth birthday was celebrated. Games were played on the lawn and refreshments were served from the dining room. The centerpiece of the table was a large basket of red roses. The bonbons, cakes, ices and other pretty details were in red and white, and the same colors were observed in the decorations throughout the house and in the favors. Mrs. Moriarty was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. A. L. Whitehead and Mrs. James O'Donnell. Among the guests were a number of young people who attend the Sacred Heart Sunday school and whose birthdays are also in August. They presented the young honor guest with a beautiful rosary and a prayer book bound in white ivory was also a gift received by her. There were fifty guests.

Better Babies Contest.

A better babies contest will be held in the reception rooms of the First Christian church on Wednesday, September 15.

Prizes will be awarded and a number of well-known physicians and trained nurses will be present to examine the babies. Mrs. A. A. Brooke will be in charge and will be assisted by ladies of the church.

The hours will be from 2 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon. Entrance fee, 25 cents.

Griffin-Strohl.

The wedding of Miss Irene Doughty Griffin and Mr. George Franklin Strohl will be an interesting event of the week to a large circle of friends. The ceremony will take place at the Cowanee club, Copper Hill, Tenn., on Saturday evening, September 4, and will be followed by a reception. Miss Ellison Bedell, of Atlanta, will be maid of honor and the bridesmaids will be Miss Zelna Jacobs, of Cincinnati, and Miss Emmie Robinson, of Clinton, S. C.

Mr. Hollings will be best man and little Misses Edith and Alice Harrison, of Charlotte, N. C., will be flower girls. Bishop Gailor, of Tennessee, will officiate.

Miss Griffin is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John King Griffin, formerly of Clinton, S. C. She is a charming young woman and an accomplished musician. Mr. Strohl, formerly of Denver, Col., is superintendent of mines at Copper Hill, where he and his bride will go to housekeeping on returning from their wedding trip east. Among the out-of-town guests will be Mr. and Mrs. James Bedell and Miss Alma Curran, of Chicago.

For Miss Blount.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Smith entertained at the dinner-dance last evening at the East Lake Country club for Miss Wilda Blount, of Union Springs, Ala., who is the guest of Miss Rebecca Walker.

Miss Bowden Entertains.

Miss Mary Frances Bowden entertained at bridge Wednesday afternoon at her home in West End in honor of Miss Ethel Launius, a bride-elect. The hostess received the guests wearing an embroidered frock of pink and white voile. Miss Launius wore grey crepe-meteor.

The invited guests were: Miss Willie Kate Travis, Miss Isabel Simpson, Miss Elizabeth Small, Miss Willie Ray, Miss Helen Shade, Mrs. C. A. Floyd and Miss Bessie Launius.

Miss Arnold Entertains.

Miss Mary Ella Arnold entertained thirty girl friends at progressive cards Friday afternoon at her home in West End in compliment to Miss Sarah Arnold and Miss Ruth Jackson, of Athens. A profusion of flowers decorated the house and the prize for top score, a box of crepe de chine handkerchiefs, was won by Miss Jackson.

Punch was served during the afternoon by Misses Elizabeth Meredith and Ruth Boardman.

Areme Club to Celebrate.

The Areme club, composed of past matrons and matrons of Eastern Star chapters, will celebrate Founders' day next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock at Lebanon chapter in Capitol View. A program will be rendered. All members of the O. E. S. chapters are invited.

Meeks-Acree.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Parks announce the marriage of their sister, Miss Lelia Mamie Meeks, to Mr. Willie Ernest Acree on August 25, 1915. They are at home to their friends at the residence of Mrs. Parks, 61 Dorothy street.

For Bride-Elect.

Miss Ida Bokritzky, a bride-elect, was hostess at a reception Sunday afternoon given at her home on Piedmont avenue. The house was beautifully decorated with palms and ferns. The favors were pink bridal slippers filled with rice. Miss Bokritzky was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. J. Bokritzky; Mrs. K. Rosenberg and Miss Rebecca Shuman. Miss Sarah Bokritzky and Miss Sarah Shuman served punch.

Those entertained were: Misses Lena and Sarah Taylor, Gertrude and Minnie Goldstein, Florence and Rosa Levin, Bertha and Dora Blondheim, Annie May, Ella Sevoiovitz, Fanny Lefkoff, Rebecca Bock, Lena Spian, Ida Breman, Ida Levy, Bessie Rusa, Rosa Pheffer, and Miss Lena Deitch, of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Vesper Club Dance.

An event of the week was a dance given by the Vesper club on Friday evening at their clubhouse. The honor guests were Miss Gladys Anderson, of Birmingham, the guest of Miss Willie Cummings, and the Misses Lofton, of Dayton, Ohio. There were forty-five couples present and a most enjoyable time was had by all. The dance was the second of a series of two during August. Another enjoyable feature of the evening was the splendid musical program. The clubhouse looked attractive and was unusually cool.

Those dancing included Miss Gladys Anderson, of Birmingham; Miss Inez Lofton and Miss Arline Lofton, of Dayton, Ohio; Miss Marguerite Stoltz, of Richmond; Miss Geraldine Vignaux, Miss Margaret Stone, Miss Julia Adams, Miss Thelma Thomas, Miss Ruth Atkinson, Miss Marjorie Reynolds, Miss Ruth Cain, Miss Louise James, Miss Lillian Reid, Miss Edwina Harper, Miss Lorene Patterson, Miss Katherine Webster, Miss Mamie Morris, Miss Adelaide Callaway, Miss Wyolene Nance, Miss Mary Barnett, Miss Virginia Rinard, Miss Emma Moore, Miss Roberta Cook, Miss Marie Turner, Miss Willie Cummings, Miss Alma Nance and Miss Bessie Hollowell, Mr. and Mrs. John Green, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Thompson, of Montgomery, Ala., and Mrs. Jack Parr, Mr. and Mrs. V. F. Nicholdson, Mr. Orabert Atkinson, Mr. W. C. Comer, Mr. Carl Taylor, Mr. Cary H. Callaway, Mr. Rozier McRae, Mr. Guy Harris, Mr. Wiltaro H. Manning, Mr. J. C. Latimer, Mr. Clifford Daniel, Mr. W. W. Fortrin, Mr. R. A. Jones, Mr. Carlton Beem, Mr. John A. Logan, Mr. E. H. Beall, Mr. J. O. Crawens, Mr. Roy C. Booker, Mr. Ernest Allen, Mr. John Wood, Jr., Mr. Leonard Graves, Mr. Cliff W. Brown, Professor Frank Holt, Jr., Mr. Robert L. Cooper, Mr. Frank Stevens, Mr. W. Thornborough, Mr. N. R. Thomas, Mr. Franklin Chalmers, Mr. Albert Floyd, Mr. R. B. Greene.

The first dance of September given by the Vesper club will be a large and enjoyable event on Friday, September 10. On next Thursday evening the club members will have a smoker at the Ansley hotel.

Suffrage Calendar.

Ways and means committee, Atlanta Equal Suffrage association, Ansley hotel, Monday afternoon.

Suffrage school, Atlanta Equal Suffrage association, Ansley hotel, Wednesday afternoon.

Executive committee meeting, Georgia Woman's Suffrage association, Ansley hotel, Friday afternoon.

The Atlanta Equal Suffrage association held a business meeting on Wednesday afternoon at the Hotel Ansley. Plans were made for the fall and winter work of the organization.

Mrs. Amelia R. Woodall announced that the fall session of the Suffrage school will open on September 7 under most flattering circumstances, as some of Georgia's most brilliant men and women have consented to deliver addresses before the school.

Reports were made by the legislative, ways and means and program committees. The committee on membership reported twenty applications for membership in the organization. Among the interesting messages to the association from different parts of the country was that read by Mrs. Mary McLendon from Mrs. Georgia McIntyre Weaver, who is at present taking a prominent part in the West Virginia suffrage campaign.

Suffragists in Atlanta are urged to save all old clothes, shoes, etc., for the use of the rummage sale to be held in October under the auspices of the Fulton and DeKalb counties branch of the Equal Suffrage association of Georgia. The proceeds of the sale, which will be under the direction of Mrs. Moreland Speer, will be devoted to the purchase of suffrage literature for educational purposes. Donations will be gladly accepted any time up to the date of the sale, announcement of which will be made later, either at the headquarters at 217 Peachtree street, or at Mrs. Speer's residence, 18 Fairview road. Among Mrs. Speer's assistants will be Miss Irene Lane, Mrs. Harry Smith, Mrs. Albert Bailey, Mrs. Frank Pitten and Mrs. W. K. Hiley.

A meeting of the central committee of the Fulton and DeKalb counties' branch of the Equal Suffrage Party of Georgia will be held at the headquarters, 217 Peachtree street, Tuesday, September 7, at 10:30 a. m. The meeting will be of especial importance because of the reports of the various chairmen of plans for the coming year.

LETTON MAY DECIDE TO MAKE HIS HOME IN THIS CITY AGAIN

"Jack" Letton, well-known hotel man of Atlanta and ex-police commissioner, returned to Atlanta last night, after spending the summer in Denver, Colorado.

"Is everything quiet in police circles?" was the first question Mr. Letton asked The Constitution reporter who talked to him last night.

Mr. Letton displayed no outward demonstration of deep regret when informed of the exoitement he had missed.

A question elicited a smile and the information that he did not care to be quoted upon the situation.

Mr. Letton said last night that he will be here for two weeks and may decide to locate here again permanently. He was formerly connected here as manager of the Ansley hotel and later lessee of the Winecoff. Since severing his connection with the latter he has not been actively connected with any hotel.

He is registered at the Winecoff.

Mrs. Letton is still in Denver.

Mr. Letton declares that the travel to the San Francisco exposition has been tremendous.

"There have been more people visiting Denver, en route to the exposition, than ever have visited the city before in its history," said Mr. Letton.

Says Wife Spent Time Drinking Soda Water And Going to Movies

In the good old days it was the footlights and the seductive cocktail that lured white astray—now it's nickel movies and soda water, according to a suit filed by Joel K. Kershaw against Mrs. Cora Paulin Gossett Kershaw yesterday in superior court.

Kershaw, who lives at 118 Avon avenue, charges that in addition to his wife's screen aspirations, she spent most of her time in moving picture shows and in soda water founts, when she should have been at home attending to her children.

NORMAL INSTITUTE WILL OPEN SEPT. 15

The Atlanta Normal and Industrial Institute will begin its fall term Wednesday, September 15. Principal Richard D. Stinson states that there is every indication that the enrollment will be as large as last year when there were pupils here not only from Georgia and the neighboring states, but from Illinois, Kentucky and Arkansas.

"Efficient and practical instructors have been employed," Principal Stinson says, "to aid in doing the work which will make better and more helpful boys and girls who enter the school. We seek to get together the masses of our race in the rural districts, towns and cities. To be so equipped that we may not turn from our doors any worthy applicant the school is in need of another building, a set of carpenter tools and a kitchen outfit for the domestic science department."

CHI PSI FRAT ALUMNI WILL MEET WEDNESDAY

The Chi Psi fraternity alumni association of Atlanta will hold its regular fall meeting and dinner in the mahogany room of the Ansley hotel next Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock.

John N. Holder, of Jefferson, Ga., ex-speaker of the Georgia house of representatives and a charter member of the Chi Psi chapter at Athens, has been invited to speak at the meeting.

While the meeting is that of the Atlanta alumni, it is open to all Chi Psi's of the state, and a number of members from various parts of the state have signified their intention of attending. Among those from out-of-town who will attend are Gordon Hall and Luther Moultrie, of Rome. Altogether, twenty-six members have accepted invitations to the dinner so far.

REV. R. A. BELSHAM WILL FILL HIS PULPIT TODAY

Rev. R. A. Belsham, of the Christian and Missionary alliance, will fill his pulpit both this morning and this afternoon. In the morning he will continue his talks on the Book of Nehemiah. In the afternoon his address will be "How to Live the Spirit-Filled Life."

The regular all-day meeting will be held Wednesday, September 1. At 11 o'clock Mr. Belsham will talk on "Divine Healing." Lunch at 1 o'clock. The Ladies' Missionary society at 2 p. m. Services again at 3 p. m. The public is invited.

Unable to Walk Boy Works Hard To Purchase Goat

With Animal to Draw His Little Wagon, Johnny Tuck Will Be Able to Aid Mother Support Family.

Johnny Turk, a 12-year-old newsboy from Lachapoka, Ala., wants a goat. Johnny came to Atlanta just to get a goat, and when he had sold enough papers to provide the necessary funds he is going to purchase the animal and return to Lachapoka.

Johnny's story is an interesting one and he tells it in just as cheerful a manner as he sells newspapers.

"I'm home of the young 'natvie'" is an humble one in Lachapoka. When Johnny was four years old he had typhoid fever which left him without the use of his lower limbs. As he grew older he found that it was easy to go to various places in a little express wagon which his mother purchased for him.

Goats for Johnny.

The only trouble with the express wagon was that there was no means of locomotion unless Johnny's brothers and sisters or his mother could find time to pull him where he wanted to go.

Brothers and sisters are not always obliging and mother didn't always have time to pull him, according to his statement, so one day he became the proud possessor of a pair of goats, which a friend gave him.

The problem was solved so far as locomotion was concerned and it was only a short time until Johnny was riding everywhere behind his obliging steeds.

An energetic little fellow and anxious to do his share in providing for the Turk household, Johnny soon was given a job picking cotton by the kind-hearted neighbors who took an interest in him.

He would take his miniature team to the fields and with them work until he had accomplished as much as possible in a day. In that manner he was a great help to his mother.

One of the goats died about two weeks ago and Johnny was unable to get another to take his place anywhere around his home.

He decided that he would come to Atlanta and earn enough money to buy the goat and then he would be all right.

On the train which brought the little fellow to Atlanta was a kind-hearted baggage clerk who heard the boy's statement and decided to do all in his power to help him.

Everybody is Kind.

Johnny was taken to the clerk's home and from there he comes to town every morning and is placed on a box at the corner of Broad and Alabama streets to sell papers.

There is a certain driver of a "jitney bus" who brings Johnny to town every morning and sees that he is comfortably fixed with papers before leaving him.

"People have been mighty good to me here," said Johnny, as he looked at the newspaper man with his everready smile. "When I get my goat I am not going to forget them, either."

The superintendent of the Associated Charities saw Johnny and the hard time he has. Saturday he decided that he would do all in his power to help him.

"I want a goat for that boy and I want to get it for him without it costing him a penny," said Superintendent Logan.

"If there is anyone in Atlanta who has an extra goat he should give it to Johnny."

AUTUMN WEATHER PROMISED TODAY FOR ATLANTANS

Despite threatening clouds that hovered over the city yesterday afternoon and threatened anything from a drizzle to a downpour, the weather man promises fair weather for Sunday.

Saturday was the coolest day of the season. The temperature dropped to 65 in the early morning hours and went down precipitately during the late afternoon. Blankets were in demand at daybreak and the Palm Beach suit wasn't any too comfortable throughout the day.

Today's temperature, it is predicted, will be autumnal.

FRED STEWART'S MOTHER DIES AT WEST END HOME

The announcement of the sudden death of Mrs. Emmie Newton Stewart, one of the city's most estimable women, will bring sorrow to a host of loving friends in this section. Mrs. Stewart was the mother of Fred S. Stewart, the well-known shoe merchant; A. J. Stewart, Jr., of this city, and Lon Stewart, of Chattanooga, Tenn., but formerly of Atlanta.

Mrs. Stewart lived at 133 Lee street, corner of Park, in West End, where her son, Fred, and family lived. She was taken ill Saturday morning, and grew gradually worse during the day, the end coming at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. She had lived in this city for thirty-five years, and was an active worker in the West End Baptist church. She was fifty-five years of age. Mrs. Stewart was a woman of most estimable character, beloved by all who knew her, and will be keenly missed from her large circle of friends, not only in West End, but throughout the city. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

ALDERMAN MADDOX GETS QUICK REVENGE

Alderman James W. Maddox was recently fined $10.75 by the recorder for driving a traction engine over the smooth pavement on Ponce de Leon avenue.

The alderman got his revenge Saturday morning, for W. A. Hansell, county superintendent of construction, was given a like fine for the same offense.

Alderman Maddox heard that Superintendent Hansell had ordered a traction engine to pass along Ponce de Leon avenue and he reported the matter to Nym Hurt, the city's chief of construction. A case was docketed against Hansell and he was fined.

GIDEONS TO PREPARE FOR ANNUAL MEETING

Preparations for the annual convention of Georgia Gideons will be made at the regular weekly meeting of the Atlanta camp in parlor E of the Ansley hotel this afternoon at 5:30 o'clock. Charles D. Ziegler, state president, will make the chief address. There will be special music and singing. All travelers and ladies are welcome.

The state convention will meet in Atlanta September 11 and 12. There are eight camps in the state and each is expected to send at least five delegates. Arrangements are being completed to entertain at this time not only the delegates present, but any Gideon who may be in the city attending the convention.

GRANT THREE PATENTS TO GEORGIA INVENTORS

Three patents from Georgia were granted at Washington during the week, according to the report of the official patent office gazette. In a total of 726 patents for the entire United States, New York led with 135. A total of 53 patents were registered from foreign countries, Germany leading with 17.

Good Roads Expert Here to Help Start Model Convict Camp

Work of constructing the proposed "model" camp for Fulton county convicts in co-operation with the United States government, is expected to begin next week, according to reports from the office of county commissioners. J. E. Pennybacker, of Washington, federal good roads expert, arrived in Atlanta Saturday to supervise the inauguration of the camp.

NEGRO DOCTOR DIES IN LAUNDRY WAGON

J. F. McDougal, a negro doctor and proprietor of the McDougal drug store at Piedmont and Houston streets, died mysteriously while en route to the Grady hospital in a laundry wagon at 8 o'clock Saturday night. McDougal had complained of feeling badly at his store a few minutes before 8 o'clock and the driver of the wagon agreed to take him direct to the hospital. When intimes at the city institution went to help him from the wagon a few minutes later he was dead. An inquest will be held over the body.

No better evidence of the value of military training is needed than that furnished by the present European War. Those nations that require military training not only lead in military affairs, but in their business efficiency and capacity for detail have astounded the world by what military trained men can do in civil life. Preparation begets perfection.
An Ideal Preparatory School
Barracks, mess hall and class rooms electric lighted, steam heated, sunshiny and spotless, built of brick, and crowning the top of one of the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains, with lindied ranges fading in the distance, the Chattahoochee River sprawling at its feet, and Lake Warner right at hand is the setting of Riverside, the most completely equipped school for boys in the South. Two miles out from the cultured city of Gainesville, an all year round health resort, it possesses every requirement and environment which goes to prepare boys for College, West Point, Annapolis or commercial life. The teaching force is composed of experienced instructors of conspicuous success in handling boys. Every cadet recites every lesson every day. A tutorial system insures personal efficiency.
The moral atmosphere of Riverside is religious and democratic. A member of the faculty is always within three doors of each cadet's room. Strict military discipline is maintained by active West Point army officer detailed by U.S. War Department. Out door drills daily. Campus of 2,000 acres affords ample opportunity for manoeuvres, target practice, drills, bridge building, etc. Riverside has always been noted for its athletic supremacy and championship teams. EXTRA INNING TIE IN CITY SERIES

Atlanta Nationals and Agogas Battle Until Darkness Ends Their Efforts.

Battling ten innings to a thrilling 2 to 2 tie, the Agogas and the Atlanta National staged the second game of the series at Brisbine park yesterday afternoon.

The game was exciting and thrilling throughout, replete with spectacular plays and breathless moments.

York, the elongated hurler of the Agoga team, was in hard luck throughout, and although he pitched every ball, as if the game depended thereon, and allowed only four scattering blows, the best he could get was a tie. The Agoga team played like a lot of sand lotters behind him, and put up absolutely the worst exhibition of fielding and base running imaginable.

Golightly, on the other hand, was extremely lucky to get away with a tie game, and if the Agogas had been playing anything like their usual brand of ball, he would have been beaten easily. Golightly was not in as good form as he usually is, and the Agogas hit him freely.

Agogas Count First.

The Agogas counted first in the third, when one run was sent across on three successive hits. The game then cocked along until the seventh, when Ewing, of the tank team, tripled to center, making a three-bagger on what should have been a single, due to the center fielder's desire to make a sensational one-handed stab of the ball. He scored on an out.

The Agogas took the lead in their half of the seventh, when a run was scored on a triple and an infield out. In the eighth, the bank team tied the count again, when Lester tripled to deep right and counted on an infield out.

In the tenth the bank team counted one, and large gobs of gloom settled over the Agoga supporters.

However, Mayfield brought joy to their hearts and dissipated the gloom by doubling to center on the first ball pitched. The next man sacrificed him to third and the next hoisted a long fly to center, tieing the count. The game was called at the expiration of the time, due to darkness.

Next Game at Poncey.

The two teams will meet again at Ponce de Leon next Saturday, and another hectic battle is promised.

Over 700 people witnessed the game Saturday, and it is expected that double this number will turn out next Saturday.

Stone Mountain Wins Again.

Stone Mountain defeated the Terra Cotta team of Atlanta this afternoon by the score of 6 to 0, the game being much more interesting than the score would indicate. The features of the game were the excellent fielding and base running of the entire Stone Mountain team and the air-tight batting of Chewning, the ex-Lynchburg-Rome star, who has rounded into great form recently, giving up only two hits and striking out twelve of the heavy Terra Cotta batters. Chewning, with the form displayed recently, is assured of a berth higher up next season.

Batteries—Dodd and Carnes; McDaniel and Jolly.

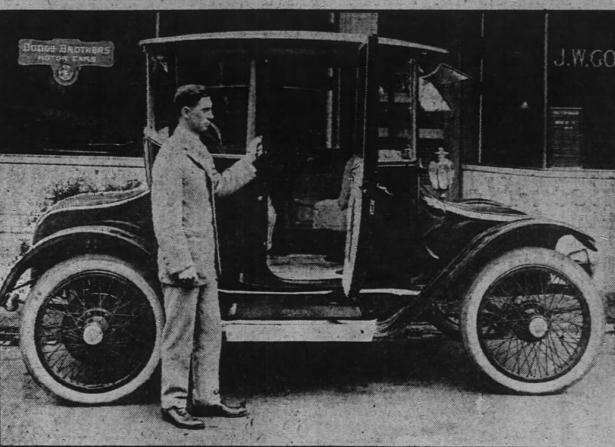
Powder Springs 4, Marietta 3.

Powder Springs, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Powder Springs won a fast and well played game from the strong Marietta team on the home grounds here this afternoon. The score was 4 to 2. The feature was the batting of Chandler of the locals. Batteries—Marietta: Patten and Phillips; Powder Springs, Moseley and Landrum.

Douglasville Wins.

Douglasville, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Douglasville defeated White's all-star team of Atlanta in the deciding game of the series here this afternoon, 5 to 1. The feature of the game was the pitching of Lowery for the locals. Parker for the visitors was wild and ineffective. Batteries—All-Stars, Parker and Wise; Douglasville, Lowery and Smith.

New Detroit Electric Cabriolet Wins Welcome



New model being displayed at Hudson show rooms, 46 E. North ave., expected to be a winner this season.

"The American business man is no longer a mere automobile buyer, who may be influenced this way or that by the sales talk of an automobile salesman," says W. C. Anderson, president of the Anderson Electric Car company.

"This same business man, who a few years ago was helpless so far as being able to wisely determine the merits of various automobile types, is today keen not only on car construction, but also knows the type of car to purchase for the work he has to do.

"So it is only a logical sequence that as business men study the automobile situation, as it is related to their daily transporation requirements, that they should more and more favor the electric car of today.

"The effeminately designed car of several years ago, with its dainty trimmings, short mileage radius and slow speed, naturally could not have filled the demands of the hustling (impatient of delays) American business man. But the American business man's characteristics which prevented his buying an electric car of the old type are now prompting him to buy the electric car of today, for he is confident when he starts in an electric car, he will reach his destination promptly and without difficulty.

"The appearance of the 1915 Detroit electric cabriolet model is worthy of approval by the reddest of our red bloods. Every line of its low-hung body bespeaks speed, efficiency and power. In performance the new Detroit cabriolet has proved its practicability beyond a doubt.

"Many men who in the past have more or less patiently put up with the delays occasioned by one of the thousand sources of trouble in the gasoline car, especially in cold weather, have learned that they have been carrying an unnecessary burden.

"Sales reports of the Anderson Electric Car company show that the sale of their cars is now for their own use have increased more than 200 per cent since the snappy-appearing, fast and sturdy men's models have been offered for sale. Much of the electric car advertising in the past has been devoted to promiting the electric exclusively for women. True it was that the characteristics of the electric car of the early days was somewhat effeminate, but this situation has changed.

"Business men find the electric roadster or cabriolet of today ideal in appearance, simplicity of operation, low upkeep cost, availability for immediate use at all times of day or night, continuous satisfactory performance in winter as well as summer, and flexibility in crowded traffic. Aside from these characteristics, which may be secured in the electrically propelled vehicle only, a demonstration will prove to the most skeptical that ample speed and mileage is offered."

MATTY'S GASTONIA CLUB WINS FLAG

Copped the Western Carolina League Pennant From Lenoir by One Game.

Harry Matthews must be some manager. At least he has established a record for other mnanazers to shoot at. Matty has won two pennants in one season.

He piloted his Newnan club in the Georgia-Alabama league to a pennant and then after the season closed went to Gastonia, took charge of the team there, taking some of his Newnan players with him, and won the pennant in the Western Carolina league.

The season came to close with the games played Saturday, and Matty finished one game ahead of the Lenoir team in second place.

Fabre Wins Marathon.

San Francisco, August 28.—Eduard Fabre, of the Richmond Athletic club, Montreal, Canada, today won the Amateur Athletic union national championship in the full Marathon race of 26 miles, 385 yards. H. Honahan, of the New York Athletic club, despite a sore foot, finished second. Oliver Millard, of the Olympic club, long distance runner, was third.

Following are the times:
Honahan, 3:01:22.2.
Millard, 3:11:36.3.

SCENES ON GOLF COURSE WHICH OPENS SATURDAY

and a pitch to get home, with rolling ground, and doubtful lies after the tee shot unless well hit. A straight second shot on this hole, with plenty of distance, opens up the hole for the third shot. A hooked tee shot is out of bounds, a sliced in the woods. Bogey 5. Par 5.

Hole Lengthened.

No. 5. 380 yards. This hole was formerly a 298 yard carry hole, with valleys between the tee and the green. From the new tee, a well hit drive will put the player in position to play a full iron shot for the green, though if hit too far, a down hill lie might cause trouble. A hooked ball will get into trouble, but a sliced ball will penalize only that the green will not be reached on the second. Bogey 5. Par 5.

No. 6. 125 yards. A mashie pitch hole, requiring accuracy in pitching. A topped shot finds plenty of trouble. Bogey 3. Par 3.

No. 7. 483 yards. Requires two full wooden shots and a pitch to get to the green. The tee shot, if sliced, makes it extremely difficult to carry a mash of 100 yards at the foot of the fairway, or to shoot across straight requires a shot of more than full iron. A hooked ball from the tee gets in the woods. A topped second shot causes the loss of a stroke, as the ball runs down an embankment into the water. The green is on a plateau, and if overshot, will cause trouble and probably the loss of the hole. Bogey 5. Par 5.

No. 8. 265 yards. The tee is located alongside of the seventh green. An arm of the lake must be driven over, a carry of 175 yards to clear the rough on the other side of the lake and reach the fairway. The green is built on a terrace, half the way between the old tee and the old green. A topped, hooked or sliced ball will cost a stroke in each instance. The tee shot must be straight, to enable the player to reach the green in two. Bogey 4. Par 4.

No. 9. 410 yards. The tee is situated near the road that borders the old number 7 fairway. The fairway and the drive is diagonally across the eighth fairway, requiring two full shots to get home. Bogey 5. Par 4.

The Second Side.

No. 10. 210 yards. A full cleek or brassie shot for the green. A sliced ball will be out of bounds and a hooked ball leaves a difficult pitch about forty feet up on the terrace, with the possibility of being out of bounds if over. The tee shot on this hole must be straight to get reach. Bogey 3, par 3.

No. 11. 410 yards. A drive and a brassie or a cleek. A sliced second will be out of bounds. A sliced second shot will also be out of bounds. The second shot with cleek or brassie must be straight to reach the green, as the ground slopes to the left after the top of the hill is reached. The second shot will be mostly carry. Bogey 5, par 4.

No. 12. 172 yards. A mid-iron shot, requiring accuracy in direction. A three-foot ditch borders the green, and this must be carried from the tee. The tee shot must be played high to stick, though there is little trouble beyond. Bogey 3, par 3.

No. 13. 425 yards. This is an elbow hole, with the 200-yard flag located right at the turn. A full, straight tee shot is necessary to open up the hole for the second shot. A hooked tee shot will get into a ditch, rough or the woods. A sliced tee shot out of bounds. The second shot if one is even or beyond the 200-yard flag, requires a full shot for the green, with a hazard running across in front of the green, 25 yards from the edge. There is a ditch on each side of the terrace green, which makes it imperative that the second shot be not only long, but straight, if the player hopes to make a par; but by playing the second shot and pitching over, the average player will get probably the best results. Bogey 5, par 5.

Sporty Drive and Pitch.

No. 14. 200 yards. A well-hit drive will put the player in position to pitch up the rise to the green, which is on a knoll, but a drive of more than 220 yards may wind up in a ditch, while a drive of 160 yards might find a sizzag ditch. The tee shot should have a carry of 160 yards, and sufficiently high enough to stay between the two ditches, to make an ideal second shot. Bogey 4, par 4.

No. 15. 135 yards. This is a mashie pitch hole to a circus ring that is bordered by a wide, deep bunker that must be carried, if one does not possess a niblick that is in good working order. Bogey 3, par 3.

No. 16. 378 yards. Requires two full wood shots to get home. The tee shot is 150 yards up hill, then is level until about 50 yards beyond the 200-yard flag, then slopes down hill again, only to rise sharply to the green. The second shot must be well hit, requiring all carry to reach the green. A sliced tee shot on this hole will be out of bounds. Bogey 5. Par 5.

No. 17. 435 yards. A well hit tee shot will put one in position to play an iron for the green. It is imperative that the tee shot be well hit, or the second shot will result in a hanging lie that will make it difficult to reach the green on the second. A ditch bordering the green, 20 yards short, and this ditch must be carried. The player cannot hope to strike on the rise of the green and get on, as it is terraced at the back in such that one must hit in the flat just short of the terrace and just over the ditch and run up, or carry all the way to the green, which is sufficiently large to stick on, with no trouble behind. A bank, however, might interfere with the backward stroke of the club if over. Bogey 5. Par 5.

Last Hole Hard.

No. 18. 600 yards. Here is a hole where the player can tell exactly what will result from the other two shots, the hole requiring three full shots to reach the green and all three must be well hit. Unless the tee shot is well hit the player cannot hope to get home in two shots, as it is uphill all the way. The three shots must be played also with an idea to carry all the way, as there will be very little roll on any of the shots. A sliced second or third shot will reach the woods. Bogey 6. Par 5.

Boge—Out	534 543 545—40
Par—Out	434 543 544—36
Bogey—In	453 543 556—40
Par—In	443 543 455—36

Canton 3, Marietta 1.

Canton, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—In a fast and snappy game here this afternoon, Canton defeated Marietta by a score of 3 to 1. This game decided the championship of the two cities, a series of four games having been played. Canton won two and tied one. The all-round playing of the Canton team and the superb pitching of Frank Hunt featured. Rucker, pitching for the Marietta team, gave up ten hits, while the Marietta team only got at Hunt for four hits. This game practically closed the season in Canton, and it has been very successful from a local standpoint. The batteries for the afternoon's work were Hunt and Richards for Canton and Rucker and Kemp for Marietta.

PAIGE

The Standard of Value and Quality

A Still Greater Paige at a Still Lower Price

You know—for everybody knows—the Paige "Six-46."

You know that it has been the most popular six-cylinder car introduced this season. You know, perhaps, that since we introduced the Paige "Six-46" last January—at $1395—we have never caught up with our orders; that it has been necessary to double the mammoth Paige plant and Paige production to meet the overwhelming demand for this history-making car.

But, perhaps, you don't know yet the New Paige "Six-46"—at the still more astonishing price—$100 less—$1295.

That is not remarkable. It is not only, in the essentials, the big, powerful, beautiful, luxurious seven-passenger car which—at $1395—has swept the country for seven months. But—

It is even a more beautiful, more luxurious car, a still more unparalleled Value, a still more convincing proof of Paige Quality Supreme.

That this is an even Greater Paige "Six" (for $100 less) is instantly evident to you in such new features as the exquisitely beautiful upholstery of genuine glace hand-buffed French leather in the new Pantasote top, and in the magnificent painting and lasting lustre of the finish. The fine Richelieu blue of the body and the red trimming of the running gear give the new Paige "Six" an even smarter appearance and more distinctive character.

With this Car we challenge the World.

We want you to convince yourself that this lowering of the Paige price has actually accompanied an increase in Quality. You will be amazed to find that new beauty, new luxury for the new price—$1295.

You must also see the New Paige Hollywood "Six-36". This is a five-passenger "Six"—with all the Paige power, beauty and luxury—$1095.

WHITE TRUCKS Awarded the GRAND PRIZE

BY THE PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION AT SAN FRANCISCO

THE ONLY GRAND PRIZE—THE HIGHEST AWARD FOR MOTOR TRUCKS

Was conferred upon White Trucks by the Superior Jury of Award, as officially announced by the Secretary of the Jury under date of August Second.

This is the ONLY GRAND PRIZE received by any motor truck at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition.

This decision of the Superior Jury of Award reflects the opinion of the largest users of motor trucks throughout the world—and is in accordance with the actual service results of motor truck experience. The points of merit upon which the Grand Prize is awarded are identical with those that have determined the selection of White Trucks by America's foremost firms in every line of business.

White supremacy in the motor truck industry is thus recognized by the highest award that can be bestowed by the greatest exposition the world has ever known—just as this supremacy has been recognized by motor truck users for many years.

REGARDING OTHER CLAIMS

The decision of the Superior Jury is final in the matter of Exposition awards. Hence any announcements of other motor truck manufacturers, claiming to have received the Grand Prize and Highest Award for motor trucks at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, are automatically denied by this decision of the Superior Jury of Award.

ALAMO NO. 2 PROVIDES GOOD BILL FOR WEEK

Wm. Farnum in "The Plunderer," Monday—Clara Kimball Young, Tuesday.

Patrons of movies will find at Alamo No. 2 the coming week a variety of pictures which should please every taste. For Monday this theater offers William Farnum in a five-reel William Fox production, "The Plunderer," a screen play adapted from Roy Norton's international success. The scenes for the play were made in Dahlonega, in the deserted gold mine regions of Georgia mountains. In it is shown a thrilling bare-knuckled battle, said to be positively terrific in its ferociousness.

Tuesday will be offered Clara Kimball Young and Earl Williams in a five-reel Vitagraph production of Russian life, "My Official Wife." The story is woven around a beautiful Nihilist, who, in order to get by the secret police on the frontier of Russia, induces an American to introduce her as his wife, in order that she may enter on his passport. After many exciting experiences the beautiful Nihilist and her lover lose their lives in a terrific vessel explosion.

Wednesday brings pretty Betty Nansen in William Fox's five-reel photoplay, "Anna Karenina." The play is based on Count Leo Tolstoi's drama of a woman who dared, and it is claimed that Miss Nansen, the Royal actress, in this production surpasses even her own great genius. One critic says of the play:

"Anna is a product of modern civilization and convention. She dares to defy it, and is forthwith stretched upon the cruel rack of the judgment of society. It is a tremendous sermon on the irredeemable fixity of the moral code and the fearful fate of those who seek to defy it."

For Thursday the management offers Daniel Frohman's presentation of Mary Pickford as "Fanchon, the Cricket." As Fanchon "Little Mary" portrays the famed role of the lonely, uncouth girl of the woods, who rises above the animosity and cruelty of the villagers who persecute, until she reaches the greatest heights that woman can attain—devotion to her lover and her supreme sacrifice for his life and happiness.

Friday will be presented Marguerite Clark in "The Pretty Sister of Jose." This picture is an impressive and sympathetic portrayal of a subject that has furnished the finest prose and verse in every language—love in its tenderest form. The scenery is exquisite, and faithfully reflects the atmosphere of the story.

Saturday "Hearts and Roses" will be the bill, featuring Darwin Karr in a three-reel Essanay drama.

AT THE GRAND.

Coming Week's Bill Is Fully Up to Standard.

With the first showing in Atlanta of Paramount and Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay features, the Grand is building a reputation of a movie house without disappointments, and the coming week's bill is fully up to the standard of excellence set by the management.

Hazel Dawn, in "The Heart of Jennifer," Monday and Tuesday; Grace Darmond and Harry Mestayer, in "The House of a Thousand Candles," Wednesday and Thursday, and Joan Barrymore, in "The Incorrigible Dukane," Friday and Saturday, make up a week of real diversity and entertainment that is as rare as it is pleasing.

The first production is a Paramount drama of startling situations, at the same time unconventional and delightfully refreshing—one of the plays that creeps up on one until it holds the undivided attention and interest.

"The House of a Thousand Candles" has more opportunities for photography and effect that it is a difficult question to decide just which one scene is the most interesting. It also has a touch of mystery that is appealing. The production as a whole is fully up to the very high standard of the Selig Red Seal features of the V-L-S-E, and will please all who see it.

A little comedy, a little tragedy and a little drama is the mixture of "The Incorrigible Dukane," and John Barrymore takes full advantage of them all in the big Paramount picture. He is peculiarly fitted to the part, or the part to him, and interest is held throughout, with changes in scenes that make the time pass unnoticed.

With such a showing the Grand will doubtless be filled with lovers of the silent drama throughout the entire week.

The offering at the Vaudette for the coming week is one which should interest all fans who love the best in picturesque dramatic photo-plays. Beginning Monday, will be shown "The Toast of Death," or the "Fate of a Vampire." Louise Glaum, vivacious little player of the New York Motion Picture corporation, who portrays Poppea, a member of the imperial ballet in this gripping four-part Mutual Masterpiece of picturesque India, has, after months of hard work, seen her greatest ambition realized. For months she had desired to play the lead in a Mutual Masterpiece, but it was not until Director Thomas H. Ince cast her for the role of Poppea that her life's ambition became a reality.

Wednesday will be screened "Infatuation," a heart-moving photo-drama of love and devotion. Marguerita Fischer is featured in this Mutual Masterpiece, depicting the struggles and hardships a woman will endure for the man she loves.

AT THE ALSHA.

Motion picture fans of West End are going to have the opportunity of enjoying the very best in the movies, a contract having been signed by W. G. Corley for the productions of the Vitagraph-Lublin-Selig-Essanay, Inc.

"The Island of Regeneratino," the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature, is the first offering, this great master picture to be shown at the Alsha Monday and Tuesday.

This production is from the pen of Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady, and its adaptation to motion pictures is wonderfully successful. It is a picture that will leave a good taste in the mouth and a desire to emulate the splendid examples set forth in the big screen production.

On account of the greatly increased cost, these big pictures will be shown at 10 cents admission instead of 5 cents, as heretofore. It is a desire to give West End the best to be had that the management has incurred this additional expense and increased the price of admission.

Some Things the Movie Fans Can See the Coming Week

(1) Nat Goodwin in "The Master Hand," at the Strand Monday and Tuesday; (2) Scene from "The House of a Thousand Candles," at the Grand Wednesday and Thursday; (3) A lovable little character in "The Island of Regeneration," at the Alsha Monday and Tuesday; (4) Marie Cahill in "Judy Forgot," at the Savoy Tuesday; (5) Marguerite Clark in "The Pretty Sister of Jose," at Alamo No. 2 Tuesday.

NAT GOODWIN COMES TO STRAND MONDAY

Wednesday and Thursday, "Her Great Match," and Friday, Viola Dana.

Lovers of strong dramas—dramas which hold and interest and thrill—will find the coming week's program at the Strand especially to their liking.

First comes on Monday and Tuesday Nat Goodwin in "The Master Hand," a World film release in five parts.

"Nat" is welcome in pictures. As an actor he is versatile; his name and personality are familiar to millions. Any picture in which he appears is assured, in advance, of special attention. "The Master Hand" is a strong drama, with a trio of villains just about as villainous as villains can be. There are (1) a husband who marries a rich widow, wants her money and stops at nothing short of slow murder to gain his ends; (2) a female accomplice, a lady doctor, who drugs the unsuspecting woman and plans to marry hubby when the wife dies; (3) a rascally doctor who keeps a private sanitarium and conspires with hubby and the lady doctor to have the wife committed to his sanitarium. Clever production, good photography, earnest acting and many exciting and thrilling climaxes characterize this picture, which will surely please, interest and hold any motion picture audience nowadays when the demand is for feature films is for modern themes of sustained interest.

Wednesday and Thursday bring a Metro Pictures release, the Popular Plays and Players' photodramatic production of Clyde Fitch's famous play, "Her Great Match," in which the brilliant and beautiful dramatic actress, Gail Kane, has the stellar role. Her work in "Her Great Match" is of a sort which may fairly be said to surpass all her previous efforts on the legitimate stage, and will win for her new laurels with the amusement-loving public. It is in five acts; 200 scenes and required an unusually large cast. It is brimful of touching sentiment and gripping situations and contains a plot which for tensely dramatic power has seldom been equaled on the screen.

Friday will be offered "House of the Lost Court," an Edison picture on the Paramount program, made from Williamson's novel, and in which is featured to fine advantage Viola Dana, late star of "The Poor Little Rich Girl." The story has many complications and is characterized by thrills, sentiment and fantasy. It deals with the mysterious effect of an East Indian drug known as the "sleep of death," which, strange to say, saves the life of Sir Anthony Elliott, artist and nobleman, convicted of murder and sentenced to death on the perjured testimony of a woman whose love he has not returned. It is well worth seeing.

Saturday the Strand will show George Nash in "The Cotton King," a photo-play based on Sutton Vane's well-known stage play of the same name. Sensation after sensation follows in this film play. John Osborne, "the cotton king," refused to join in a "corner" and his enemies swear to ruin him. He buys a mill down south; the mill takes fire. He falls in love with one girl and is wrongfully accused of ruining another. The bottom falls out of the market and he is ruined.

Then the villain of the piece, John Osborne's rival, tries to kill John's girl, but the girl escapes from the threatening elevator, and the villain is unmasked, the cotton king and his fiancee are married and made happy. As usual, the Strand orchestra, under the leadership of M. Percy Lynn, has arranged a beautiful and attractive program of music for the entire week.

AT THE ALPHA.

"Jewel" and "That Texas Quartet" Week's Features.

To meet what seems an insistent demand for something especially good—both in the vaudeville and photo-play line—the management of the Alpha has brought back for the coming week "That Texas Quartet," and has staged for Tuesday that sweetest and prettiest of stories, "Jewel."

That Texas quartet has long been a favorite in the city, and Alpha audiences never seem to tire of the catchy songs, the splendid harmony and the bright little bits of comedy thrown in by the singers. The quartet will be there all week.

On Monday, as usual, "The Broken Coin" (ninth episode) will be shown, featuring Grace Cunard and Francis Ford.

Tuesday comes Ella Hall in that wonderfully fascinating production by Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley, "Jewel." The story itself is a sermon that appeals to everyone—the children and the grown-ups—filled with a new thought and a remarkable doctrine, which is lived and acted by dainty and sweet little Ella Hall, who fits ideally into the part.

Augusta, Ga., August 28.—(Special Correspondence.)—The most important social event of the week was the marriage of Miss Georgia Rucker Hull to Mr. Robert Heverly Herbert, of Columbia, S. C., which occurred Wednesday evening at St. Paul's Episcopal church, the rector, Rev. G. Sherwood Whitney, officiating. Because of bereavement in the family no cards were issued, but a number of the friends of the beautiful bride witnessed the ceremony together with the family connection. The bride's cousin, Miss Mary Loon Tobin, as maid of honor, was the only attendant, and her little niece, Katherine Hull, was flower girl. The bride entered with her father, Dr. James M. Hull, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Dr. William Pinckney Herbert. The chancel was beautifully decorated with palms, lilies and candles, and after the ceremony members of the family and bridal party only repaired to the family residence, where, after receiving congratulations and good wishes, the wedding gown was changed for a going-away tailored suit and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert left for a northern trip, after which they will make their home in Columbia. Miss Georgia Hull is one of the handsomest and most charming young women among the debutantes of the past few years, gracious in manner and popular with young and old. The groom is a Virginian, who has made his home in Columbia, where he is a member of the bar and popular both professionally and socially.

Mr. James Garner and Miss Julia Grayson were married Wednesday afternoon at 6 o'clock at the home of the bride, 1809 Broad street, Rev. John W. Tyndall officiating. The marriage was a quiet one and witnessed only by the family and intimate friends.

Mrs. Smolensky has been her guests Miss Annie Morris, of Atlanta, and Miss Henrietta Givner, of Charleston, who has just returned from the Pacific coast, where she took in the big Exposition and the Panama Canal, and is stopping over a few days en route home.

A beautiful home wedding occurred on Tuesday evening at the residence, 560 Broad street, of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Sawilowsky, when Miss Sara Sawilowsky and Mr. Alton Gilman, of Sparta, Ga., were married, Rabbi Poliakoff officiating. The large rooms were thrown en suite and the home was attractively decorated in white and green, the floors covered with crash, palms and fern, and white and green ferns being artistically employed in decoration. There were some two hundred guests, and Andonegui's orchestra furnished delightful music for the occasion. The attendants were Miss Pearl Sawilowsky, Miss Fannie Sawilowsky and Tillie Barker, of Atlanta; Miss Sara Levy, Mr. Harry Sawilowsky, of New Orleans, and Messrs. Samuel, Jacob and James Sawilowsky, brothers of the bride. The maid of honor was Miss Mollie Sawilowsky, who entered alone. Immediately preceding the bride came little Birdie Sawilowsky as flower girl and Oscar Allen, of Columbia, as page-ringbearer. The bride was accompanied by her father and mother and Mrs. Goldberg, and the groom entered with his best man, Mr. Michel Kantor, and his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. A. Allen, of Columbia. The ushers were Mr. Mitchell Blum, Mr. C. S. Sawilowsky, Mr. Abe Levy, Mr. Sawilowsky and congratulations the bride and groom led the way to the upper floor, where three large rooms were used for seating the guests at a delightful wedding supper. When the guests returned to the lower floor the rooms had been cleared for dancing, which was enjoyed till a late hour. Mr. and Mrs. Gillman left for the mountains of North Carolina for a stay of several weeks before going to their home in Sparta.

MADISON, GA.

Misses Harriet and Annie Graham Reeves entertained very delightfully at a "prom" party Thursday night in honor of their house guest, Miss Natalie Stokes, of Atlanta. Punch, cream and cake were served during the evening.

Mrs. J. E. Godfrey is visiting her son, Mr. Sam Avery, in Atlanta.

Miss Estelle Williford entertained at rook on Tuesday afternoon. A large crowd was present and a most enjoyable time was spent. After the games delicious ices were served.

Mrs. Ernest Darge and little daughter, Martha, and Miss Georgia Ransaur, of Byron, are visiting Mrs. Ladice H. W. Baldwin.

Senator and Mrs. G. D. Perry, Misses Clara and Mary Knight Perry are visiting the San Francisco fair.

Mrs. W. A. Jarboe, Miss Ree Jarboe, Mrs. Jacob Cunningham and Mr. Ed Fears and family are spending several days at Indian Springs.

Mr. Frank Austin and Mr. John Little are spending the week in the mountains of North Carolina, making the trip in Mr. Austin's new tondster.

Mrs. J. H. Purnell and Miss Vesta Turnell have moved to Elberton to make their home.

Miss Emily George has returned from a three weeks' visit to her grandmother in Newton county.

Mrs. Phinps, of Atlanta, has been the guest of Mrs. C. L. Hadenberg.

COVINGTON, GA.

The beautiful home of Miss Charlie Irene Porter, of Porterdale, was the scene of one of the prettiest and most delightful social events of the summer season last Wednesday evening, when her niece, Miss Mary Porter, entertained a number of Covington friends at a prom party.

Mrs. S. F. Thompson and daughter, Mrs. Count D. Gibson, returned a few friends at a most enjoyable spending-day party on Wednesday at their country home above Porterdale. The guests were classmates of Mrs. Thompson at Wesleyan, Mrs. C. C. Guinn, Mrs. J. A. Wright, Mrs. Charles H. White, Mrs. H. H. Anderson and Miss Eleanor Henry.

A number of congenial friends spent last Wednesday with Mrs. Floyd Newton at her country home near Madison.

Among the pleasant social events of last week was that at which Mrs. Howard Delaney entertained a number of guests on Friday evening at Hotel Delaney in compliment to her guest, Miss Catherine Schubert, of Columbus. Miss Caroline Wooten was the lovely hostess on Monday afternoon, when she entertained a number of friends at an al fresco party.

A delightful event of last week and a pretty compliment to two charming visitors was the prom party given by Miss Eugenia Guinn on Saturday evening, after which Misses Mildred Bond and Miss Louise Richardson, the guests of Miss Caroline Wooten, both of Atlanta.

SUMMERVILLE, GA.

Mrs. A. S. Hinton very delightfully entertained a number of the younger set at her home on Union street Monday afternoon at a porch party, from 4 until 6 o'clock, in honor of her guest, Miss Laura Wyatt, of Atlanta.

One of the prettiest events of last week was the rook party given by Mrs. J. H. Shumate, at her home Friday afternoon, complimenting her sister, Mrs. H. P. Jumper, of Columbia, S. C.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Shumate entertained about thirty-five guests on Tuesday evening complimentary to Mrs. Shumate's sisters, Mrs. Jumper and Miss Minnie Farmer, of Columbia, S. C., at the country home of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Lamb, north of town.

Mrs. S. V. Polk, of Menlo, entertained at a spend-the-day party Tuesday in honor of Miss Grace King, of Summerville.

The local chapter, U. D. C., held an interesting meeting at the home of Mrs. John R. Cleghorn on Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Miss Grace Wright delightfully entertained a number of her friends Saturday evening from 7:30 to 11 o'clock.

At a recent meeting of the local W. C. T. U., officers were elected for the ensuing year, as followes: Miss Ollie Weathers, president; Miss Allie Bryant, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Janie Bolling, recording secretary; Mrs. J. M. Jackson, treasurer; Mrs. G. P. Mahan, superintendent of press work; Mrs. A. D. Espy, superintendent of prison work; Mrs. Marks, superintendent of scientific temperance; Mrs. John League, superintendent flower mission; Mrs. A. S. Hinton, superintendent of health and heredity.

The Strange Romance of the Red-Headed Nurse

Corporal Wallace of the King's Horse Always Wanted to Marry a Girl With Golden Locks. Wasn't It Lucky That Miss Cameron's Mysterious Old Uncle Left Her a Lake in the Land of the Incas and That Bathing in These Waters Turned Her Hair a Beautiful Red?

Mrs. David Wallace, Who Inherited Fortune and Lake Which Turned Hair Red and Won Her Soldier Husband.

HERE'S a romantic story, mates, about a Chicago girl, red hair and a warrior bold. Of course, they're married now and are honeymooning in far-off Norway.

But when the yarn is spun of how She transformed the color of her hair from a rich black to a Titian red by dipping it into a queer lake in South America, and of how He, in a Quest of the Golden Girl, found her in Europe—well, then, shiver our timbers! We'll confess it's an astounding and a mighty pretty yarn. Moreover, like all stories that are true, this one is stranger than fiction.

There are two people, however, who are willing and eager to tell how true it all is. One is Corporal David Wallace, formerly of King Edward's Horse—hero of the battle of Neuve Chapelle, who was shot in the leg there and disabled from further service, and who afterward married Miss Rosalind Cameron, formerly of Chicago.

In his early years Wallace, a young Englishman whose parents are well to do, had dreamed, as adolescent youths are wont to do, that he would marry only a girl with golden hair. So he waited and waited. The war came on. He marched to the front, was shot and sent to a hospital near Paris. There he met Miss Cameron, who had gone to Europe with the intention of becoming a trained nurse.

Adventurer Loses Heart.

The rest of the story can be told in four words—"Love, Marriage, Honeymoon, Happiness." As before stated, it's a strange yarn, so let's begin at the beginning:

Twenty-four years ago Rosalind Cameron was born in the good old village of Mayfair, Ill. When she was 3 years old the family moved into Chicago. Rosalind grew into a pretty, dark-haired, brown-eyed lass. One day when, at the age of 9, she returned from school her mother cried:

"Rosie, a man is here who wants to see you. He's your uncle, John Aspinwall. Now, put on a clean frock and come into the parlor."

Rosie did. There she met John Aspinwall, gray haired, severe looking, who for a score of years had been leading an adventurous life in the wilds of South America.

A crusty old bachelor, the uncle became greatly attached to the vivacious child. For days he visited at the Cameron home. During the latter part of his stay he spoke of mysterious old mines he was working in the Brazilian wilds and gave Rosie a wonderful emerald which he said had been taken from one of them.

"Some day, Rosalind," he said to her, "you shall see those mines and have all the emeralds you want."

Bravely Faces World.

It seemed an idle promise, for John Aspinwall left Chicago and the years swept by without even a word from him telling of his whereabouts. The girl grew to be a young woman. Then suddenly fate left her alone in the world. Her parents were drowned during a vacation trip on Lake Superior and the pretty orphan girl found herself cast on the world with a small bit of insurance money.

Miss Cameron went to New York looking for opportunities. She had musical ambitions and hoped with her voice to enter grand opera. She found herself engaged on a hopeless quest. For two years she struggled along in the cold-hearted metropolis and the goal of her desire was ever as far in the future. Her small funds were soon depleted and she was forced to seek employment as a clerk in one of the big department stores.

One evening when she returned to her lodgings she found a mysterious-looking letter bearing a Brazilian stamp which had been forwarded to Chicago and various addresses before it found her. The letter was written in Spanish, and Miss Cameron could not learn the secret. One old crone finally, under the bribe of a few yards of calico, told the emerald queen that the red hair was a tribal secret that had been handed down for several generations.

stated that Aspinwall had decreed that his niece must go to his estates near Olivenca and actually take possession of them. There he was buried. A pathetic little codicil in the will asked that she herself look after his grave. Thus it is with soldiers of fortune. They have the hearts of gold and souls of steel, which melt only at a smile from a child or a pretty woman.

And thus it was Miss Cameron found herself wealthy, but she had to go to Brazil to claim that wealth. Would she go alone? Well, rather! What girl who braves a subway rush or an elevated jam twice a day is afraid of a savage land?

With the proper legal documents she went to Brazil and thence to the upper Amazon country, a place little visited by white women. She found many strange things in that place of shudders, where death ever stalks and life is one of the cheapest of commodities. But the strangest discovery was a small lake on her late uncle's estate, a lake whose waters, she learned, turns the hair of human beings a rich, deep red.

It was quite by accident that Miss Cameron discovered the wonderful secret of the lake, which is among some hills near one of the mines. She had been amazed by the number of red-haired natives of a particular tribe. Although all the other natives roundabout had raven locks, the women of this particular tribe, the Ucayali, who claim direct descent from the ancient Incas, who once ruled over Peru, had brilliant red hair.

The Ucayalis' Secret.

Miss Cameron also noted that the small girls of the tribe had black locks like the other natives, but that when the girls reached the age of about 16 their hair suddenly became as red as the setting sun. She inquired of the Ucayali women how they obtained their flaming locks, but was met by a mysterious silence. Coddle them and bribe them as she might, Miss Cameron could not learn the secret. One old crone finally, under the bribe of a few yards of calico, told the emerald queen that the red hair was a tribal secret that had been handed down for several generations.

The emerald queen, as the young woman is called in the upper reaches of the Amazon, was determined to learn the tribal secret. Incidentally, she was anxious to possess red hair. Late one night, when the human world was sound asleep and only the jungle beasts and reptiles were about, Miss Cameron awoke. Sleep had gone from her, and try as she might she could not compose herself. Finally she arose and dressed.

"I went up the trail that led from the house toward my uncle's grave," she said on her return from Brazil. "The grave lay on a hilltop near the lake. It was a wonderful night, the trail was illuminated as if it were early dawn, for the southern stars that seem to hang so low in those latitudes burned like great lanterns in the sky.

"At last I reached the little inclosure in which is the grave of my uncle. I stood fascinated by the scene, gazing about me for several minutes. Soon down near the far bank of the lake I saw people moving about. I thought it strange that the natives were up and about at such a weird hour and decided to investigate.

Dips Hair in Magic Lake.

"I crept down the hillside and began skirting around the end of the lake through the thick tropical foliage. At last I came to a point where I could overlook the strange scene being enacted. Native medicine men with weird masks stood about a group of young girls. Back of the group were gathered a score of the older women of the tribe. The priests or medicine men were murmuring a low chant, which was taken up by the older women. Suddenly the priests seized one of the girls and led her to the edge of the lake. Then they forced her to her knees and shoved her head into the water. Time and again her head was submerged.

"The girl, with her head dripping, was then placed to one side, after which another and another of the girls was submitted to the same ordeal. The night was well along before the ceremony was concluded with a chant, after which the natives disappeared into the jungle. I retraced my steps to the house, wondering what it was all about.

"Try as I might, I could not sleep. I could not get the strange native ceremony out of my mind. What was it all about? I kept asking myself." Suddenly toward morning like a flash the meaning of the ceremony broke upon my startled mind. I had discovered the secret of the red hair. Through some miraculous composition of the waters of the little lake hair could be turned red.

"Columbus discovering America, the lonely miner stumbling upon an El Dorado was not more pleased than I was at my great find. I can assure you that I lost no time in making use of my discovery. The next day I visited the spot where the queer Ucayali ceremony had been enacted. Time after time I dipped my head into the waters and then sat in the sunlight with the dripping water of marvels falling from my head. I might say right here that although fond of swimming, I had never ventured into the waters of the lake. In the first place, its depth is unknown, and, second, it was a 'lake of terror,' shunned by the natives in general as a place of evil spirits. Water snakes can be seen breaking the surface of the water, snakes whose bite means death.

"An old Ucayali woman in my household employ saw the change in the color of my hair. She was frightened and asked me what I had done. I told her what I had discovered. A few days later I was visited by one of the tribal chiefs. He told me that I had discovered a tribal secret that had been preserved for many generations. He also told me that I must not disclose the secret to the other natives or strange things might happen to me. I can assure you that I was impressed by the old man's words and I have not indicated in the slightest how I obtained my red hair."

Wins Soldier Husband.

And now for the romance. With sufficient money to gratify her most extravagant whim, with no one dependent on her, the young woman decided to become an army nurse. She consulted Robert Bacon, formerly American ambassador to France, who with Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney is interested in the American Hospital in France.

Mr. Bacon arranged matters so that, after a short course of study in New York, she went abroad and served in the American hospital at Paris, the head of which is Dr. Joseph A. Blake. Into that hospital last June Corporal Wallace was brought. Nurse Cameron attended him.

"I say," remarked the corporal during his period of convalescence. "You have wonderful hair, you know. Really, it's extraordinary how nature could bestow such beauty on a young woman with your fair complexion and brown eyes."

Thereupon Miss Cameron told him the story of the Brazilian lake.

"Then you are a real 'Lady of the Lake,'" exclaimed the corporal. "I say, but it seems unusually strange to me when I think that as a child I always thought I should fall in love only with a girl with red hair. I could not care for any other sort. Those with red hair whom I saw I like—but, you know! I sort of felt as if a white horse were around. But with you it's different—there are just you and myself. Shall it always be that way?"

Of course, she accepted him. And the corporal received a discharge from King Edward's Horse because of "disability"—who could ever fight while on a honeymoon?—and then they went to the land of the red-faced mianight sun.

ARMAGEDDON NEXT, THINKS ADVENTIST

Present War Paving Way for Last Great Conflict, Declares C. B. Haynes at Annual Conference.

Union City, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—"I do not say that this war is Armageddon. I think it is not. But if the prophecies of the Bible are true it is surely paving the way for Armageddon, the last great war in the history of this world," said Evangelist Carlyle B. Haynes, of Spartanburg, S. C., tonight at the annual camp meeting and conference of the Georgia Seventh-day Adventists, who are encamped in the grove opposite the station here in a city of tents, in an address on "The Second Coming of Christ" delivered before a great crowd of people who drove in from all parts of this section.

After reading numerous prophecies from the Bible which he claimed referred to the last days, and which he said were exactly fulfilled in the present situation, Mr. Haynes said:

"The last great visitation of divine wrath against the nations of the world is impending. This will bring the armies of all the nations of the earth to death. They will be found fighting against God, and God will prevail over them.

"Think of the unparalleled situation. After nineteen centuries of the gospel of peace the great Christian nations of the world are at each other's throats, throwing themselves into a devastating war. National ambitions are being settled by incredible slaughter; the world is being drenched in blood to decide which nation shall have its ambition satisfied in their lust for power. In the midst of a peaceful civilization, when, in theory, the principles of Christianity are the animating principles of the world, some resistless force changes whole nations into war-crazed mobs. What does it all mean? What will be the outcome of it all?

"It means that the coming of Christ is at hand. The Bible has been predicting for centuries that the end of the world would come in the midst of a gigantic conflict which would sweep the human race into oblivion. Supernatural forces are behind the movements of the nations which are being impelled into strife with each other. The universal strife just ahead may close up the ageiong conflict between Christ and Satan.

"Now, do not misunderstand me or misquote me. I do not say that this present trouble will mean the close of all things earth. But I do say that it will prepare the way for the great and final conflict of the nations which is soon to come and which is called in the Bible 'the battle of that great day of God Almighty,' which is to be fought at Armageddon."

At the first business session of the conference which was held this morning, the report of both the president and the treasurer of the conference was submitted to the delegation. The report of the conference showed growth in all departments of the work in this state. Much interest was manifested in the report of the growth of the denomination in North America for the second quarter of 1915. This report showed that during these three months, April, May and June, of this year, 3,625 converts had been baptized into the Seventh-day Adventist faith, making an average of 1,000 converts a month in this country alone. During this period, also, the actual number of laborers in this cause had increased by 546, so that the number now stands at 2,742, the ministers numbering 775, the missionaries, or Bible workers, 576, the evangelistic colporteurs 1,174, and the secretaries 114.

The total tithe paid during the quarter, as shown in the treasurer's report for the North American division, amounted to $217,840.45, which was an increase of $2,804.90 over the first quarter of the year. The amount paid in for foreign missions was $130,000, and for home missions, $65,000. The book sales for the quarter were reported as $208,462.34.

During the afternoon business session of the conference the standing committees of the conference were appointed by the president, Elder N. V. Willess, of Atlanta. The personnel of the committees is as follows:

Nominations: L. D. Randall, chairman, of Atlanta; A. E. Deyo, of Fitzgerald; B. F. Brown, of Blairsville; Elder O. Montgomery, of Atlanta, president of the Southeastern Union conference; J. E. Bowen, of Alpharetta; Elder U. S. Willis, of Savannah, and Elder R. E. Williams, of Atlanta.

On credentials and licenses: Elder O. Montgomery, of Atlanta; Elder J. O. Corliss, of Glendale, Cal.; Elder N. V. Willess, of Atlanta, president of the Georgia conference; Elder C. B. Haynes, of Spartanburg, S. C.; Elder Charles Thompson, of Minneapolis, Minn., president of the Northern Union conference; Elder U. S. Willis, of Savannah, and Elder R. E. Williams, of Atlanta.

On plans and resolutions: D. W. Dillen, of Atlanta, superintendent of colporteurs in the Southeastern Union conference; J. K. Macmillan, of Atlanta, secretary-treasurer of the Georgia conference; Elder J. A. Strickland, of Fitzgerald; Professor Leo Thiel, of Atlanta, the secretary of the educational department of the Southeastern Union conference; Dr. J. Russell Mitchell, of Atlanta; Elder J. O. Corliss, of Glendale, Cal., and W. S. Fulbright, of Atlanta, superintendent of colporteurs of the Georgia conference.

On auditing, Elder N. V. Willess, of Atlanta; Elder J. A. Strickland, of Fitzgerald; Dr. J. Russell Mitchell, of Atlanta; W. S. Fulbright, of Atlanta; J. K. Macmillan, of Atlanta; R. H. Anderson, of Atlanta; Elder J. O. Corliss, of Glendale, Cal.; W. H. Williams, of Atlanta, secretary-treasurer of the Southeastern Union conference; Elder O. Montgomery, of Atlanta; A. E. Deyo, of Fitzgerald, and L. D. Randall, of Atlanta.

On pastoral work, Elder N. V. Willess, of Atlanta; Elder O. Montgomery, of Atlanta; Elder Charles Thompson, of Minneapolis; Elder J. O. Corliss, of Glendale, Cal.; Elder Carlyle B. Haynes, of Spartanburg, S. C., and Elder J. A. Strickland, of Fitzgerald.

On baptisms, Elder N. V. Willess, of Atlanta; Elder J. A. Strickland, of Fitzgerald, and Professor Leo Thiel, of Atlanta.

On seating of delegates, Elder J. A. Strickland, of Fitzgerald, W. S. Fulbright, of Atlanta, and J. K. Macmillan, of Atlanta.

Saturday was observed as the Sabbath by the encampment. Large numbers of people came in Friday from Atlanta and other nearby places to spend the Sabbath and Sunday at the camp ground. There were three preaching services during the day, the first at 11 o'clock, the second at 3 o'clock and the last at 7:30 o'clock. Elder Charles Thompson preached in the morning, Elder N. V. Willess in the afternoon and Elder O. Montgomery at night.

Prison Poet Wins Bride, But Keeps Marriage Secret

Announce Wedding Only After Persuading Parents of Pretty Girl to Give Her Consent to Ceremony.

Here is a good way to override parental objection: Marry, keep it secret, then ask papa and mama if you can have their daughter. If, perchance, they say No! you will be in a position to inform them they can't help matters—if you have nerve enough to say it.

John J. O'Donnell, publisher of The Chrysalis, the book of poems written in the federal penitentiary, married Irene Brantley, the winsome telegraph operator in the Western Union branch office of the Ansley hotel, and kept the matter secret from August 14 until last Friday, when they packed up and went off on their honeymoon to Birmingham.

The cause for secrecy was said to have been parental objection, which the couple wished to eliminate before announcing the marriage, even to father and mother. The bride resides at 209 Peachtree with her parents. All the while a bride, she went about her daily routine, working regular hours in the Ansley branch office, and going out several scheduled nights a week with the man who was apparently her suitor, but, in truth, her husband.

By Friday they had managed to prevail upon the parents, and that afternoon, minds at ease and prospects roseate, they embarked for Birmingham.

BRIDGEPORT STRIKERS WILL RETURN TO WORK

Bridgeport, Conn., August 28.—Several thousand striking employees of plants are ready to resume their labors Monday under the 9-hour day and better shop conditions.

It is predicted that next week would see but few idle persons in Bridgeport.

IN THE THEATERS

Keith Vaudeville.

(At the Forsyth.)

The "poetry of motion" as exemplified in Andalusia, the far-famed land where the Moors built their castles in Spain, will be the headline feature of the reopening bill at the Forsyth theater this week, which resumes Keith vaudeville under the new management of George Batcheller Corsen, after being closed several weeks during the summer.

Eduardo and Elisa Cansino, natives of that romantic section of Spain made famous by the books of Washington Irving, lead the bill with a dancing act that is one of the finest in vaudeville.

Reared in the poetic atmosphere of Andalusia, dancers from childhood, and finished exponents of the modern as well as the native dances of their country, and of dances dating back to the days of barbaric Rome, their performance has thrilled the senses of America's jaded smart set at Newport and has created one of the notable vaudeville sensations on the Keith circuit.

Traveling through Spain in the spring of 1914, Mrs. Stuveysant Fish saw the young people—who are brother and sister, aged 20 and 19 years, respectively—in a wonderful series of dances in Seville, and immediately engaged them as the star entertainers for her guests at Newport during the following summer. After that engagement, during which their dances became the rage in the fashionable society of America's greatest summer colony, they went into vaudeville, and have scored hit after hit in the principal cities of the country.

One of their dances is called "La Cuchipanda." An original Spanish tango, it brings the body and arms into play with marvelous grace and rhythm to the accompaniment of soul-stirring music.

The music of the Cansino act is specially suited to the dancing. It breathes the atmosphere of Andalusia, where the sun always shines and romance never dies, and no warm-blooded lover of the Terpsichorean art can fail to respond to its powerful appeal.

Quaint and charming costumes and songs that were sung in by-gone days, but never grow old, are the features of a delightful act by the Seven Colonial Belles. Wearing exact replicas of the gowns that were the fashion in 1776, they appear in a drawing room scene of that period and regale the audience with a repertoire of vocal and instrumental music. Miss Dorothy Sherman plays the piano, five others play different instruments, and the seventh member of the company sings new and old song hits.

Milt Collins, in an act entitled "The Speaker of the House," is one of the drollest and funniest monologists that comedians on the vaudeville stage. He discusses politics with rare humor and rich philosophy, and his burlesque of a German politician airing his views on American public affairs is a regular scream.

A talented and experienced prima donna, who has achieved success on the concert stage, Gertrude Long, prefers in vaudeville to be known as a singing comedienne, and she is both in the best sense of the term. Her witty jokes have kept her audiences laughing since her debut on the Keith circuit a short time ago, and her songs always make a hit. She did not leave England on account of the war, but in response to a flattering offer, and plans to return to that country when her present engagement is finished.

Billy Lloyd and George F. Britt will contribute their full share of entertainment with a rollicking act entitled "A Mixture of Vaudeville," in which they sing and dance and swap jokes and discourse on affairs with shrewd judgment and in breezy, whole-hearted style.

And still more comedy will be furnished by the Noel Travers-Irene Douglas company in a side-splitting sketch entitled "A Novel Marriage." Franklin Searight, the author of the sketch and one of the funniest of all vaudeville sketch writers, enlivens the act by taking one of the roles, and every member of the company is a high-class performer.

The Alfred Bilford Trio will give a bicycle act that is among the most sensational and sensational on the vaudeville stage. In the present day of an increasing public demand for quality, none but the best of cycle performers can survive, and the Bilford Trio rank at the top. Their simplest feat is hazardous and they always hold the attention of their audiences.

Along with these seven vaudeville acts will go two great motion picture features and an exclusive first-run of Pathe Weekly and "Colonel Heeza Liar's War Dog." The latter's exploits in animated cartoons are an established favorite with theater-goers everywhere, while the Pathe Weekly is full of interest and action. These pictures will be shown first in Atlanta at the Forsyth every week.

The ticket sale indicates that every night will be a big night at the Forsyth this week. Already the old season reservations have been made, and in addition there have been a large number of new season reservations are being made not only for Monday, but for other nights, and the sale of single performance seats has been going at a rapid clip since the box office opened.

HARRIS MAY INCLUDE COTTON PROTECTION

Bulloch and Appling counties were represented. At this meeting there was full appreciation of the conditions confronting the cotton crop as a result of the war and the attitude of the British government. But those present, Mr. Price said, expressed the belief that every possible provision would be made to take care of the cotton crop at a price which will be remunerative to the producer.

"In the southeastern section of the state," Commissioner Price said, "I found that many fields were two-thirds open and that not a few of them were half picked. There cannot possibly be more than 50 per cent of an average crop in that section.

"A very encouraging sign, however, was the fact that so much corn, peas and forage crops are planted and doing well. Velvet beans have been sown in abundance, and these not only make a splendid food for cattle, but a fine restorative for the land. Attending a similar meeting in Hinesville, I found that the farmers of that section have become wideawake to the importance of cattle raising and diversification.

"The main question with the farmers of Georgia and the south is that of financing the present crop, and if they are forced to hold, of securing the money at a reasonable rate of interest such as they can afford to pay.

Welcome Action of Bankers.

"The people over the state are glad to know that the bankers of Atlanta, as well as those of other cities and towns in the state, are becoming interested in the financing of the crop; and their hope is that the same spirit will be manifested in every locality, because it is particularly important that, in so far as is possible, this situation should be taken care of locally. This will bring relief to the producer right at his home, and this is what is most needed.

"I am particularly delighted to know, and I find the same sentiment wherever I have been over the state, that Governor Harris is deeply interested in the cotton situation, and will, more than likely, ask that some legislation be passed at the extra session which will be of benefit to everyone concerned. There was considerable talk last fall about an extra session on the same subject. This time the extra session has got to be held anyhow, and I do not believe the governor could do anything better than include whatever legislation may be necessary to protect the agricultural interests of the state.

"With a short crop as I see it, I believe it is necessary that every possible resource be drawn upon to protect cotton to the point where it will bring the price that the crop justifies.

"I believe the farmers of Georgia are in better condition, so far as something to eat is concerned, than they have been in years; but in order to have a clear idea of the situation, it must be borne in mind that they not only have the debts of this year to pay, but many unpaid bills of 1914."

WOODWARD TO OFFER AGAIN FOR MAYORALTY

volunteers from the recall committee are busy daily in recall headquarters on the seventh floor of the Silvey building purging the registration lists and they propose to have the list properly verified before it is filed with the city clerk.

As soon as 25 per cent of the registered voters is affixed to the recall petition, the law forces general council to call an election within thirty days. The recall workers hope to have the election called for Thursday, September 30, the date of the democratic primary and the bond election.

ATLANTA WILL HAVE WADING POOLS SOON

Plan Is to Use Them for Skating Rinks During the Winter Months.

Atlanta's city officials are always quick to take advantage of plans that promise further pleasures for the boys and girls of the city. Parks, playgrounds and lakes for bathing have proved so popular that the next step will be the building of a system of wading pools in the parks.

Councilman Claude Ashley broached the idea to Park Manager Joe Cochran, who immediately accepted it and got busy to put it into execution. The question of the location of the first wading pool is now under consideration and Mr. Cochran will announce within the next few days the location.

It is planned to have the pools about 75x100 feet in area, with a depth of eighteen to twenty-four inches. They will be of concrete so that they may be drained frequently, affording fresh water at all times.

The plan is also to use the structures for wading pools during the summer months and to drain the water and use them for public skating rinks in the winter months.

"Of course, we would have to limit the patronage of the pools for the first season to the children, but later could allow the grown-ups to use them," said Councilman Ashley discussing the plan. "I believe they would become as popular as the lakes at Piedmont and Maddox parks, where thousands of children and grown-ups spend their afternoons."

Mr. Ashley has also proposed to Manager Cochran that he secure the service of one of the old-time "cars" from Brunswick, Savannah, or some coast town, whose business it will be to stay at the bathing pool and tell the children sea stories and teach them to build and sail boats.

Mr. Cochran states that he will have the pool so constructed that the children can walk over the pool on stepping stones.

It has been figured by Mr. Cochran that the wading pools will not involve any great expense, but can be built at a nominal outlay for cement, sand and gravel on sites that require little if any grading or excavation.

Mr. Ashley has agreed to furnish from his streets ordinary fund a portion of the expense of building a wading pool in the fourth ward, which he represents in general council.

TWO MEN BADLY CUT AND SENT TO HOSPITAL

E. S. Skipper Says He Acted as Peacemaker, Then Had to Defend Self.

E. S. Skipper, aged 40, of 589 DeKalb avenue, a carpenter, and E. S. Autrey, of 8 Cornelia street, were taken to Grady hospital late Saturday night, both seriously cut as a result of a fight which they engaged in at 536 Decatur street.

According to Skipper, he had been in a shoe shop operated by his brother-in-law at 536 Decatur street. He states that his brother-in-law and Autrey engaged in an argument over cutting off the gas, and he, Skipper, tried to intervene.

"He pulled his knife on me," said Skipper, "and I pulled mine and cut him in self-defense."

FATHER OF POLICEMAN SHOT BY HIGHWAYMAN

Reached for Brick Instead of Holding Up Hands and Shot Followed.

T. G. Milam, of 16 Allene street, father of Officer Milam, of the Atlanta police department, was shot by one of three negro highwaymen who held him up at the corner of Murphy avenue and Gillespie street at 8:30 o'clock Saturday night.

Mr. Milam stated that he was walking along the street near the intersection of Murphy avenue and Gillespie street when the three negroes stopped in front of him. He said that one of them pointed a pistol at him and told him to hold up his hands.

Mr. Milam reached for a brick instead and the negro with the gun fired at him. The bullet lodged in the flesh just below his left arm pit.

Chief of Police Mayo and a squad of officers went to the scene of the shooting and for several miles around scoured the woods near there, with no results.

500 BALES OF COTTON MARKETED IN AMERICUS

Americus, Ga., August 28.—(Special.) Five hundred bales of cotton marketed in Americus today and generally sold around 9 cents put farmers in high spirits and boosted business. Merchants generally are optimistic regarding fall trade despite acknowledged shortness of the cotton crop, the marketing of which is progressing rapidly. Farmers readily accept current prices. Twenty-five hundred bales marketed already have largely been sold and money applied to general indebtedness.

ENGER 12-CYLINDER TO SELL FOR $1,095

Officials Say They Are Prepared to Deliver to Customers in Short Time.

What is creating the biggest sensation of the year in the automobile industry is news that the Enger Motor Car company has placed a twelve-cylinder car on the market to sell for the revolutionary price of $1,095.

Shipment of demonstrators already has been started and the company officials declare that they are now prepared to make deliveries to purchasers in a short time.

Of further interest is the fact that in design, lines and mechanical makeup the new car is essentially a high-class production. It betrays none of the characteristics of the cheaply built car, but reveals a striking abundance of detail and quality. Even a most precursory glance at the specifications and list of equipment reveals features most unusual in a car of any size or style selling at that price.

The Enger company is widely known as a successful manufacturer of motor cars, having developed a six-cylinder car which last season met with a most favorable reception from the public. The new twelve-cylinder car will be built in its entirety in the large Enger factory at Cincinnati, where the experiments and tests have been diligently conducted for months.

The absolute secrecy which shrouded the company's plans causes the announcement of the car to come as a complete surprise even to those closely connected with the industry.

In appearance the car is striking, with long, low, racy lines. The wheelbase of 115 inches has given the designers ample leeway for a roomy, attractive body. Painstaking care in the construction of the body is obvious to the observer. The upholstery is of a fine grade of real leather, over hair cushions and long, flexible springs. The riding qualities of the car, as well as the appearance, are further enhanced by the use of cantilever springs, which gives the body the long and low appearance which has become so popular among discriminating motorists.

LATEST ADDITION TO OVERLAND FAMILY

GOOD RECORD MADE BY THE HOLLIER "8" IN PUBLICITY RUN

F. B. Ludwig, of the firm of Ludwig & Morton, southern distributors for the Hollier "8," was much enthused over a telegram from the factory stating that in the three state publicity run just completed, the new Hollier "8" came through with a perfect score. The performance of this car is a feature of much interest as it entered every control far ahead of scheduled time, and by the report of the referee was the first to enter Philadelphia and Wilmington as well as Harrisburg at the close of the third day.

Through a misunderstanding the Hollier "8" drove three blocks past the street in Atlantic City, where the checking station was placed, allowing one of the cars in the rear to check in first, but, nevertheless, the Hollier reached Atlantic City in the lead, the same position being held throughout the entire run. In fact, the remarkable performance of this car enabled the driver to secure almost any position desired.

During the run the throttle was never open to the limit, but fifty-two miles per hour was obtained over the long stretch of pine barren through New Jersey. The hills were apparently the same as level ground.

The performance of the "Hollier Eight" is all the more remarkable when one considers the fact that it competed with cars of four or five times its cost price and driven by experienced Muncie and Glidden drivers.

The Hollier has already qualified for two of the trophies offered in this contest, and the third award has not been made. The driver of the "Hollier 8" found it unnecessary to change gears at any time during the run.

Returns From Factory

W. J. Dabney, state distributor for the Paige, returned last week from a very interesting trip to Detroit. Of course he spent most of his time at the Paige-Detroit factory, just seeing how they put them together so fast, and he says it's about the busiest factory up there, too.

Mr. Dabney stated that following the increase in capitalization from $250,000 to $1,000,000, directors of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car company, at a meeting held August 2, authorized the distribution of $250,000 par value of the new stock pro rata among the company's stockholders in the form of a 100 per cent stock dividend. They also ordered the transfer of $250,000 from surplus account to capital stock as part of the operation. The remaining $500,000 of new stock, it was decided, is to be retained for the present in the treasury of the company.

The directors also declared a cash dividend of 5 per cent for the month of August on the old and the new stock payable September 10 to stockholders of record August 31. Officers of the company believe that with the increased capitalization the corporation will be able to make regular monthly dividend payments equivalent to at least 5 per cent on the stock outstanding.

This belief seems to meet corroboration in the fact that for three or four months the company has been paying its stockholders monthly dividends of 10 per cent, excluding the 5 per cent authorized August 2, the company's dividend payments for the current year aggregated 44 per cent on the original outstanding capital stock of $250,000.

While this is especially good news to Paige stockholders and of general interest because it reflects excellent business conditions, Paige officials also have news of particular interest to Paige dealers. The very rapid expansion of Paige business made the problem of deliveries, for a while, a difficult one to solve. President H. M. Jewett, however, has personally informed each and every one of the 1,200 men in the Paige dealer organization of the steps taken to meet this situation and has given them his assurance that the company is rapidly placing itself in a position to take care of every man so that each dealer may take advantage of the era of prosperity this country is entering.

Mr. Jewett points out that the 600-foot, four-story addition to the plant is rapidly nearing completion. The new building will soon be in operation. When this is ready the Paige will have a capacity of 125 cars a day.

Georgia State Tennis Tourney Starts Sept. 6

The eleventh annual Georgia State Tennis tourney for the championship of Georgia will start on the courts of the Piedmont Driving club Monday, September 6.

The events that will be held are men's singles and doubles and ladies' singles. Heretofore mixed doubles have been played in preference to ladies' singles, but due to the fact that more ladies are now playing singles than before this event was substituted.

The winner of the tourney holds the handsome three-year cup donated by the Georgia Tennis association, and must win it three times in order for it to become his permanent property. He is also presented a cup by the Driving club. The winning team in doubles is also presented a cup. The winner of the ladies' singles is presented a handsome cup. The runner-up of the men's singles will also receive a cup.

Frank Reynolds will act as referee throughout the tourney, which is as good as saying that there will be something doing every day.

Nat Thornton and Carleton Smith have two legs on the handsome three-year cup, being the only players to score more than one leg. Ed Carter, Eden Taylor of Macon, Dr. Carl Little of Cincinnati and R. Hunt of California are some of the players that have one leg upon the cup. The doubles title was won last year by Bryan Grant and Ed Carter.

No entries have been received yet, but it is expected that as many as fifty players will compete in the singles, while twenty teams will try for the doubles cup. Probably about twenty ladies will enter the ladies' singles.

It is expected that several of the local stars that gave promise of developing into swell players in the recent southern championship tourney will enter. Jeff Hunt, the sensation of local players, and who reached the semi-finals in this tourney, will in all probability enter, and it is expected that he will give somebody a hard tussle for the chief honor.

Carleton Smith, in the Walton building, and Hal Heintz, in the Candler building, will be glad to receive all entries up to Saturday night of this week. The drawings will be held next Sunday.

BILL JAMES WILL REJOIN BRAVES

Oroville, Cal., August 28.—"Bill" James, the California pitcher who played an important part last year in the fight of the Boston National league club for the championship, left his home here today to rejoin the Braves.

James has been troubled with a sore arm and several weeks ago was suspended at his own request to give him an opportunity to rest. He said he believed he was now in condition to help the Braves in their fight for the pennant.

MAMAUX LEADING NATIONAL HURLERS

Pittsburg's Young Star Has Won Nineteen Games and Dropped But Six.

Mamaux, the young twirler of the Pittsburg Pirates, is the leading twirler of the National league, with nineteen wins and but six defeats this season. Alexander is second, with twenty-four wins and nine losses.

WITH BRITT CRAIG.

The prophets of the picture patronage are beginning to assert themselves since our modest little dissertation last week on predicted phlim progress. We have had it suggested that there will eventually be a day of—

Picture characters who will speak directly from the screen;

Automatic pianos that will play the right tune;

Vampires who have at least one good streak in them;

Country maidens who don't have to go wrong;

Town Trade Topics.

We remember him when he was only a young advance agent, trying to get along in the world without the aid of a kindly and attentive press agent, whose work he did himself. We knew him when he first suffered the pangs of boyish love, and how tenderly we go back over the days of his adversity, when he was drawn close to the gang and was faithful. How well we recall the days of cotton stringency, last year, when he blew in proclaiming the advance merits of the colossal "Cabiria." How we enjoyed lunch with him at Childs', his trolley rides, the free band concerts at Piedmont, the adjoining rooms at the Y. M. C. A.

But may his present opulence ever increase. May he become even more affluent, and may he ultimately rule the picture game with stern and relentless hand. May he some day be able to hire us as the humble promoter of his personal publicity. May that new outlay of silk shirts never irritate his manly, though unaccustomed, bosom, and may Charley Kessnich, as the newly appointed director of the Mutual offices, never tire of fame and prosperity.

*****

There is some talk of Harry B. Hearn's return to Atlanta. We hardly know of any theater executive whose return we would welcome more, than that the capable Ralph DeBrueiler is safely re-anchored in town. Harry managed the Grand when it was first converted into a picture house. He launched it upon the wave of prosperity it now riding. Although suffering the adversities always attendant upon pioneers, he established theatrical and picture history—a man with ideas, a plugger, a tireless worker, and a man who would never sanction anything but good music.

*****

We picture Bill Sharp as a man who would make a more acceptible sideshow ballyhoo than manager of a Peachtree theater. His foghorn voice is ideally adapted to the former vocation, and Bill's broad physical dimensions appear perfectly capable of answering the hostile "Hey, Rube!" of a circus fighting gang. His Ohio dialect would fit well in any department of the "three-ring" profession. But Bill is accomplished and versatile, and he is capable. Proof of his efficiency has been demonstrated in his appointment by Bill Oldknow to the management of the Savoy theater, home of Universal pictures, one of downtown's most popular houses. It is needless to say that the Bill Sharp popularity will add another milestone to the Savoy march on prosperity.

Another Appreciation.

It is said that the goddess Euterpe is stepping in and claiming her rights in the local picture situation. A year ago Harry Arnold inaugurated the picture theater orchestra in the Grand, but the policy seemed to die when the Grand, in the face of the cotton crisis, closed its doors, and Harry went back to the north from whence he came.

Euterpe slumbered until Ralph DeBrueiler returned and resurrected her. The instantaneous growth of patronage made his orchestra in the Strand a permanent institution, much to the delight of lovers of photographic and symphonic artistry. And now we watch with keen appreciation (not to mention speculation) the spread of the fashion.

The Vaudette, which has never had music, due to the temperamental whimsicalities of her personality that make her a good "heavy" type on the stage where methods of utterance were the more availing of her talents, but methods of utterance are a dead art on the screen, and the renowned Petrova failed to "knock us cold," to use the vernacular of the editor of this verbal vehicle.

ANNETTE KELLERMANN'S FAREWELL APPEARANCE

Will Be Seen Wednesday and Thursday in "Neptune's Daughter" at Savoy.

When "Neptune's Daughter" is presented at the Savoy theater next Wednesday and Thursday the people of Atlanta will have an opportunity of seeing what has been termed "the last word in photo-drama." And if all that the critics say may be believed the production deserves just that appreciation.

Annette Kellerman, the famous "diving Venus," appears in the title role of this production, and her graceful interpretation of the part of a mermaid justifies all that has been said of her marvelous aquatic skill. One is quite willing to forget the material world and enter into the whimsical and thoroughly delightful fairy-story attitude which is necessary to the fullest appreciation of "Neptune's Daughter."

The scenery is enough to satisfy the most poetic imagination and the whole play abounds in dramatic situations that excite an interest as keen as it is wholesome. The atmosphere is that of the open sea and the great out-of-doors; it is filled with the spirit of the woodlands and invites all humanity back to the very heart of nature. But one must see the play to realize the irresistible charm of its appeal.

"Neptune's Daughter" comes to the Savoy theater two days, Wednesday and Thursday. Continuous performances will be given, starting at 10 o'clock each day, and an admission price of 10 cents will be charged. This will be the farewell appearance of this beautiful spectacle in Atlanta.

Howard Winburn and his organ, has now installed a splendid orchestra.

The voluminous pipe organ in the Vaudette, no doubt one of the best in any southern theater, furnishes an excellent augmentation to the orchestra; the finer strains of the keener-toned orchestral instruments ride upon the waves of its deep rumbling like an ocean of symphony.

Long live the Vaudette's impartiality to rag and classic, alike.

Criticisms.

By PANSY PANITALL.

"The Tigress."

The main trouble with "The Tigress," the production featuring Olga Petrova, was that she wasn't tigerish enough to deserve the title. She impressed me as a plain, ordinary housewife deeply saddened by the unwonted execution of her husband, and proportionately vindictive thereover.

Olga Petrova has a pleasing figure and a sensuous mode of garbing it—Nazimovaiike, if you understand what I mean—and she has a pair of graceful feet (which was all our vision was allowed), but feet and figure never made a tigress. Maybe there is something in her manner of expression, and in the manner that she graced the picture with their attendance.

Theda Bara was bemoaning a cruel world.

Alice Hollister was playing sweet-girl roles.

CRITICISMS.

By Pansy Panitall.

"Lady Audley's Secret."

Does the Fox Film company honestly believe that just because she is reputed to be the "most wickedly beautiful woman on earth," and because she portrayed a number of vampire characters in a fashion that put her in wide demand, the public will be pleased by anything Theda Bara does? I wonder!

I have just seen "Lady Audley's Secret," and, candidly, I wish I hadn't, because my opinion of the work of Theda Bara had been most flattering to that talented young woman. Now I will have to begin all over again and wait for future productions to re-establish an appreciation of her. I have only this consolation—it probably wasn't so much the fault of Theda Bara as of her director, Marshall Farnum.

A number of people have already disagreed with me in my criticism of "Lady Audley's Secret." 'Tis good! If we all held the same opinion, there would be little progress in art or mankind. But, on the other hand, a proportionate number have expressed my views. Neither of which criticism or praise, however, deterred thousands from flocking to see her.

Violent emotions, expressed in contortions of the eyes, horror-expressing acrobatics of the body, and shrieks that lost none of their force in the benevolent silence of the screen, do not evoke artistic appreciation. If we want gymnastics, we go to a circus sideshow or the first act of a vaudeville performance, but we do not look for them—neither do we want them—in an emotional drama.

There was little, if any, of the subtlety of performance or constraint of expression in "Lady Audley's Secret" that Theda Bara had displayed in "A Fool There Was," "Kreutzer Sonata" or "The Clemenceau Case." In the words of theatrical parlance, she literally "acted all over the place."

But I am glad to presume that this was more the fault of her director than herself. He evidently has a mistaken idea of what the public wants.

$15,000 CONTRACT CLOSED BY STRAND

Stars of the Fox Film Corporation Will Be Shown There Exclusively.

The Strand theater will henceforth be the exclusive home in Atlanta of Theda Bara, Nance O'Neil, Bettie Nansen, William Farnum, Valeska Surratt, and other famous stars of the Fox Film corporation, as the result of a $15,000 contract closed Tuesday by Manager Ralph DeBruler of that theater.

For some time past the Strand has been showing the newest and best of the Fox features, but this new contract means that the theater will have them all exclusively. At the same time comes the announcement that Annette Kellermann, the most perfectly formed woman in the world, has joined the Fox Film forces and is now in Jamaica with her manager producing a picture which will be a bigger sensation than "Neptune's Daughter."

It is announced that all the productions released by the Fox Film company will feature a star or stars of national fame and that the plot of the various productions will all be by recognized authors and novelists, or from well-known stage successes.

One of Theda Bara's early releases will be "The Two Orphans." Bettie Nansen will shortly appear in the "Song of Hate," an adaptation of "La Tosca." Another big coming picture will be entitled "The Regeneration," an adaptation from "My Mamie Rose," by Owen Kildare. One of William Farnum's releases will be "The Wonderful Adventure."

These are but a few of the great pictures that will be released by the Fox interests in the early future and shown in Atlanta exclusively at the Strand theater.

Manager Ralph DeBruler is being congratulated on securing the exclusive rights for these magnificent productions.

William Worthington is at work on the production of a three-reel story, entitled "The Queen of Hearts," with Anna Little in the title role and Herbert Rawlinson playing opposite. Mr. Worthington himself makes up the remainder of the cast.

"JUDY FORGOT" COMES TO SAVOY ON TUESDAY

Marie Cahill in Screaming Photo-Comedy, the Latest Broadway Success.

Patrons of the Savoy will be given an opportunity on Tuesday of witnessing Marie Cahill in a screaming Broadway success entitled "Judy Forgot," presented by the Universal in five acts. Marie Cahill is known as the girl with the funny lines, and it is claimed that in this uproariously funny photo-comedy, you'll laugh till you cry.

The picturization was adapted from Avery Hopwood's great play. The scenes of the play were staged in Weisbaden and Carlsbad, Germany.

The plot tells an amusing story in which a young wife suffers aphasia, following a train wreck, and is made to believe that she is the mother of two bouncing babies.

Judy Evans is a successful comedy star, Freddy a stage-door Johnny. After an ardent courtship Freddy proposes and is accepted. They leave for Europe on their wedding trip. Their first stop on the continent is Wiesbaden. There Judy flirts with a crowd of students, who recognize the internationally famous comedienne. Freddy is furiously jealous. He threatens Judy, and, in order to rid herself of him, locks him in the bathroom while he is shaving, and takes a train for Marienbad, alone.

The train is wrecked and Judy receives a bump on the head, which results in partial amnesia. She loses all memory of hubby and her past life. She is picked from the wreck with a satchel labeled "Trixie Gale" in her hand, and the police thereupon believe she is the popular actress of that name. Freddie is panic-stricken when he learns that the train has been wrecked, and follows by motor.

Among the other passengers on the wrecked train were Dicky Stole and his recently acquired wife, Trixie Gale, a gay young divorcee. Dicky is just twenty and Trixie several years his senior. Dicky's parents are decidedly adverse to his marriage, and have offered a reward of $500 for the arrest of Trixie for having "kidnaped a minor."

John Mugg, Dicky's exceedingly fat uncle, meets Judy, and, hearing that she is Trixie Gale, declares that she is the woman who kidnaped his nephew Dicky and the real Trixie duck out of sight when they see Uncle Mugg. Dr. Kuno Lauberscheimer, who is attending Mugg, brings Dicky forward, and tells Judy that he is her husband, and that she is wanted by the police for having married a minor. Judy embraces her "husband" while the real Trixie looks on in anger. Dicky introduces Trixie as "Mrs. Gray, an old friend," but privately tells his wife that they will leave that night for Paris, leaving Uncle Mugg behind.

Trixie's former husband arrives at the baths with her two children, who have been awarded to him. The children become lost in the grounds and Doc Lauberscheimer asks them their names.

"Papa's name is Gale," the kids declare. Whereupon the round old pharmacopoeia takes the youngsters to Judy and tells her that he has found her children. Judy is surprised to learn that she is the mother of two beautiful girls. Meanwhile, Freddie arrives, attempts to embrace Judy, his wife, engages in a free-for-all fight with the German soldier, the hotel clerk, German students, and Dicky, but in the end, after various other complications, matters are straightened out and all ends merrily.

AT THE VICTORIA.

"The Spendthrift" and "Bartered Lives" Strong Pictures.

The Victoria has arranged a program of fine photo-play attractions for the coming week, chief among them being "The Spendthrift," "Bartered Lives" and "Protea II."

"The Spendthrift," which comes Monday, is produced by George Kleine, who presents Irene Fenwick in the leading role. It is an extraordinary film dramatization of Porter Emerson Brown's celebrated play, in six parts, in which a lesson against extravagance and wastefulness is hammered home to the audience. It is well worth seeing—particularly in these times of needed economy.

Wednesday George Kleine also presents Marie Hesperia in "Bartered Lives," a story in which one sister takes the place of another as a model, and out of which many thrilling situations come. Miss Hesperia plays the dual role of herself and twin sister.

In presenting, on Friday, "Protea II.," a World Film release, the management is offering a photo-drama of intense interest, and one in which duels are frequent. Dynamite is used to thunder down the walls of a house, and the heroine is strung up by her neck to a tree, but all ends happily at last.

A better combination cannot be imagined than Julia Dean, star, and handsome Bob Leonard, director. The Universal feature which they are now working on has not been officially announced, but it will surely be a worthy while film with such talent backing it.

Horace Davey and the second Nestor company are this week engaged in the production of a one-reel comedy written by Mr. Davey, under the title, "A Maid and a Man." Neal Burns, Billie Rhodes and Jack Dillon play the leading roles.

AT THE GEORGIAN.

Carlyle Blackwell in "The Key to Yesterday" Monday.

The Georgian is keeping up its popular move of offering each week a variety of pictures of the most excellent kind.

Monday it offers "The Key to Yesterday," presented by Favorite Players' Film company, and featuring Carlyle Blackwell. It is a story of intrigue and mystery, abounding in tense scenes and strong climaxes. Tuesday Octavia Handworth will be seen in an Excelsior Feature Film company production, "The Path Forbidden," from the book by John B. Hymer. The story deals with a woman who travels the forbidden path, with all its woes and disgraces, but is finally rescued and restored to her father, who, in his declining years, needs her badly.

Wednesday "Beulah" will be the offering, featuring Henry B. Walthall, the great motion picture actor, in a six-reel wonderfully acted and elaborately staged production of the heart-gripping kind.

Thursday "The Wheels of Justice," a Vitagraph melodrama, will be shown. The story depicts a case in which circumstantial evidence weaves a net around James Morrison so tightly that his escape seems impossible. The hand of fate intercedes, however, and he is saved from an untimely end.

Friday will see a five-part drama, "Captain Swift," and Saturday comes a forcible masterpiece, "The Toil of Mammon."

With Sydney Ayres and Doris Pawn playing the leading roles, Carl M. Le Vines is this week working on the production of a two-reel drama entitled "The Younger Brother." The story is a good one, and is expected to make an exceptionally presentable offering.

Real Paris Chic

IN THESE

New Trimmed Hats

(Copies of Imported and New York Models)

Our copies, and there are about 200 of them, breathe all the chic and all the originality of the Paris originals.

Among these many copies are included the new Directoire effects in black, purple and navy velvet, smart tri-corner, small close turbans with flat wing garnitures and numerous other distinct novelties. Although the materials employed in these models are of the usual high-grade quality and the workmanship exceptional, yet prices are far below what is usually charged for hats of such marked individuality. In fact, our Millinery prices are a constant and delightful surprise to our patrons.

Novel Downpour Function as Prenuptial Festivity Brings Sachet to the Fore

By DAME CURTSEY.

"WHAT are you planning now?" I asked "Polly," as she dashed into the office, her cheeks aglow and her eyes sparkling. "Oh, just the sweetest thing ever," she exclaimed. "It's a sachet shower for Grace." And here are the details for all you readers who have been writing to me for new ideas for the festivities that now precede a wedding.

The twelve girls "in it" were asked to meet at "Polly's" and plan the party. At that time each one was to say what kind of a sachet she'd bring. I waited a few days to get the line, and I am sure the bride-elect will be more than pleased. There were sachets of crepe paper (pink roses and blue bow-knots design), made just to fit a bureau drawer.

One layer of sheet wadding was inside, the cotton being split to hold the sachet powder, and all the girls used the same kind, violet and orris root. The paper was laced together with pink satin baby ribbon. Trunk tray covers were made of pink rosebud silkaline, and had a cluster of three wee sachet bags tacked to each corner.

Two of the girls decided upon corsage sachets, made by taking soft satin ribbon and making just a plain bow with ends. The two loops were stuffed with cotton to hold the sachet and the ends neatly overhanded together. These are worn either in or outside the corset cover beneath a lace waist. The faint color is very pretty.

Sets of six colored satin squares (two by two inches) were softly stuffed with cotton and sachet and gilt safety pins attached. One of the girls made some of these waist or armhole sachets of finest mull over pink satin, edging them with "Val" lace.

The practical girl made linen bags filled with lavender flowers for the linen closet, the name, "Sweet Lavender," being worked in lavender floss. A novelty to me was the sachet made from an envelope filled with sachet to be placed in the desk drawer, and scented blotters made by soaking in a good violet toilet water and drying carefully.

While not strictly speaking "sachets," the gift of a dozen cheesecloth bath bags filled with oatmeal, almond meal and orris with powdered soap were a dainty addition to this very "sweet" downpour.

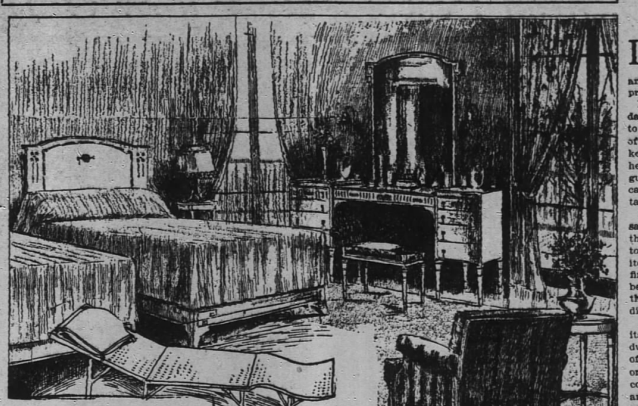
Proverb Contest.

This may be given orally (like a spelling bee) or it may be a written game. Limit each one to a half minute, if played orally, after the first word is named. The class is conducted in this way: The teacher mentions the first word of a well-known proverb, the pupil called finishes it. If unable to do so in the time it is passed to the next one, and so on down the line until some one or no one finishes it.

If the proverb begins with "a," "an" or "the," or any very small word, two or more words should be given to start the pupil off. To help make out the list a few proverbs are given here:

A stitch in time saves nine.
All is not gold that glitters.
Honesty is the best policy.
A friend in need is a friend indeed.
A word to the wise is sufficient.
Half loaf is better than no bread.
When angry count ten before you speak; if very angry, count a hundred.
A bird in hand is worth two in the bush.
A penny saved is a penny earned.
Procrastination is the thief of time.
Make hay while the sun shines.
Never put off until tomorrow what you can do today.
Every cloud has a silver lining.
Appearances are often deceiving.
Blessings brighten as they take their flight.
Never count your chickens before they are hatched.
A little nonsense now and then is relished by the wisest men.
No news is good news.
Look before you leap.
Out of sight, out of mind.
Let them laugh who win.
He who is down need fear no fall.
More haste the less speed.

THE Arrangement of a Bedroom to Be Shared by a Couple Is Not Always Easy Because Men and Women Require Different Furniture for Their Needs. Here Is a Well-Designed Room Which Will Instantly Meet Your Approval, for It Is Roomy and Comfortable and Has a Most Homelike Atmosphere.



By MADAME MAISON.

IF ONE has a large, old-fashioned bedroom with high ceilings and windows going to the floor the furniture may be in proportion and so give a right perspective that will be very pleasing. In furnishing any room try to imagine just how each article will look when placed, as one is apt to be confused by the great variety of shapes and style in the store.

The new twin beds that are minus the footboards are a novelty and show to advantage handsome covers of lace, embroidered Swiss or the wonderful hand-crocheted ones.

A figured paper will be appropriate in such a room with a frieze dropping at least a foot and a half if the walls are over nine feet high. Put plain net curtains up first or dotted swiss with overdrapery of a figured material to fall to the floor and looped back on either side; this effect will diminish the apparent height. A couch on which to nap by day or a wicker chaise longue will be a comfortable addition with a sewing table and little rocker and a big comfy chair by a table for the man of the house, supposing this to be a room for a couple.

Instead of a small dressing table complete with its toilet articles have a large "princess" dresser with a long glass and a row of four or five drawers on either side. Instead of dressing table chair a stool may be used, upholstered with the same material as the draperies. There should be a chiffonier arranged with compartments to hold a man's belongings and a bedside table with a reading lamp. One large rug or small ones may cover the floor as best suits the occupants. This room would be most attractive in rose color and pale gray if the exposure happens to be northwest; the rose would give life and warmth and the gray tone down the afternoon sun. Furniture of this description may be obtained in simple or elaborate style, in enameled wood or mahogany, so all purses may be satisfied.

For Table Covers.

Will you kindly advise me what to get, or make, in the shape of table covers, or scarfs, for an old-fashioned drop leaf stand (mahogany) and a library table, also mahogany and old style, lyre-shaped, supported on square base, table top about 27 by 45 inches. Furniture in room is old-fashioned, bought probably sixty-five to seventy years ago; mahogany frames newly upholstered in a soft, dull gray tapestry, with a design of quaint stiff, little baskets of flowers in dull pastel colors connected by tails of ribbon in old, rather pale blue, all very quaint and Louis something or other. Can make anything you think suitable if needlework is required. BETTY P.

Cross stitch designs worked on oyster white linen would be lovely for the table and stand you describe and quite in keeping with your rooms or you can make covers of the tapestry line with canton flannel, then a satin and finish with a band of dull guimp to be purchased in the upholstery department. The fancy work departments will show lovely designs in cross stitch and all qualities of linen. I should advise a rather course weave.

Reply to Rachel.

You will make no mistake by getting the gray wicker porch set, it will "mix" well with the few pieces you have of brown wood and be sure not to forget the little wicker tea cart. Good luck to the new home. By the way look at the sets of china especially designed for country house. It is inexpensive and so good looking.

Exercise, Not Quiet Amusement, May Be Need of Your Wan Child

I WONDER what is the matter with my little daughter this afternoon—she is so still and demure. The roses in her cheeks have quite faded away, and the once animated brown eyes are now heavy and tired looking," said the conscientious mother as she looked at her growing little daughter of 5.

The little girl looked up in her mother's loving and anxious face and smiled, hoping her childlike smile might blow the look of anxiety from her mother's countenance. Realizing that her smile had failed of its results, she exclaimed with a small amount of enthusiasm, as much as she could muster, "See, mother, what a splendid time our neighbor's children are having; some are playing follow the leader, and the others are dancing on the lawn. Would it not be splendid if I might go down with them?"

"No, my child, I should rather not have you go out of doors now, it is just the warmest time of the day. Besides, I do not care about having you play with all the children in the neighborhood. Wait until your nurse has finished washing and ironing your dresses, and you can go and get your cousin and go for a walk together." The little girl thought much, but said little. Though her mother was not conscious of his fact, she intuitively realized that if she might go down into the street and dance and play with the neighbor's children her eyes would brighten and her face would be painted with the same rosy cheeks she had when she was a tiny thing.

There are many such healthy, lovely little flowers fading and becoming delicate, just because over-anxious mothers are giving their children too much of the wrong sort of care.

Nature is giving your child riches of body as well as blessings of mind and it is your duty as an intelligent mother to make the best use of your child's endowment. Do not dabble with them by keeping those energies, which want their natural, normal expressions, from having their right. If you find that your child is pale and listless or irritable and countrary, in nine cases out of ten she is not getting enough normal exercise either outdoors or in.

Parents often mistake amusing their children for healthful exercise. It is not enough to provide them with a great number of toys and plenty of stories, they must have a chance to express themselves through their own activity. If a child has not plenty of brothers and sisters with whom she can play, it is a mother's duty to see that her child gets plenty of time to play with her little companions, especially the children of her neighborhood.

Your neighbor's children are easy of approval and because they live in the same neighborhood they usually have many common tastes. You need not worry about their finding amusements, for great numbers will suggest themselves, such as "tag," "pussy in the corner," "blind man's buff," "follow the leader," outdoor gymnastic dancing and a host of others.

First Teach Your Child Simple Dances.

If it is too hot or storming too hard for your child to stay out of doors, see that she gets plenty of indoor exercise. Sitting on the floor playing with her dolls and building blocks will not give her a strong body, though it may develop her emotions and dexterity with her hands. As soon as she is able to stand on her two feet give her her share of singing games and dances.

By the time she is 4 or 5 the rythmic games can be supplemented by folk dances and gymnastic dances. Dancing, especially the aesthetic dancing, is an excellent form of amusement. Though good for all children, it is especially valuable for the nervous child. It gives poise, and teaches control of the muscles, both of which are very valuable in overcoming nervousness. As Sarah Comstock, discussing this point, so truly says, "Teach your child the simple exercises which play through all the sensitive foot and leg muscles tingling, calling forth their powers. Any dancing is good, but gymnastic dancing is especially adapted to the weak foot's needs.

"Why not study it a bit yourself, and dance with your child if you cannot put her under a professional teacher?" These dances must be exceedingly simple at first, but they can gradually include the more difficult folk dances of the different nations.

Though you may not realize this important fact, the foot and the leg are usually weaker in the young child than are the arm and the hand. This is because long ago our ancestors were prehensile—that is, they used both their legs and arms. After a time they did much more with their hands than with their feet, and so today our hands and arms have more initial strength.

Let your child jump rope, but as in all other exercises see that the amount is rational.

BROILED FRESH MACKEREL—Pare and split two good-sized fresh mackerel through the back. Remove the spine, scour them slightly and rub with one tablespoonful of oil. Season with a pinch of salt and half a pinch of pepper. Broil them on a brisk fire for ten minutes on the split side and one minute on the skin side.

SALMON, ROLLED, IRISH STYLE—Bone three pounds of salmon. Parboil it. Besprinkle the sides and insides with a pinch of salt, half a pinch of pepper and the same amount of nutmeg. Add a few shrimps chopped fine, one tablespoonful parsley and half a cupful of bread crumbs. Roll together, then put it into a deep pan with a small amount of butter. Bake in a hot oven for twenty-five minutes and serve on a dish, pouring its own gravy over.

FRENCH PANCAKES—Sift half a pound of wheat flour into a bowl. Break in three whole eggs. Add two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and mix well with a spoon; stir in a cupful of cold milk. Pour it in very gradually and mix for five minutes. Butter a griddle or frying pan and place it on the stove. When it is hot drop a quarter of a cupful of batter and bake two minutes. Turn the pancake over and bake the other side as long.

Discovered by College Girls, Chafing Dish Now Is Household Institution

By DOROTHY DOLAN.

IT WAS the college girl at her midnight spreads, who, wishing to give feasts to some of her classmates and sorority sisters, discovered the practicability of the chafing dish.

Busy with her studies and classes all day, she had little time to market or to prepare an elaborate supper. More often than not she had to do her marketing after class hours and prepare her supper while entertaining her guests. This worried her little because she could get things ready and talk to her friends at one time.

A large spread was managed in the same easy manner, because a few of the more energetic girls were invited to act as aids. When the mothers visited at college, they were surprised to find how many splendid dishes might be fashioned in a simple way, all by the aid of a few goodies and a chafing dish.

Now the chafing dish has asserted itself and is found in most well-conducted homes. In small families it is often called into use at the breakfast or at the luncheon meat. It is more commonly used for informal suppers and after theater spreads. Bachelors who had little confidence in handling a gas or coal range find themselves equal to the chafing dish and this form of entertainment.

It is equally valuable when preparing a dainty dish for a convalescent or an invalid, because almost any dish can be had by this means in a hurry and without mussing up a room. Whether heated by alcohol or by electricity they are easily handled and kept clean. This is equally true of a dish of copper, nickel or silver-plated.

In cooking on a chafing dish, it is well to use high-proof spirits, because it gives more heat, burns without odor and proves less expensive. If you do not want to make the work any more difficult than is necessary be sure and have the necessary ingredients and your measuring cups and spoons with your chafing dish on a table before your guests arrive.

The dishes that may be prepared by this simple device are endless. They include toast, griddle cakes, fritters, meat, vegetable dishes, cheese dishes, fancy eggs and many others. A few of the many recipes possible are:

Tomato Cream Toast—Melt two tablespoonfuls butter, add two of flour. Add one-half teaspoonful salt, and pour on gradually one and a half cupfuls stewed and strained tomatoes. To which has been added one-fourth teaspoonful soda. Then add one-half cupful cream. Dip slices of toasted bread in same and serve same as milk toast. This sauce should be cooked over hot water.

French Fritters—Mix and sift one cupful of flour, one-fourth teaspoonful salt and two teaspoonfuls baking powder. Add three-fourths cupful milk, one egg well beaten, and one tablespoonful melted butter. When cooked spread with currant jelly and sprinkle with powdered sugar. Beat jelly with a fork before attempting to spread.

Eggs au Beurre Noir—Melt one tablespoonful of butter and slip in carefully four eggs, one at a time. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and cook until whites are firm. Add more butter if needed. Turn them once during the cooking. Brown two tablespoonfuls butter and add one-half teaspoonful vinegar. Strain over eggs.

Curried Eggs—Melt two tablespoonfuls butter. Add two tablespoonfuls flour mixed with one-fourth teaspoonful salt. Season with one-half teaspoonful curry powder and one-eighth teaspoonful paprika. Stir until well mixed, then pour on gradually one cupful milk. Add three hard-boiled eggs, cut in eighths lengthwise and reheat in sauce.

Grilled Oysters—Clean one pint of oysters and drain off all the liquor possible. Put the oysters in blazer and as fast as liquor flows from them remove with a spoon. So continue until the oysters are plump. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Add two tablespoonfuls butter and serve on small pieces of toast.

Mix one and one-half cupfuls lobster meat. Cut in dice with two tablespoonfuls olive oil and one of vinegar. Melt three tablespoonfuls butter, add four of tomato catsup and the diced lobster. Season with one-half teaspoonful mustard, one and one-half teaspoonful lemon juice, salt and cayenne. Serve as soon as thoroughly heated.

Curried Lobster—Remove the meat from a two-pound lobster and cut in cubes. Cook three tablespoonfuls butter with one-half tablespoonful finely chopped onion until yellow. Add three tablespoonfuls flour mixed with one-half tablespoonful curry powder, one-half teaspoonful salt and one-eighth teaspoonful paprika. Pour on gradually two cupfuls milk. Mash the yolks of three hard-boiled eggs and mix with the liver of the lobster. Add lobster cubes to the sauce and as soon as heated the egg mixture. Serve with boiled rice.

Creamed Crabs—Remove the meat from one dozen hard-shelled crabs. Cook four tablespoonfuls butter with one-half shallot, finely chopped, until yellow. Add four tablespoonfuls flour and pour on two cups of cream gradually. Put in crab meat, one-half teaspoonful salt, one-fourth teaspoonful paprika, a slight grating nutmeg and two tablespoonfuls of sherry wine.

Timely and Tested Fruit Canning Hints for the Economic Housewife

IN CANNING all kinds of food, its condition is of great importance. Select fresh, perfect products. Can it as soon as possible after gathering. Wash berries and small fruits before hulling or stemming, put a small quantity into a colander, pour cold water over them, and drain on a sieve; work quickly in washing to prevent berries from absorbing water, pare fruit with a silver knife, wash all large fruit before paring.

Peel plums, peaches and tomatoes by placing them in a wire basket and plunging into boiling water from one-half to three minutes; until the skin begins to loosen. Plunge the receptacle into cold water for a moment. Drain and peel. Skins of beets and carrots can be removed by this process, allowing a longer time for scalding.

If one wishes to can for commercial market, it is wiser to use the tin can apparatus, as it makes the finished product less expensive than when sold in glass jars. The United States Department of Agriculture, through its bureau of plant industry, furnishes upon application, the directions for the purchase and use of tin can outfits.

In canning peaches, pears, plums, apples and tomatoes, one-period sterilization is sufficient. Sterilize fifteen minutes in hot water bath, washing boiler outfit, at 212 degrees.

In making sirup for canning, one quart and one-half of sugar and one quart of water, will make the following amounts of sirup:

Thin, used for canning apples, peaches, three and one-half pints; medium thin, used for canning raspberries, blackberries, three pints; medium thick, used for canning strawberries, two pints.

Canned Bartlett Pears.

Pare, halve and core fruit which is ripe. Pack closely in jars without crushing. Add one tablespoonful lemon juice to each quart jar. Pour over a medium thick sirup to fill the can. Place covers on jars, clamp upper half of wire over the cover. Sterilize the filled jar twenty-five minutes.

The lemon gives character to the pears. Sometimes pears which are without flavor may be made very palatable by adding lemon juice and ground anise seed tied in muslin, one-half teaspoonful to a can. Thin-skinned pears may be canned unpared. They are richer, but not so digestible.

Those who live where wild barberries are plenty will find a delightful variation in jelly by combining them with quince. To each quart of quince, washed, pared and cut in small portions, add one pint of barberries. When the quince is very soft strain the fruits through a jelly bag. Measure the juice, boil ten minutes, add an equal measure of sugar. Boil until the juice will jelly.

Peaches and Pineapples.

Peach and pineappe make a delicious preserve. Run the prepared meat of a pineapple through the grinder. Add three times as much peach, measured after being ground. Add two pounds of sugar. Cook until the mixture is of the consistency of marmalade. Store in jelly glasses. This preserve is delicious served with ice cream.

Considerable improvements in cans have been made of late and excellent containers may be secured at very moderate prices. The reader will observe in the illustration in the center of this page different types of cans, to be chosen according to fruits to be put up, the space to be occupied, and so on. Whether to purchase commercially canned and preserved fruits rather than put up at home is a question depending largely upon the cost of the home supply—whether one has home-grown fruits going to waste. It is oftentimes less expensive, when fuel, sugar, etc., are reckoned, to buy the commercial product.

Glazed Pineapple Slices.

Take fresh pineapple, wash and peel carefully and cut in one-inch slices. The fruit should be boiled first alone until it is not quite soft. If the fruit is good and ripe one and a half hours ought to do. Meanwhile boil some pure refined sugar, using one-fifth as much sugar as water. When the sugar water gets hot drop in the slices of pineapple; remove and cover them up with paper. At the start a comparatively small amount of sugar is used so that the slices will not float. In this way they will absorb the sugar better.

Next day the slices are arranged in a circle, the sugar being concentrated to 24 per cent and poured over them hot.

The finished candy is transferred to a suitable pan and set aside. It is important that the finished sugar should be poured over the fruit three hours later, before it has cooled so far that a solid crust is formed. Thus if the candy is finished at 4 o'clock it must be poured about 7. The candy pans are left over night in the warm drying rooms and emptied next morning.

Real Estate Men of the City Are Optimistic As Annual "Moving Day" Gives Boost to Market

Reduction in Rents for Residences and Apartments in All Sections of the City Results in Great Activity in Renting Business.

There remains but three days before every moving van in Atlanta will be pressed into service on account of September 1 being the annual "moving day," when almost every one who wishes to get into comfortable quarters for the winter months is looking around for new quarters.

The Atlanta real estate agencies, through their renting departments, have a selection of fine new homes and apartments to offer the winter homeseeker.

Many beautiful apartment houses bedeck the north side of the city, while there are several on the south side.

Many Leases Signed.

Scores of leases for dwelling houses and apartments have been signed during the past week, and many will be those to move into their new homes on September 1, although the renting season will just bud forth in full sway on that day.

The business of closing sales for some time past has been a secondary affair with real estate agencies, who are devoting their time to showing prospective renters houses and apartments which are on the renting market.

Practically everything for rent this season is a bargain at the price asked for it. There are many apartments bringing fully 15 per cent less in price than those same apartments brought last fall, and houses are renting cheaper than in any previous years in Atlanta.

On the north side, beside the many handsome, modern apartment houses, equipped with every convenience known to apartment building, there are a number of brand new apartment houses which have just been completed, or are nearing completion, and will be ready for occupancy during the early fall season.

Those looking for homes, who have sufficient means to rent handsome ones, have often expressed regret at not being able to find anything suitable on Peachtree street and Peachtree road, Atlanta's stylish thoroughfare. However, George P. Moore offers for rent one of the handsomest homes on Peachtree road.

This beautiful residence affords a location in one of the exclusive residential sections of Atlanta. The building is of brick construction and slate roof, and contains two stories, with nine rooms and baths. It occupies a lot 100x400, fronting 100 feet on the west side of Peachtree road. The residence is the fourth house on the west side of the road, going north from Peachtree creek.

Offered at Bargain.

Opposite this handsome brick mansion are the beautiful homes of M. L. Thrower and F. M. Butts.

The Devonshire apartment, which is a beautiful three-story building, constructed of red brick, of various shades of red and pottery, of Oriental design, has just been completed by Fitzhugh Knox, well known in realty circles. The Devonshire is located at Piedmont avenue and Third street.

The Devonshire is equipped with every modern convenience, and already there has been a great rush to secure locations there. Mr. Knox has rented ten of the eleven apartments in the building. Each apartment contains three or four rooms and a private sun parlor.

The one vacancy in the Devonshire is a three-room apartment on the ground floor, which rents for $45.00, containing private baths, showers and sun parlor. The other ten apartments have not only been rented, but the occupants have moved into them.

The Devonshire, besides being in an exclusive neighborhood, is accessible to three car lines, among which is the Ponce de Leon and Druid Hills car line. It is near the Georgian Terrace hotel.

Walker & Chase were the architects who drew the plans for the Devonshire.

The renting of the Palmer apartments, on Peachtree Place, just off Peachtree street, is handled by the B. M. Grant agency.

Handsome Apartment.

This apartment is one of Atlanta's handsomest, both externally and internally. The building is five stories, absolutely fire-proof, there being 10 five-room elevator apartments. The entire apartment is finished in hardwood. Each room in the building has an outside exposure, and the outlook is most beautiful. Each apartment, also, has a porch and bath.

On the south side of the city there is one especially beautiful apartment, which has just been remodelled, for rent. It is the LaHatte apartment at No. 425 Washington street, at the northwest corner of Washington and Bass streets.

The LaHatte is a two-story, brick building, consisting of four apartments of five rooms each, and a sleeping porch, which rent for $40. Janitor service and heat is furnished. Each apartment is furnished with a gas stove and refrigerator.

Comments on Renting.

Interesting comments by a number of the renting managers of various real estate agencies which do large renting business were made last night to a Constitution reporter, as follows:

James Whitten, rent manager of M. L. Thrower agency:

"Business is fine in apartment renting this season, almost better than in any previous year. I am well satisfied with the business we are getting, it being far better than could have been expected."

Raymond Robson, of Foster & Robson:

"Each day in the rent business is taking care of itself, and there are plenty of people making new leases this year. Apartment renting at this season is especially gratifying. I look for this renting season to be as big as ever."

George P. Moore, of George P. Moore & Co.:

"There is no kick on the renting business. It is taking care of itself and doing more besides. The quality of houses being offered for rent this year is better than ever before. The painting, plumbing and other fixtures, roof conditions, etc., are in much better repair in practically all houses on the rent market. And there are some handsome homes for rent on Peachtree, which are being offered at bargain prices. Of course, apartment renting is very active, as during all renting seasons."

Fitzhugh Knox, of Fitzhugh Knox Realty company:

"Those seeking apartments for the winter this year have a greater variety offered them than in any previous year in Atlanta's renting history. There are not only many excellent apartments in the older apartment houses, but there have been added many new apartment houses in Atlanta as well as apartments being offered for rent on the local rent market and homeseekers should have no difficulty in getting what they desire. The upkeep of the houses now on the rent market is exceptional, and the modern conveniences and services which have been installed in all the older apartment houses make them especially desirable."

NORTH GEORGIA TITLE IS CLAIMED BY MONROE TEAM

Monroe, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Monroe closed her most successful baseball season on this afternoon by defeating Lawrenceville by the score of 2 to 0.

This game was fiercely fought from start to finish, Monroe scoring her only and winning run in the ninth inning when Bowden led off with a triple to the right field fence and Sikes followed with a single.

"Bugs" Weston, Monroe's star pitcher, was on the mound and was the complete master of the game. The Lawrenceville batters were helpless before him. He struck out 12 and not a single man reached third base.

Monroe's claim for the championship of north Georgia is strongly founded and of those that have seen her in action. She undisputedly has having lost a single series and also won 15 out of the last 19 games played.

Her team was composed of such stars as Ellison, catcher; Bill Schwartz, of the champion Valdosta team, was manager and first baseman; Clark, from Waycross, was at second; Burrus, of Georgia-Alabama league, was the star shortstop, and Bowden, of same league, covered third. Monroe's outfield was composed of Champ, of Anniston, Ala., and Chancey, the leading batter of the S. A. L., and Godwin, of Montezuma. Her pitching staff was composed of four stars in Weston, Fry, Shirley and Camp.

Score: R. H. E.
Lawrenceville 0 4 1
Monroe 1 7 2

WINDER TEAM ENDS ITS PLAYING SEASON

The Winder baseball team played their last game of this season with Monroe Friday, having played thirty-four games, winning twenty-three. This team won the first eighteen games, which was composed of all Barrow county boys, six of them being only 17 years old. These lads, with only two hired players, tackled the heavy Monroe team, composed of all league players, this week for four games, taking two, one of them 2 to 0, allowing them only one hit, and the other 4 to 3, and we dispute Monroe's claim for this series, as published in Saturday's issue of The Atlanta Constitution. During the season, Winder played Monroe nine games, winning four of them.

Winder expects to be in the ring next season stronger than ever, and would like to have games with the following towns:

Millions Wasted Each Year By Ill-Advised Tire Loading

The number of automobiles in this country has now passed the 2,000,000 mark, which indicates a tire output of about 12,000,000 for this year. Figured at $16 each, which is a conservative average, a value of $192,000,000 will represent the year's output.

Statistics which have just been compiled by the experimental department of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, in his paper presented before the Society of Automobile Engineers at the summer conference, suggested a remedy for this waste by the adoption of a sliding scale of carrying capacities and inflation pressures. This is essentially the adaption of the air pressure to the load imposed on the tires.

"Long experience has shown that these loads and air pressures are the most satisfactory combination for maximum service and effective cushioning," says Mr. Litchfield. "The quantities of comfort and easy riding must be recognized as vital points, equally as important as tire durability.

No Trace of Marowijne.

Washington, August 28.—No trace of the steamer Marowijne was found by the coiler Jupiter and the gunboat Sacramento, which have met near Alacran reef, in the Gulf of Mexico, according to navy department reports today. The vessels will continue the search. The Sacramento discovered some sixty pieces of ten-inch timber thirty feet long, but it is believed these were from some lumber schooner.

STRONG PLEA BY TAFT FOR RED CROSS CAUSE

San Francisco, August 28.—William Howard Taft, pleaded the cause of the American Red Cross in an address today at Red Cross day at the Panama-Pacific exposition. He urged a membership of millions, more funds, and neutrality in giving. He praised Americans for their ready response to calls for relief funds when the European war began, but deprecated the fact that two-thirds of the funds given were disbursed by relief bodies organized on the spot at the moment, while the Red Cross stood ready with a trained organization to do the work.

Mr. Taft said he did not undervalue "the sweets of publicity and popular applause" in promoting good work, but he thought the desire of donors for publicity was harmful when it led to a division of forces and an increase of unnecessary expense. He recounted the work of the Red Cross in the present war and its distribution in money, supplies and paid expert service of $2,000,000.

"More funds," he said, "should be urged, but our people are not as active in giving as they were."

He praised the work of Miss Mabel T. Boardman.

TWO NEW TRAVELERS FOR FAIN & STAMPS

J. J. Barnes, Jr., and F. E. Hood Added to Force of Wholesale House.

The sales force of Fain & Stamps has had two important additions made to it, and henceforth two popular salesmen who have been connected in the past with well-known houses will carry their sample cases from this big wholesale house.

Ben Thompson, who has been with the firm for many years, leaves it on the first of the month. He is going to devote his time and attention to selling Ford autos in the counties of Morgan and Walton, which is in the neighborhood of his old home. He leaves the firm with the best wishes of every man connected with the house, and it is predicted he will make a success of his new line.

J. J. Barnes, Jr., one of the most popular salesmen in this territory, will succeed Mr. Thompson. Mr. Barnes was for a long time with the National Biscuit company, and has a large number of friends and customers who will be interested in knowing of his new connection, where he will carry their best wishes for continued success.

Another addition is F. E. Hood, who for years traveled for F. M. Bohannon, selling "Footprints" and "Favorite" tobacco. He will start out Monday for Fain & Stamps, covering territory along Central and Southern roads, the territory formerly traveled by C. Owens. Mr. Hood, by reason of his experience and ability, will make a valued addition to the road force of the grocery concern.

Almand Had Good Trip.

J. E. Almand, of John F. Meyer & Son, the big flour manufacturers, returned Friday to his headquarters on Produce Row, after a most successful trip through south Georgia. The jobbing trade on whom Mr. Almand called seemed to be quite optimistic of the future, he said, and while in some sections the crops are not as good as they would like, still the people generally are feeling very good over the future business outlook.

Miss Lilly Meyers, of the office force of Fain & Stamps, who has been visiting the big fairs of the west, was heard from by a postal last week. She was having a fine time in Frisco and expects to be back in the city some time next week.

WILLIS LANDS ORDER FOR FORTY-TWO PIANOS

Baldwin Company Will Ship Big Order to Wesleyan Female College.

W. C. Willis, southern representative of the Baldwin Piano Co., who makes headquarters in this city on Alabama street, is being congratulated on landing what is considered a very handsome piano order. He has just secured from the Wesleyan Female college, at Macon, an order for forty-one upright pianos, and one Baldwin Concert grand, to be used in the college. The pianos will be shipped within the coming week from the Cincinnati factory.

The Baldwin company is one of the very largest piano manufacturing concerns. It has factories in Cincinnati and Chicago, and with its six makes of pianos does an enormous business over the entire country. Mr. Willis, the southern representative, is quite optimistic over the future of the business in the south, and believes that with the opening of the fall business his sales are going to show a very large increase.

The selection of the pianos of the Baldwin make by the big Macon college was a great compliment to the manufacturers. Professor Joseph Ahern, director of music, made an exhaustive investigation regarding the pianos to buy. He is much interested in raising the standard of music in his department and his selection of the Baldwin makes of instruments is a strong commendation of the Ellington and other makes.

Wanted—A Flag Pole.

Does anybody know where you can get a flag pole?

That's the question that has been agitating Manager E. R. Partridge, of Hamilton Carhartt, overall manufacturers, at the corner of Mitchell and Peters street. Mr. Partridge has had in his office for some time a very handsome American flag, about 16x20 feet. Keeping it folded up in his office is cramping his patriotism. He is intensely loyal to the head of the big overall concern is loyal to America and American things. So Mr. Partridge wants to get that big flag to waving over his factory, but so far he has been unable to find anybody or any concern that can supply him with the needful flag pole and erect it for him. So, now, if you know anyone with a good holder for that U. S. emblem, even if it's a good second-hand one, communicate with Mr. Partridge.

The sales force of the Rice & Hutchins Atlanta company, augmented by two of the leading officials of the big Boston shoe house, were delightfully entertained by President E. G. Thomas, of the Atlanta house, on last Monday and Tuesday.

When Mr. Thomas learned that Messrs. C. F. Craigie, manager of the Educator sales department, of Boston, and P. M. Mulvahill, representing the Rockland factory, would be in the city the first week in August, he at once wired his sales force to come in and meet them, and arrange for a business convention as well at the Pryor street home of the Rice & Hutchins company. Nearly all the salesmen responded, and on Monday evening, after an informal dinner at the Piedmont hotel, at which Mr. Thomas was the host, the delegation held its business convention in the handsome new home of the shoe house on Pryor street. Samples of the new spring style for 1916 were spread, and all the salesmen were enthusiastic over the handsome showing they made. The new line, they declared, was the prettiest and most attractive ever put out by the big Boston concern. Mr. Craigie made an interesting talk to the travelers on selling Educator shoes, Mr. Mulvahill brought with him a number of the newest models in shoes, and with his attractive line, assisted the Atlanta house in making up the most complete line it has yet offered to the trade.

The salesmen all left the city Wednesday, very one enthused over the meeting and full optimism as to the future business for the Rice & Hutchins Atlanta company.

MERCHANTS HAD BIG WEEK IN BIRMINGHAM

Julius Feibelman, of B. F. Avery & Sons, Returns From Meeting.

Julius Feibelman, jobbing sales manager for the B. F. Avery & Sons, who resides in this city, but who makes his headquarters in Louisville, much to the regret of a number of his personal friends, arrived in the city Friday night from a most successful business trip through Alabama and other southern states.

Mr. Feibelman attended the state merchants' meeting, which had just closed a three-day session in Birmingham, and there met hundreds of the live dealers of Alabama, and was fortunate enough to put over some handsome business for his house.

"Alabama merchants did much of their fall buying while in Birmingham," he said. "The convention lasted about three days, and was largely attended, and I expect the wholesalers did something like more than $100,000 of business. The retailers also did a nice business, as many of the women folk came along.

"The Birmingham people were exceeding gracious and entertaining to their guests, and the meeting is going to be a big boost for the Alabama city. One of the most interesting things about the meeting was the trip made to Lock 17, on the Warrior river. Two big trainloads of visitors and merchants of the city went by rail for twenty miles or more and then took boats for the lock. Making this river navigable by means of this lock is going to mean a great thing for the development of all that section of Alabama.

"An hour's time was given the people at Lock 17, and a thorough inspection was permitted. A supper was spread there. When it is taken into consideration that the dam and lock is 32 miles and more from Birmingham with part of the roads far from being easy, the setting of immense tables, serving of a pleasing supper with hot coffee, plenty of cooling drinks, crackers and cakes, the successful feeding of 1,600 and more people can be wondered at."

Gray Singleton, Florida man for the A. M. Robinson Co., continues to give a good account of himself. He and an unusually good run of orders the past week.

"SPIELS" AND GAMES FURNISH EVENING'S FUN

Fulton Council, 505, U. C. T., Entertain Large Number of Friends.

Fulton Council No. 505, United Commercial Travelers, with a large number of visiting U. C. Ts from Council No. 13, and a still larger number of visiting friends, in which were included wives and sweethearts, enjoyed on Saturday evening, August 21, a most delightful time in their hall in the Kiser building.

The meeting was presided over by T. B. Lewis, who displayed a most happy faculty in introducing the various speakers and numbers on an impromptu program.

Through the efforts of R. L. Wallace, the popular secretary of 505, assisted by his wife, a number of unique and interesting games and contests were arranged.

One of the most enjoyable features of the evening was the "spiel" presented by some of the best-known among the salesmen present. Imagining the audience as a prospective customer the "spieler" had to put across his canvass, just as if he were trying in reality to make a sale. Some of those to be made bright and exciting talks were: R. L. Wallace, on "Unicorn Syrup;" C. E. Byrd, on "Arbuckle's Coffee," and W. G. Moore, on "Insurance."

An interesting contest in which a pretty prize was won by Miss Agnes Arnold was guessing the number of seeds in a watermelon. After all the guesses were registered, the melon was sliced and the seeds carefully counted, which totaled 683.

Another game which afforded much fun was in answering correctly about twenty typewritten questions by the suggestion of some article which lay upon a table. The partners were first selected by the ladies picking from a number of gentlemen who stood behind a curtain with only their feet showing. The first prize, a handsome sofa pillow, was won by Miss Rosalyn Byrd, Mrs. R. A. Clarke, of Macon, also guessed the answers correctly, and in a draw for the prize Miss Byrd won. A fine box of candy was given Mrs. Clarke for her skill.

E. L. Adams, of E. L. Adams company, was one of the specially invited guests for the evening, and made a happy and interesting talk to the travelers. The Firing Line editor also talked, but said very little.

The evening closed with delicious Georgia melons and peaches being served in attendance. Altogether, it was a most happy evening, and when 505 gets ready for another such occasion, if they want a big house full, all they got to do is to—whistle.

In Business 19 Years.

Fain & Stamps had a birthday Saturday. Nineteen years ago this firm started in business. During this time it has grown and prospered until now it is reckoned one of the very strongest and largest wholesale grocery houses in the city. "You can just say to our friends and customers that we thank them for their past favors, and hope to merit a continuance of same," said W. O. Stamps.

E. L. Adams, of the E. L. Adams Co., together with his family, motored down to Jackson, Ga., Saturday afternoon to spend the week-end with the parents of Mr. Adams.

"C. H. S." MAY HAVE TO BUILD NEW FACTORY

Heavy Increase in Demand for These Cigars All Over the Country.

Notwithstanding Val M. Antuono's big C. H. S. factory is described as the busiest place in Tampa and is capable of an output of 125,000 C. H. S. cigars a day. It is more than likely that another big factory will be built in the near future.

It is claimed that even if no new accounts should be opened it could be predicted with safety that the demand for the C. H. S. cigars soon would exceed the existing capacity for production.

Sales of C. H. S. Cigars this month will more than double the distribution obtained for the brand in August 1914. In localities where the C. H. S. is well known, sales are climbing, and C. H. S. is constantly opening new territory. It has gained favorable recognition in Chicago, and is making conquests in the northwest. Invitations are extended to watch it smoke now that it has arrived in New York. Distribution, already begun in the metropolitan district, promises to increase amazingly. Mr. Robert H. Patterson, general sales agent, figures on getting a distribution of a million cigars a month in the metropolitan district within a few months.

"Sport" Lonely—But Busy.

Mrs. H. E. Ramsauer, wife of the shipping clerk at Fain & Stamps, is visiting friends at White Plains, Ga. If it should prove any consolation to Mrs. Ramsauer, it might not be amiss to state that "Sport" has had a lonely but very busy time since she went a-visiting. The past week has been an unusually heavy one in the shipping department at the big wholesale house, and "Sport" has stuck to his job manfully—early and late, for he says he always believes in the old adage, "Business before any foolishness."

HALF HOLIDAY ENDS FOR GROCERY CLERKS

The Wednesday half holiday for retail grocery clerks and butchers ended with last Wednesday. Perhaps this year more than ever before the Wednesday closing movement was a greater success. Practically all the stores in the city granted the request, the movement for which was started and fostered by the officers of the Retail Grocers' and Butchers' association, O. T. Camp, president, being particularly active along these lines, in which he had the able assistance of Secretary J. P. Eve.

Mr. Camp is the well-known grocery-man, and while just now he is engaged in an active campaign for councilman from the third ward, still he says that he hasn't forgotten the co-operation given him in the closing movement by the city merchants, and he wants to return to them both his personal thanks and the thanks of the association for this co-opertaion.

Mail Orders Good.

"Our mail orders are holding up nicely," said W. O. Steele, of the All-Star Manufacturing company. "Our house trade was exceedingly good all last week, too. The country merchants seem to be in better spirits than last year this time, and it begins to look like we are getting back to almost if not quite normal times."

Detroit Electric
$1975 to $2275
The car for all the family all the year
The enclosed car is steadily and surely becoming the preferred type of motor car. Its obvious advantages are winning more buyers each year.
And the modern Detroit Electric is easily the first choice in the enclosed car field. Each member of the family can drive it safely and expertly because of its simplicity and the positiveness of the control system.—On hot days—with windows down—you enjoy open car coolness. On cold, stormy days—with windows raised—you have closed car comfort. And the Detroit Electric is perfectly silent in operation—it is always clean and there are no fumes or odor of gasoline about it. It has plenty of power and all the speed you need. And because its mechanism is so simple and of such high quality it is always dependable and available. There are some points about the Detroit Electric you will only fully appreciate after a demonstration—when will you have yours?

DIFFICULTIES IN PEACE FORMULATION.

America and France were bound together by the close and honorable ties of alliance; and France was in her turn allied with Spain, who now felt her interests to be by no means coincident with those of the United States.

The congress at Philadelphia explicitly commanded its commissioners "to be guided by the wishes of the French court."

Dr. Franklin, Mr. John Adams and Mr. John Jay, who bore its commission, were men of honor and entertained, besides, a lively sense of the very deep obligations of the United States to France, for the money and the armed assistance in the field and upon the seas, without which, apparently, their victory would have been impossible.

It proved impracticable, nevertheless, to act with France, for she conducted herself not as the ingenuous friend of the United States, but only as the enemy of England, and as first and always a subtle strategist for her own interest and advantage.

The American commissioners would not be tricked and made use of, and came to terms separately, secretly, and for themselves with the English, their instructions notwithstanding.

They did not make peace without their ally, but they would not accept terms of her arrangement.

The Count de Vergennes, her astute minister, had meant to devise a balance of power in America which might be made to redound to the advantage of France in Europe; had meant to support England in the contest with the Americans from the Newfoundland fisheries, and in her claim that the northern boundary of the United States should be the River Ohio, instead of the great lakes; to suggest the creation of a neutral zone of territory between the western settlements of the American states and the Mississippi, set apart for the Indians under the joint protection of the United States and Spain; and to stand with Spain for the utmost possible northward extension of the boundaries of Florida, which Spain had taken possession of.

The American commissioners ignored him and got their own terms. The independence of the United States, a northern boundary at the great lakes, a western boundary at the Mississippi, and the use of the Canadian fisheries.

Between the signing of the provisional and the signing of the definite treaty the ministry of Lord Shelburne gave place to a coalition ministry under the Duke of Portland which brought North once more into office; but the course of the negotiations was not materially changed.

The American commissioners got substantially all they had contended for (September 3, 1783).

On the 1st of March, 1781, Maryland had given her tardy assent to the Articles of Confederation, on the understanding that those states which had claims to territory in the west should as soon as possible relinquish them in favor of the newly formed government.

On the 14th of January, 1784, the congress of the confederation, not yet two years old, ratified the treaty of peace.

INDIGNATION OVER THE TREATY.

It was well enough that the United States should have their independence, of course, and their proper boundaries, and that the commercial right of their people to fish in the Canadian waters should be retained; but there were other articles in the treaty which gave almost universal dissatisfaction.

The confederation bound itself to urge upon the states unconditional amnesty for the loyalists and a complete restoration of their estates and civil rights, and to prevent so far as possible any legal obstacles being put in the way of the collection of the debts due British merchants at the outbreak of the war.

Dr. Franklin had very candidly explained to the British commissioners that the congress of the confederation had no power to enforce these articles; that it could only advise the states, and that they would be free to follow or to disregard that advice as they did disregard it entirely and even scornfully, being bent upon vouchsafing to the loyalists neither property nor rights of any kind, and upon virtually wiping out all debts owed to Englishmen.

The confederation, in fact, furnished the country with no real government at all.

The general congress had, it is true, powers which made it seem like a veritable government with respect to all dealings with foreign states, in the making of war and conclusion of peace, in the maintenance of land and naval forces for national defense, and in the raising of loans on the faith and credit of the United States.

It was authorized, too, to act as absolute arbiter of disputes between the states, to establish and regulate post-offices, to determine the alloy and the value of all coin struck either by its own authority or by the authority of the states, to fix the standard of weights and measures, and to regulate all dealings with the Indian tribes.

But it had absolutely no power to lay taxes of any kind.

It was to get its means of support by requisition on the states—by requests which it had no right to transmute into commands.

The confederation had no executive but only its talkative congress, in which the states, big and little, had an equal voice; which could decide no important matter without the concurrence of at least nine out of the thirteen little commonwealths which had just now formed the jealous partnership.

Its congress was but a board of advice; and its advice could be ignored with impunity.

THE IMPOTENT CONGRESS.

THE common affairs of the country had to be conducted as the revolution itself had in fact been conducted—not by the authority or the resolutions of the congress, but by the extraordinary activity, enterprise, and influence of a few of the leading men in the states who had union and harmonious action effort at heart.

The revolution may almost be said to have been carried forward by private persuasion—by the force of conviction, the urgency of argument, the clear interpretation of signs of the times, the ceaseless persuasion, and the contagious zeal of the leaders of men like Washington, Knox, Greene, Schuyler, Hamilton, Henry, Franklin Livingston, Madison, Jefferson, Sherman, Morris, Jay, Gadsden, the Lees, the Adamses—a handful of men in each state who kept every one within reach of their letters or their voices reminded in season and out of season of the happenings, the dangers, the hopes, the difficulties, the duties of the time, stimulating those in authority, checking those in opposition, arousing those who were indifferent.

This, rather than the work of formal committees of correspondence, had kept action awake and made it vital.

The congress had talked ineffectually enough, and done nothing at many a critical moment; had given away to the unfriendly influences of petty factions and listened to unworthy intrigues, while men not in its membership were carrying affairs forward without it.

John Adams himself had too readily joined the silly talk of that disconcerted body when it grew impatient of Washington's "Fabian" policy in the face of overwhelming odds.

"My toast," he had cried, "is a short and a violent war!"

Samuel Adams, too, had seemed once and again, in that demoralising atmosphere of debate without action, to show only his petty gifts of management without a touch of broad or generous temper.

Richard Henry Lee, of Virginia, had criticised the sorely tried commander-in-chief's "delays" at the very time when Washington's letters were being hurried through the country along more lines of power than the congress had ever had use of, persuading men and states to do what the congress vainly suggested.

The impotency, the occasional sheer imbecility, of the only common council the country yet had had been offset and made up for by the singular assiduity and faithfulness in personal effort of the real leaders of opinion in the states.

The states had been remiss enough, as it was, in supplying their quotas of men and money and stores; they would have been still more remiss had not their leading spirits cried shame upon them and excited them in good measure to a performance of their duty.

STAMPEDE OF THE TORIES.

WHEN peace came it proved more difficult than ever to induce the states to act, or even seriously to take counsel, in the common interest.

They had made the confederation, but they were not interested in it. They were engaged in setting their own affairs in order after the long disquieting years of revolution and war which had brought such sad havoc upon their old-time ordinances and ways of life.

Passion had run hot while the war lasted. It was not easy to put a term at once upon the license or upon the distempers which such a time had produced so rankly.

Not a little poise, not a little of the sentiment of law, not a little of the solidity of tradition and self-confidence established with the habit of thought and action, not a little of the conservative strength of the young communities had gone out of the country with the loyalists—not a little of the training, the pride of reputation, the compulsion of class spirit, the loyalty and honor of a class accustomed to rule and to furnish rulers.

There was an added unsteadiness in affairs because in so many places new men, and radical, were at the front in all public business.

Those who had adhered to the old order had made their way out of the revolted states in almost incredible numbers, as the issue of the war approached and became certain.

Throughout the latter part of 1782 and all of 1783 they had poured out of the country in a steady stream, knowing themselves proscribed and ruined, and not daring to wait for the actual evacuation of the British.

Out of the southern country they made their way in ever-increasing numbers into Spanish Florida, or took ship to Bermuda or the British West Indies. Those who were within reach of Canada set out northward through the forests and the wilderness there, following the rough, uncleared trails and the water courses with pack horses and boat, as the old-time pioneers had done in the first settlements of the continent out of Europe, abandoning home and property to escape contumely and the unspeakable hardship of being outlawed and hated in the communities of their own birth and breeding.

Thousands upon thousands crowded to New York to seek the shelter of the British arms.

It was the 25th of November, 1783, before Sir Guy Carleton could effect the final evacuation of the city, so great and so troublesome was the pitiful company of refugees for which he felt himself obliged in mere compassion to provide protection and transportation.

More than twenty-nine thousand refugees (including 3,000 negroes) left the state of New York alone, for Canada, during that confused and anxious year 1783.

Most of these had taken no active part in the struggle which had rendered them homeless. Almost without exception they had been, in opinion, as thoroughly opposed as their neighbors to the policy of the king and parliament toward the colonies. But they had not been willing to go the ugly length of rebellion and of outright separation from England.

When it came to the final breach, some of them had become not merely passive, but active opponents of revolution and independence.

The more partisan had taken up arms for the king. First and last, during the five years of the fighting, there had been no fewer than 25,000 loyalists enlisted in the British service. At one time (1778) they had actually outnumbered the whole of the continental muster under the personal command of Washington.

Most of those, however, who would not join the patriot party had been quiet non-combatants, and had been opponents of the revolution only in opinion.

THE BURDEN OF DEBT.

WHEN the war was over the men who spoke the mind of the majority and who accordingly controlled policy in the states refused to make any distinction between those who had taken up arms and those who had not.

In their eyes they were all alike, "tories" ad traitors; and many an excess of persecution and spoliation, many a wanton insult, many an act of mere vengeance darkened the years which immediately followed the war—increasing the hands of exiles and adding in an incalculable measure to the bitterness which was throughout generations to mark the feelings of Canadians for their northern neighbors.

It was but human nature that it should be so.

It could wonder that civil war had brought these two familiar things in its train.

The bitterest words of the great Washington himself were uttered against the tories. Even with his splendid moderation and poise of mind, he could not find it in his heart to forgive the men who had seemed to fill every country-side his army entered with intrigue and threat of treason to the cause he had given his life to.

The best Virginians had chosen as he had choose; he could not imagine how good men or true patriots anywhere could choose otherwise.

It was part of the almost universal demoralization produced by the war that every sentiment should now exhibit its excess, every reaction prove dangerously violent.

There was everywhere a sort of moral exhaustion; a relaxation of the very principles of just and temperate government which the war had been fought to vindicate; a loss of tone, an excess of perilous agitation.

The war had brought many things in its train calculated to work distress and to throw both morals and business into confusion. For one thing, it had saddled the country with an almost incalculable burden of debt.

The individual states, the general congress, towns, private persons even, had strained their credit to the utmost to meet the engagements and defray the expenses of a season during which business was oftentimes quite suspended and the ordinary sources of income absolutely dried up.

The states and the congress alike had resorted to the demoralising expedient of issuing paper money which they could not redeem. Its bulk had, of course, increased from year to year, and its value had as rapidly declined.

The continental money in particular had fallen so in value that the commodity must have been valueless indeed which fell under the reproach of being "not worth a continental."

It was the good fortune of the confederation to have Robert Morris, one of the most distinguished, honorable and successful merchants of Philadelphia, in charge of its treasury during the critical years of the final reckonings of the war (May, 1781, to April, 1785)—a man who had large means to pledge and who would pledge them to the last farthing to raise a sum of money upon an exigency, as Washington had done for the pay of his troops before Trenton.

Mr. Morris had himself supplied almost everything that was needed for the vigorous campaign which culminated at Yorktown, borrowing twenty-thousand dollars in gold of Count de Rochambeau, upon his personal credit, to do it.

But even Morris, trained merchant and financier that he was, could not make something out of nothing.

LACK OF NATIONAL POLICY.

It took eighteen months to collect one-fifth of the taxes assigned them in 1783.

They neglected, sometimes even bluntly refused, to pay so much as their allotted shares of the interest on the national debt.

The confederation could not, of course, borrow under such circumstances. It was threatened with a mere unhonored lapse of all its powers and even of its very existence, for want alike of respect and support.

The war had cost the confederation more than $92,000,000, reckoned in specie.

France alone had spent $60,000,000 for America in loans and the support of armies.

The states had added an expenditure of quite $21,000,000 more out of their own treasuries or their own credit.

No wonder that the responsible charge of public affairs in America rejected with a touch of bitter passion the demand of the treaty of peace, that they should in addition to all this, restore the loyalists the property they had lost, and pay to British merchants the debts which antedated the war.

Trade, apparently, could not recover from the blow it had received by reason of the long continuance of hostilities.

It was likely to be so, indeed, now that the war was over, than it had been while the war lasted. While the war lasted ship owners could at least use their craft as privateers, to bring in cargoes not consigned to them.

Seamen had found infinitely more adventure and not much less profit in their profession during those lawless years than formerly. But when peace came the ports of the British West Indies, once open to them, became foreign ports and were closed against them.

Productive industry had too long stood still and there was little or nothing to sell in exchange for the English goods every one needed and all bought who could.

A war of tariffs succeeded the war of arms—a war in which each state acted for itself.

The congress of the confederation could not regulate trade—that was not one of its powers.

It could arrange no national policy. It could neither retaliate upon foreign governments nor make bargains of reciprocity with them.

Each state studied its own interest and knew not how to advance even that successfully.

American commerce had everywhere the worst of it.

It had been one of the unhappy omens of the time that the confederation had had to reckon the disbandment of its own army one of the most serious difficulties attending the establishment of peace, and had had reason to feel relieved when it had at last got rid of it.

During those last tedious months which intervened between the surrender at Yorktown and the formal conclusion of peace the idle soldiers had felt, more keenly even than in days of open peril and war, the constant privations to which they were subjected.

There had been times when some of them had been obliged to keep all day within their tents because absolutely without clothes to wear in which they could decently walk abroad.

Their pay was almost never forthcoming; and they thought from time to time that they had good reason to suspect that the congress meant to disband them and send them home without it.

Their very idleness fostered an ill humor among them, for there was nothing but their bitter grievances to think about.

The neglect they suffered naturally seemed an intolerable indignity, and they broke here and there into actual mutiny, their officers hardly restraining them.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

THE WINNER.

William Winter, the popular author of this exciting book, tells the simple but thrilling tale in such an interesting way that the reader regrets that the story is no longer.

It is a story of the International Sweepstakes, and one that will be a real pleasure to all enthusiastic motorists. It tells of modern daring and invention and adventure, and the style the author uses will please any reader, even if he does not know a carburetor from a magnetor.

In writing this automobile racing story the author might have been alluding to indianapolis in his description of "Centralia," or some other city whose speedway is now and then, the scene of international contest. It is thrilling with the intense rivalry among the drivers and makers of cars and the usual crowds who are always present.

The characters created by Mr. Winter seem so real as to speak for themselves in this story of real action. Henry McDonald, the hero, is a man whose "inner development keeps pace with his outward career, who has difficulties to overcome within himself and without"—the hero is at once a motor expert and a "speed coward," for to make good, to win the girl of his choice, to capture the prize of his own ambition, he must master his own weakness. The love plot is delightful, and it is adventure, the style of which is straight, smooth and rushing. There is no pause on this track of adventure, but the speed increases from the opening to the end of the spectacular race of "The Winner." (Bobbs-Merrill company, Indianapolis.)

TARR & M'MURRY'S NEW GEOGRAPHIES.

The MacMillan company have just published two new geographies which have been adopted for use in the public schools of Atlanta. The authors are Ralph H. Tarr, B. S., F. G. S. A., late professor of physical geography at Cornell university, and Frank M. McMurry, Ph. D., professor of elementary education at teachers' college, Columbia university.

The maps and illustrations made by the Williams Engraving company are exceedingly attractive. The illustrations have been selected with great care and study from thousands of photographs and they not only attract the eye, but are used to illustrate topics as treated in the text. A study alone of the pictures, however, will be interesting to the pupil.

In point of interest, these new geographies are gaining popularity, and the material which they provide is a solid foundation for good work, as well as so attractively arranged as to make it a pleasant task for children to study their geography lesson with the same interest as in reading a fairy tale or story book.

The second book for the grammar grades will prove of special interest not only to the pupils, but to grown-ups, if they will only take the time to study it for a short while. Part I, North America, the story of our continent with its peoples, plants and animals; the United States; the territories and dependencies of the United States; South America; Europe, Asia, etc., are all given with maps, illustrations in colors, etc.

The European war has made the study of geography one of special interest today. A year ago this month such places as Reims, Liege, the River Marne, the Dardanelles, the city of Dardanelles with its population of 20,000, and Belgium were among the names the pupil found on the map in his geography, but today they have become of world-wide interest because they are associated with scenes and conditions that are of great importance to us all at this time.

When the schools of our state, as well as all others, begin their fall term teachers should also begin to teach pupils the importance of studying the geography of Europe, for we must learn something about these countries to which the daily newspapers make references as the war progresses, and which are so closely related to our own United States. (The MacMillan company, New York and Atlanta.)

JAPAN'S MESSAGE TO AMERICA.

A symposium by representative Japanese on Japan and American-Japanese relations. Edited and compiled by Naoichi Masaoka, Tokio. The preface by the author, which is very interesting, says in part: "In 1905, ex-President Theodore Roosevelt of the United States acted as mediator between Japan and Russia, which put them at war with each other, and as the result of his mediation the peace conference was held in Portsmouth, New Hampshire. I was then one of the newspaper correspondents who accompanied the peace ambassador, Baron Komura, from Japan. Then in 1906, when the six chambers of commerce of the Pacific coast of America invited a party of Japanese business men to visit America, I was the only newspaper man who went with that party from Tokio and together visited some different American cities.

"These visits to America taught me the following lesson, namely, that the Japanese views of America so far have been erroneous in the main.' At least the Japanese have fallen into the same ternational prejudices as many Europeans."

For this reason the author of this volume wishes to correct this false impression by telling the truths to the American people about Japan. He further says, "I have already done something to introduce America to Japan. Why should I not do something to introduce Japan to America?" It is the author's desire to write a book in English with this object in view but in this work he confines himself to reflecting the views of some of the prominent Japanese.

He closes his preface by saying: "I take great pleasure in presenting the copies of this work to the American. That the Americans in reading this work will find, out of their open-hearted spirit, the true Japan represented in it is what I earnestly hope and firmly believe will be the result."

THE COUNTRY TOWN SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The upbuilding and maintenance of a Sunday school in a small north Georgia town is an interesting little book written by Gus C. Edwards, superintendent of the Clarkesville Baptist Sunday school. Mr. Edwards is a lawyer by profession but possessing the experience of a former newspaper man, he gives his readers, and also contributes to literature, a human interest story along broad, practical lines which will prove of special value to its readers.

Mr. Edwards tells the story of how a small town Sunday school developed into a twentieth century school in about three years' time. How the average attendance steadily grew from 40 to an average attendance of 100. There have been quite a number of books written on the success of the Sunday schools in different cities but this little volume is in a very enthusiastic manner what has been done in a little North Georgia Sunday school with two competing Sunday schools. Price $1.25. (Legal Publishing company, Clarkesville, Ga.)

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS.

Among the interesting fall books brought out by these publishers are the following:

The Freelands. By John Galsworthy. A romance of young love, in this novel Galsworthy has put into it not only a wonderful romantic talent but there is a brilliant commentary on the subjects of today—the social and political questions—that are very absorbing.

Felix O'Day. By F. Hopkinson Smith, who completed the final revision of the proofs just before his death. This is a novel of New York city; the scenes described are real places, and the people are so human, so sympathetic that it will be sure to become one of the popular books of the next season.

The High Priestess. By Robert Grant, who has chosen for the setting of his new novel the scene of "Unleavened Bread." This new novel presents the married life of the new woman, the woman who so truly belongs to the twentieth century, an ambitious woman whose husband is a successful lawyer and political leader; therefore, harmony is not always the watchword of their home. The character heroine, Selma, will prove as interesting in this new book as Selma in "Unleavened Bread."

Somewhere in France. By Richard Harding Davis. The author of "The Red Cross Girl" has written a collection of stories which takes its title from one of the most fascinating he has ever wrote: A story of the present war whose leading character is a German spy and whose scenes are in that part of France which has passed from the hands of the Germans into those of the French. There are several other interesting stories by this popular author and war correspondent.

Aunt Jane is a new book written by Jennette Lee, author of "Uncle William," which will appear shortly. "Aunt Jane" is a very popular character of an endowed hospital in a small inland city. In fact, "Aunt Jane" is not only popular, but she is delightful as well as benevolent and is the right-hand help of patients, doctors and nurses.

The Real Man is a western story by Francis Lynde, who wrote "The City of Numbered Days"—a thrilling story of a town that was built at the bottom of a lake. The author's new story is well written and will prove a good seller.

Continuous Bloom in America. The sub-title, "When, Where and What to Plant," by Louise Shelton, indicates the practical nature of the book. Every home lover is also a lover of flowers and it is their ambition to have flowers blooming from the going away of Jack Frost in the spring to his return in the fall, and the author in her interesting books tells how to attain this information. Later in the fall the author will have published another interesting book on the subject of its title, "Beautiful Gardens in America." It will be attractively illustrated.

MAGAZINES.

Harper's Magazine for September is a very interesting number. In this issue will be found some portions of the diary of John Hay, giving his impressions of Theodore Roosevelt. One extract is of peculiar interest. There is a short article on the longest streets in the world, the location of which is perhaps not known to all readers. Quite a number of popular writers have contributed to this number.

Harper & Bros. announce that they will publish this month "Puddnhead Wilson" in their new limp-leather edition of Mark Twain. Albert Bigelow Paine in his "Mark Twain—An Autobiography," recalls the fact that the title the author first gave this story was "Those Ordinary Twins," and that he said of it, "I don't think it resembles anything in literature."

Zane Grey, whose novel, "The Rainbow Trail," was published last week, has gone to California for some time. Mr. Grey's fiction road seems to be through New Mexico, Utah, Texas, Colorado and Arizona.

Eleanor Atkinson, author of "Johnny Appleseed," is up at a farm on Traverse Bay, Mich., "to see a white and golden-tan collie I bought as a pup two years ago and named 'Bobby.'" "Greyfriars Bobby," the lovable, faithful little Edinburg doggie, whose history the author told in a book of that name.

Clarence B. Kelland, well known as the author of the "Mark Tidd" stories for boys especially, is now busy furnishing an old house which he recently bought in a Vermont village.

Everybody's Magazine has the most searching, constructive and complete series on "National Defense" yet presented to the people of this country. Many of the articles are based on the thinkings of our own army and navy men. There are many thinking people who are not awake to the needs of national defense—the needs of our army, our navy—our coast defense. These articles beginning in the September issue or Everybody's will be worth while, for they are, after all, the opinions of the wisest men of our country.

MAN KILLED IN FALL AT STONE MOUNTAIN

Victim of Accident Is Believed to Be Wilson Reid, of Norfolk, Va.

A man supposed to be Wilson Reid, of Norfolk, Va., from papers found on his person, was instantly killed at Stone Mountain about 11 o'clock Saturday morning when he plunged 200 feet off the side of the mountain to his death.

John Fargason, a stonecutter working at the Stone Mountain quarry, witnessed the fall, and after giving the alarm to other workmen there, found the body mangled and crushed far below the place where he had been standing when first seen.

H. V. Tuggle, a Shriner, who was at Stone Mountain, took charge of Reid's body, and after telegraphing Norfolk was informed by the Shrine temple there, of which Reid had identification cards, that the man was prominent in Norfolk.

Papers on his person showed Reid to be a member of Khedive temple of Shriners; Grice Commandery, Knights Templars; United chapter, Royal Arch Masons, and Owens lodge, F. & A. M., of Norfolk.

He operated a newspaper distributing agency in Norfolk.

Mr. Tuggle is waiting arrival of relatives of Reid.

At the coroner's inquest held by H. M. Thompson, coroner of DeKalb county, the jury found that Reid came to his death through a fall from the mountain. The body was then moved to Patterson's chapel. It was sent to Norfolk Saturday night in charge of J. A. Pritchard, a fellow Shriner of Norfolk, who was stopping in the city, and who received orders from Khedive temple to accompany the body home.

MAKING WAGONS

Darsey is still making wagons—all styles of high-class grocers' and butchers' delivories, with or without tops. Darsey feels so good when he is building a wagon that he just can't help putting his spirit into it, and the consequence is his rigs are so good a wagon as any man's money can buy. Asking Darsey for a catalogue is almost like sending him an order. Try it.

Mlle. Jennie Defau Will Open Alkahest Season Here Oct. 15

MLLE. JENNIE DEFAU.

First of a series of artists to appear in Atlanta during the coming season.

Petite Jenny Dufau, leading soprano of the Chicago-Philadelphia Opera company, has been added to the Alkahest Lyceum series for the coming season. Miss Dufau and her company will appear at the Auditorium-Armory in Atlanta on October 15 as the opening number of the course. Miss Dufau has never before sung in Atlanta, though she is quite a favorite with the music lovers of Nashville, Birmingham, New Orleans and other southern cities, where she appeared last season with great success.

Mlle. Dufau made a rather meteoric debut into the Chicago-Philadelphia Opera company two years ago as a substitute for Mme. Tetrazzini, scoring a decided triumph.

The other of the dates for the Alkahest course have been fixed as follows:

Dr. Hamilton Holt, November 4.

Grand Opera Artists company, November 24.

David Bispham as "Beethoven," December 14.

Colangelo's Italian band and orchestra, January 14.

Hettie Jane Dunaway in "Daddy Long Legs," February 10.

Senator Theodore E. Burton, February 22.

Brush & Company, magicians, March 16.

Vice President Thomas R. Marshall, April 4.

Season tickets for the course will go on sale about September 10 at the Cable Piano company. The price of the season tickets has been reduced to $1.60, for seats anywhere in the balcony of the Auditorium, while the tickets for the arena and dress circle seats will remain at $1.50 and the boxes at $2.00 for the season.

Those desiring to economize in any way in entertainment for the coming season may secure a couple of season tickets admitting them to ten attractions at the price of 10 or 15 cents each. All the profits on this course go to the Associated Charities for their work.

Employees of Rich's Form Mutual Aid Association

A Mutual Aid association has been organized by the employees of the M. Rich & Brothers company, the organization, as the name would imply, for the benefit of the employees in case of sickness or affliction of any sort which would hamper working capacity.

The officers and board of directors of the association are chosen from the employees and by them, and the organizing has been accomplished with the aid of Miss Dorothy Ayre, who has organized similar associations in many large cities, bringing forth great benefits to employees.

The firm of M. Rich & Brothers company have contributed $500 toward the general fund of the association, this fund used only in case of sickness, and added to by the members in monthly dues. There is also a special fund which is voluntary, and which, it is expected, will be contributed to by entertainments which will be given by the association, and for the purpose of recreative pleasures.

In explaining the values of the association, Miss Ayre stated that frequently young men and women do not know how to so manage their wages and living expenses to be able to save any money. There is no thought of an emergency, and all goes well until an illness develops. Then there is not only the temporary loss of remuneration from the employer, but the increased expense of an illness.

Right here is where the association work come in. For the small monthly due required the sick employee will not only be looked after, but receive half the amount of his or her salary from the association, and the care and attention which a fraternal body can and does give an ailing member.

The employers can keep in touch with cases through the association and aid in emergencies. This form of organization among employees is on a basis separated from the idea of other benevolence or philanthropy. It is a business-like arrangement by which members can pay for what is done for them in emergencies, and can be made to prove its economic value both to the employers and employees of the institution where large numbers of young men and women are brought together in business relations and interests.

Prominent Women Confer On Education and Industry

An interesting conference was held in Atlanta Friday afternoon between Mrs. Nellie Peters Black, president of the woman's department of the Southern Conference on Education and Industry, and Mrs. Thomas J. Owens, of Montgomery, Ala., chairman of the country life committee of the woman's department of the National Civic federation.

The purpose of the conference was to relate more closely the work being done in the interest of the south's educational and industrial interests by women's organizations, especially the women's federations of clubs in the various states comprising the southern agricultural states.

The report of Georgia's accomplishment, through her woman's clubs, for education and the industries, made by Mrs. Black at the general conference meeting in Chattanooga in April inspired the organization of a woman's department of the annual conferences, and the unanimous selection of Mrs. Black at the head of the new department.

Mrs. Owens has been distinguished for her work in Alabama in rural betterment, through clubs and other agencies. She is secretary of the Association for Diversified Farming, and chairman of the rural life work being done in the several southern states under the leadership of the National Civic federation.

At the conference held Friday afternoon, at which Mrs. Owens, Mrs. Black, Mrs. Lida Russell, of Rock Hill, S. C., secretary of the conference, and others were present, it was decided to appoint a representative woman in each state to co-ordinate the forces of the women in various organizations with departments of education and industry.

Those appointed were:

Alabama—Mrs. Charles Henderson, Montgomery.

Arkansas—Miss Eva Reichardt, Little Rock.

Florida—Miss Agnes Ellen Harris, Tallahassee.

Georgia—Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, Thomasville.

Kentucky—Mrs. Charles C. Weaver, Louisville.

North Carolina—Miss Mary Owen Graham, Charlotte.

Tennessee—Mrs. Rutledge Smith, Cookeville.

Virginia—Mrs. B. B. Mumford, Richmond.

West Virginia—Mrs. Stewart M. Walker, Martinsburg.

NEGRO CHOIRS WILL HOLD BIG CONTEST AT THE AUDITORIUM

A contest between choirs representing several negro churches and choral organizations will be held in the Auditorium-Armory Tuesday evening, August 3, at 8 o'clock. There will be no so-called high-class selections, those in charge say, but the programs offered by the rival choirs will be composed of old familiar melodies.

A collection of valuable books is offered for the prize and the choirs so far entered are from Ebenezer, Reed Street, Mt. Olive and Friendship churches and the Central Society.

W. Woods White, Dr. W. W. Landrum, who has been supplying the First Baptist church during August of Dr. Daniel, and Dr. C. T. Walker, Augusta, known as the "Black Spurgeon," will be the chief speakers.

This is proposed to be a welfare meeting for wayward boys and girls and helpless old men and women. Admission will be 15 cents.

PREHISTORIC BONES FOUND IN CUTTING ROAD IN HOUSTON

Perry, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—T. S. Chapman, superintendent of Houston county chain gang, has completed the road from Big Indian creek across the Limestone Creek ridge in the southeastern portion of the county to the Pulaski line, a distance of eight miles, thus completing a link in a road highway from Fitzgerald via Hawkinsville and Perry to Macon.

While grading across the Limestone ridge at a depth of twenty feet, Mr. Chapman found a number of relics, among which were the petrified bones and two large fish teeth, the largest of which is three inches in length, tapering from a width of two inches to a fine point, with edges resembling a fine tooth saw. Part of the jaw bone of the fish is attached to these teeth, which are well preserved. The teeth are very sharp and the edges resemble coarse pointed needles, though shorter. A quantity of black substance resembling phosphates was also found.

Needle Swallowed by 13-Year-Old Girl; Rushed to Hospital

Hazel Love, a 13-year-old inmate of the Jewish Orphans' Home at the corner of Washington and Love streets, was taken to Grady hospital early Saturday night suffering from severe pains in her side.

An investigation revealed the fact that she had swallowed a needle several days ago while sewing.

Hazel states that she don't mind the needle only once in a while, but will undergo an operation Monday at which time the little piece of steel will be removed.

DRIVES INTO TREE TO AVOID YOUNG BOY; THREE ARE INJURED

Cordele, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—When William Webster last night about 8 o'clock sent his machine crashing into a tree on Eleventh avenue to prevent running down Marvin McArthur, aged 6 years, son of Dr. and Mrs. T. J. McArthur, Miss Emma Maddox, age 14, an occupant of the car, was seriously injured when she was thrown head first from the car, through the windshield, cutting an ugly gash across her face. She sustained other injuries, but was not rendered unconscious. Miss Emily Webster, aged 14, and Eunice Webster, aged 3, sisters of the young man driving the machine, were dashed from the car, though both escaped with minor injuries, being badly bruised about the body.

The little McArthur boy was brushed down by the machine, and sustained severe bruises. Young Webster was thrown heavily against the steering wheel, sustaining painful injuries, though retained his seat in the automobile.

While playing with several small companions the little McArthur boy attempted to cross the street directly in front of the approaching automobile. There were two other automobiles, it is reported, standing alongside each other on the right side of the street, and there was no manner by which young Webster could have prevented crashing into the two machines and running down the child than to send his machine against the tree.

OFFICERS BELIEVE PLUMBING FIXTURE THIEF IS IN JAIL

Call Officers Evans and Haslett captured Madison Martin, a negro, in the act, it is said, of stealing plumbing fixtures from a vacant house at the corner of Glenn and Martin streets about 11 o'clock Friday night.

Police think that the call officers captured the marauder who has been despoiling vacant houses in the absence of their owners during the summer. The officers state that there have been many houses damaged in that manner during the past two or three months.

The negro was held under a bond of $500 in police court Saturday afternoon.

RUN OVER BY MACHINE, J. H. HARDY SUCCUMBS

Marietta, Ga., August 28.—(Special.) J. H. Hardy, the young teacher run over last week by an auto at Sandy Plains school, died at a sanitarium here Friday. His remains were taken to Anderson, S. C., for burial. Young Hardy, who was 26 years old, was an efficient teacher.

THIRD DISTRICT SCHOOL WILL REOPEN MONDAY

Americus, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—The Third District Agricultural and Mechanical school will reopen Monday with a next to capacity attendance, representing fifteen to twenty counties in southwestern Georgia. Plans for replacing the academic building burned in April are progressing favorably and that the school will have a most successful session seems assured.

JOSEPH STEWART QUITS HIS POSTAL POSITION

Washington, August 28.—Joseph Stewart, second assistant postmaster general for the last seven years, has resigned. He will be succeeded by Otto Praeger, postmaster of Washington.

Mr. Stewart, who has been connected with the department for many years, has been retained by the department of justice in litigation involving railway mail pay. He was appointed from Missouri. Mr. Praeger is from Texas.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, U. S., WASHINGTON, D. C.,

Colonel J. C. Woodward: My son will complete this month his first year at your school, and I am so well pleased with the result of this year's work that it is a pleasure to me to commend your school in the very highest terms. Your system of combining in the everyday work of your school physical and moral training along with mental training appeals very strongly to me, and is founded, I think, on the true theory of proper education. I am, Yours very truly, W. G. BRANTLEY.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Committee on Rivers and Harbors,

Colonel J. C. Woodward, President: I feel confident my son has been fortunate in having attended your institution for the past three years. The physical, mental and moral training is excellent and not surpassed in any school of which I have knowledge. As a preparatory school it, in my judgment, has no superior. Yours very truly,
J. R. SPARKMAN.

Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Colonel: I certainly appreciate the great work you are doing at your school. You are serving well your day and generation and in coming years many will rise up to call you blessed.
Your friend, W. C. ADAMSON.

The Georgia Military Academy deserves to rank among the very formost schools for boys. Its departments are conducted after the highest ideals, by the ablest of instructors. It is notable among all Southern schools for the moral tone which pervades it. There can be no mistake in committing sons to this noble school.
JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES,
Editor New York American.

UNIVERSITY OF GEORGIA,
Office of the Chancellor, Athens, Ga.

Dear Sir: Woodward's are the boys, who have come to us, are well prepared in their studies, and they have a splendid spirit. This latter, I value most highly. Yours sincerely, D. C. BARROW.
President's Office.

GEORGIA SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY,
Atlanta, Ga.

This institution has enrolled a number of graduates within the past few years from the Georgia Military Academy at College Park, Ga. These young men have come to us well prepared academically, and on the preparatory foundations laid have done our work well. Furthermore, the young men from the Georgia Military Academy have evidenced a careful training as to discipline and character.
K. G. MATHESON, President.

ALABAMA POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE,
Auburn, Ala.

My Dear Colonel Woodward: We have had a large number of students from your school and they have uniformly taken high rank in their classes. They are earnest and trustworthy, showing excellent moral training, while their standing gives evidence of thorough, painstaking scholarship, the result of careful training. I am,
Very sincerely yours, CHAS. C. THACH.

Dear Sir: I am thoroughly satisfied with the development of my boys for the past three years under your care and guidance. I have two more boys who will be ready to be sent off to school in about two more years, and if no misfortune befall us, I know of no better way of expressing my gratitude than by advising that these boys will be sent to you.

With best wishes and highest personal regards, I bew to remain, Yours very truly, P. S. CUMMINGS.

GEORGIA MILITARY ACADEMY

The South's Most Splendidly Equipped Prep School

BEGINS ITS SIXTEENTH YEAR SEPT. 7

THIS noted school offers many special advantages to the boys and young men of Atlanta and vicinity as day or boarding pupils.

2.—The Military Department is under the supervision of the U. S. War Dept. and in charge of an active army officer, a graduate of the U. S. Military Academy. All the equipment of this department is furnished by the Federal Government.

3.—G. M. A. is one of the four Prep Schools in the U. S. "especially commended" by the War Dept.

4.—The Military feature insures the highest type of discipline, graceful personal bearing, gentlemanly manners, ability to organize and direct men, and robust physical development.

5.—G. M. A.'s equipment of modern, sanitary buildings, with the most beautiful and commodious campus in Georgia, is removed from all noise and dust, and affords ideal conditions for study and all outdoor activities.

6.—A strong, experienced faculty, with splendid school spirit and highest moral and social standing.

THREE DISTINCT COURSES OF STUDY

Colonel J. C. Woodward, College Park, Ga.

Dear Sir: The plan on which your school is conducted appealed to me very much as following correct principles. Theoretically it is ideal, but what is more to the point, the practical results as evidenced in the case of my son makes me very glad that he was under your care for the past two years. I hope to send you two more of my sons when they are of proper age. Thanking you for the efficient service you have rendered, I beg to remain,
Yours very truly, H. K. MILLER.

SUPREME COURT OF GEORGIA,
Atlanta, Ga., May 10, 1915.

Dear Colonel Woodward: I have been greatly pleased with the progress which my oldest son, Frank, has made during the three years he has attended your admirable institution. Not only has the advancement he has made in his studies been entirely satisfactory, but the military and gymnastic features of your School have developed in him a fine physical manhood, and his general training it has given him a broader view of the responsibilities of life. Judging by the results which you have accomplished in the case of my two boys, I can not too highly recommend your School to all parents desiring to have their sons receive proper preparation for a college course.
HORACE M. HOLDEN, Associate Justice.

GEORGIA SAVINGS BANK & TRUST CO.

I have been greatly pleased with the physical development of my son during the past year, as well as the progress he made in his studies.

My investigations before I placed my son with you, as well as my observation during the past year, has convinced me that the character of the men and women constituting your faculty is such that every care is taken to develop the moral character of the boys.

I believe that you have one of the best locations in the Southern States and an ideal school for boys.
Yours very truly, GEORGE M. BROWN.

Traverse City, Mich., July 17, 1909.

Dear Sir: As you know, we first sent one boy there last fall, on account of his health, and received so many favorable reports from friends whom we asked to call, that we sent another boy last January, and after having visited the School in April last and having met the members of the faculty and watched the working of the School closely for several days, we were so favorably impressed with it that we are sending three of our boys to you this fall.

We congratulate you on the physical properties of your School, location, grounds and buildings, but more particularly on the corps of instructors you have assisting you, and we are more than satisfied to leave our boys with you, feeling that no better school could be found anywhere.
Yours very truly, W. C. HULL.

My Dear Colonel Woodward: My son, Willis, will soon complete his second year as a student in the Georgia Military Academy, and I am so well pleased with the progress made by him that it is my intention to send him to you for the third year. In doing this I beg to express my approval of the school and of the methods pursued in bringing out the best there is in the boy as a student.

In addition to this, I am impressed with the fact (because it is a fact) that character building is earnestly sought for in your student body, and with marked success. What more would one ask?
Sincerely yours, C. E. BATTLE.

THE BROKEN COIN

By EMERSON HOUGH (From the Scenario by GRACE CUNARD)

NINTH INSTALLMENT

SYNOPSIS.

Kitty Gray, newspaper woman, finds in a curio shop half of a broken coin, the mutilated inscription on which arouses her curiosity and leads her, at the order of her managing editor, to go to the principality of Gretzhoffen to piece out the story suggested by the inscription. She is followed, and on arrival in Gretshoffen her adventures while chasing the secret of the broken coin begin.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

The Trap.

"Mademoiselle, give it to me! Let us end all this."

The voice of Count Frederick was agitated. For once he had met a situation sufficient to shake him from his calm.

Kitty Gray made no answer, as she shrank back, the coin tightly clasped in her hand. She cast on him a look so full of womanly anger as might have scorched him—an anger now devoid of fear.

"Will you not?" The man's voice had in it now something almost of pleading. Count Frederick felt something of shame at his own part in this.

"No!" she answered at length, her own voice low and even, panting out the words. "No, I will not. Come and take it from me if you dare. You have done that once, why not again?"

He turned away with a sudden gesture, his face red in chagrin over the justice of her taunt.

"You remember that?" said he. "What remains? Must I be yet more rude with you? It is not that I like the part, mademoiselle; be sure of that. It was not myself but my man who laid hands upon you that other time."

"He is still your man. You yourself still are willing to persecute a woman and a stranger. You are no better than he."

"Suppose I am not, then. Does it look as though you would gain much by defying me? Come, now. The coin is nothing to you; it is everything to me. I swear it is more than I thought it ever would be. It is life and death for me, and more than that, mademoiselle. Would you stand between me and an ambition such as that? I would repay you a hundredfold in any way you needed, if you would but listen to reason. But perhaps a woman does not know the word for reason."

"No, I do not. I remember only one word, and that is hate for you! When my chance comes I shall still remember that. In turn I will put you behind the bars if ever the opportunity comes to me. And you shall stay there always for all of me. I hate you!"

Count Frederick smiled grimly. "There is comfort in that word, mademoiselle," said he. "Rather that than leaden-eyed indifference, at least. But as for me, I do not hate you, neither am I indifferent toward you. I only—at least, mademoiselle, I try only to think of the coin and what it means to me."

"If it belonged to you, monsieur, it would have gone to you long ago. If you ever owned it you would own it now."

A sudden change came over the face of the nobleman as he caught the conviction in these words. They touched for him some consciousness long left unawakened.

"What do you mean?" he asked in a low voice. "What is it that you mean when you say that?"

"When Frederick, count of Gretzhoffen, deserves this coin; when he earns it; when he gains title by virtue of right thoughts and deeds, then perhaps it will come to him; surely not before. This coin," she held it now out before her in her hand, "it will come eventually to that place where it belongs. It is seeking for that place now. The people really own it. They ask freedom and justice and liberty. And now you ask me why I cling to it; why it clings to me. I suppose it is because something impels me, compels me, to do what I have done."

Count Frederick turned to compose himself to a situation of greater comfort. As he did so, and was about to seat himself upon the lower stair, something fell from the pocket of his coat; something which he had brought with him from his room, in the hope that it had not been observed there by this woman. It fell now face upward on the stair between them, and he saw that she had seen it. He accepted the fact, and at first did not attempt to pick up the little picture, for it was the little picture which he had brought with him from his room.

"You saw, mademoiselle?" said he. "I had hoped that you would not."

"Yes, I see it now; I saw it before in your room," answered Kitty contemptuously. "You ask why I venture into your apartments now and then. Have I not the right? May I not claim my own property? I am not familiar with the laws of Gretzhoffen. Indeed, it seems to me there are no laws in this land. Not knowing how to replevin my property by process of law, what shall I do—wait and lose it, or take my own when I find it?"

Count Frederick smiled at this.

"You claim the coin also by that law?" said he. "Very well, I claim my picture by that law. Possession is nine points of the law of any land. Will you trade this for that?"

"No," spitefully.

He remained silent for a time, at length sighing. "Quite right," said he. "Neither would I, if our positions were reversed. Nor would I, things remaining quite as they are!"

"There is no bargain concluded," said he. "So then I suppose we will wait here until doomsday."

"Yes," viciously.

"Agreed, then, mademoiselle. With your permission, may I light a cigarette? Till doomsday! I would rather spend my time here than any place I know."

CHAPTER XXXVII.

New Problems.

Meantime the agencies of the law were in charge of another situation which but now had arisen in the destiny of the dynamic Gretzhoffen coin. There had been murder done but now over this coin. The city was exerting all its force usually employed in the preservation of life and property. Swiftly a cordon of troops and of the local gendarmerie had been summoned into action. The exits of the town were guarded. The gendarmes filled the streets near by, some guarding the crossings, others converging toward the point of greater interest, whence the alarm had come—the Ritz hotel.

The entire city was alarmed and on guard. That criminal must act swiftly who now could hope escape. A captain of one squad of the gendarmes entered the hotel itself and swiftly approached the desk where stood the manager of the hotel, the clerk, many of the servants, including the hysterical maid who first had brought the news of the tragedy.

"What is this, monsieur?" demanded the officer, as he approached the desk, his quick eyes glancing over every detail about him. "Remain here, all of you. Let no one attempt escape. What is this, then?"

"We do not know, captain," began the clerk, who acted as spokesman. "This maid brings the alarm; she declares a man has been found killed in one of our apartments."

"What room was it, monsieur?"

"That belonging to a young American woman, a Miss Gray."

"Where is she?"

"I do not know, captain. She was here but now. We did not see her enter, but saw her leave. She and her man come and go often—somewhat mysteriously, as I must admit."

"When was she here last?"

"Within the hour, I was about to say."

"And who was with her?"

"Her man, whom I have just mentioned. They came in apparently from the country; apparently from travel. They came in at the rear entrance, so it seems. Soon after her arrival a gentleman inquired for her."

"And where is that gentleman?"

The clerk looked about him. Count Sachio by this time had approached the door, and would have been glad enough to pass out. Detained by the porter for a time, he now had met the gendarmes, who allowed no one to leave the place. The captain approached him.

"Monsieur, you must join us for a time," and led him toward the desk, where he resumed his questioning of the hotel force.

"Is this the gentleman?" he inquired of the clerk. The latter nodded.

"What did this gentleman say?"

"He asked me where was the charming young woman, the American. He said he had known her before."

"Has anyone else inquired for the young American lately? Has anyone else been in her apartments?"

The clerk considered for an instant. "One other, monsieur le capitaine, yes."

"Who—when was it?"

"A gentleman whose name I dislike to speak in public."

"Speak; it is the law."

"Very well, then, it was Monsieur le Comte Frederick of Gretzhoffen."

"The Count Frederick, when was he here?"

"Ah, that was before the return of the young woman from an absence of several days."

The officer turned to his men. "Those of you who remain," he said, "will guard all these whom we have questioned here. Prevent all from leaving the hotel. I must go to find the Count Frederick himself and bring him here. Perhaps through him we may find something of the whereabouts of the young woman herself. Once we find her we have found the solution of this crime."

"That we cannot say. This maid alone has seen."

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Stone Walls Do Not a Prison Make.

Roleau, guardian of the fortunes of his mistress, had remained at that portion of the palace which seemed to him most useful as a coign of vantage in watching against intrusion. He had not been aware of the quiet advance of Count Frederick when the latter had been summoned by the electric bell set off by Kitty's presence in his own apartments. He knew nothing of the device by which the count had managed to trap the intruder; knew nothing of the cause of the long silence on the part of Kitty, whom he had left alone in the count's apartments.

As for the attendants of the palace itself, no alarm came from them. In truth, they all were in the front part of the building, grouped near the great windows or the street door, whither they had been called by certain alarms. They had seen hurrying troops, had heard the challenge of the officers of the law. That challenge came closer to them. A little group of men marching hurriedly, men in uniform, now ascended the great stairs. A loud rapping came at the doors of Count Frederick's palace. "Open, in the name of the king!" came the summons.

The servants, terrified, lacking the command of their master, not knowing where that master was, knew no alternative but to obey. The door was opened. The captain of gendarmes and his squad entered.

"The master of this place," he demanded of the men who met him. "Where is he? Is he at home?"

"We do not know," stammered the major domo, the first to speak.

And while two of his detail held the servants in the lower part of the house, the others, led by the captain of gendarmes, started up the great stair toward the interior of the palace. Therefore they approached the position of Roleau, who had stationed himself in the hallway where the stair reached the first entresol.

All at once he heard the voice of Kitty, loud and clear: "Roleau! Roleau! A moi! Vite! Vite!" He hastened on down the hall, knowing that his mistress was once more in some desperate plight, and so found himself at length face to face at the foot of the staircase with the Count Frederick, who turned to meet him.

"Eh bien, Roleau?" smiled the latter "What, again? You are most faithful, shall I say most industrious, in the service of this lady? I would you had been so devoted in my own."

"As you please, master," replied Roleau, with aplomb. "But where is she?"

"She seems safe," said Count Frederick coolly, and waved a hand.

"So then, this was why!" cried Roleau. "Open this gate, I say."

"Roleau, you will yet exhaust my patience. This is my home. I have had almost enough of your running back and forth in it as you like. This is the last time. Out of here, you fellow."

"Is it so?" grinned Roleau savagely, his own mind upon the main situation of menace to his mistress. "There are things which even matters quickly, master. But as for this, I won't argue now. It is your own safety demands it. Listen, the men are coming—the officers—don't you hear them?"

"Who are coming?"

"The gendarmes. There is a charge of murder. They are after you, they are coming to search this house. If they find you with her, trapped, what will they do? Open, master, quickly, I beg of you. It is for the sake of her and yourself."

"I do not run," said Count Frederick, slowly. "If there is such a charge as this, certainly we shall meet it, for it is our purpose as well as theirs to find who are guilty."

"Come, now," he turned to Kitty as he drew the key of the lock from his pocket, "you have once more, by virtue of this exigency, mademoiselle, conquered me! I must set you free for a time."

He flung open the iron grille. Kitty sprang down the steps, clung to the arm of Roleau. A flush came to Count Frederick's face as he saw how she avoided himself. There was, however, no time for further speech. The sound of rapid footfalls came down the hall. The captain of gendarmes and his men were at the door.

"Messieurs, welcome!" said Count Frederick. "But why are you here?"

"Monsieur le comte, we ask pardon for the intrusion, but we must ask you to join us," replied the officer. He was impressed by the calm dignity of the count.

"For what reason do you desire our company, monsieur le capitaine? Is there any charge against us?"

"There is a charge of great severity to be laid against someone, monsieur le comte. We ask your aid to determine who that one may be. This young woman, who is she?"

"I am Miss Kitty Gray of America," answered the object of his suspicion. "This is my servant, Roleau. Who are you?"

"We are of the royal police, mademoiselle. A murder has been done in your room at the Ritz hotel. Naturally someone is under suspicion. Let me caution both you and Count Frederick not to speak. What you say may be used as evidence."

Count Frederick turned suddenly toward Kitty, a warning in his eyes. She stood, therefore, silent, looking at the man.

"Mademoiselle is in no sense responsible for any of this," said he to the officer. "We will all go with you and conclude this matter as quickly as possible. We must be released at once from detention."

The little group passed along the walk to the open curb of the street. It was Roleau who hesitated here, addressing the captain of gendarmes.

"Monsieur le capitaine," said he, "I see that you guard all the escapes possible to any guilty man. You will therefore allow me to step to the corner to summon a carriage for these two excellencies?"

The captain of the gendarmes hesitated for a half-instant, frowned, and then nodded.

Those who lingered for an instant saw Roleau walk leisurely toward the corner, raise his hand as though in a signal, and then break into a run.

"Wait," exclaimed Count Frederick, as he saw the plan of the quick-witted servant. "If you leave us we also might run away. We will pick him up, no doubt. Do you tarry here with us."

In fact, the captain of gendarmes, seeing his own party reduced by divisions to no more than a couple of men beside himself, hesitated, and turned to secure the safety of his more important captives. While they paused they heard the quick wheels of a taxicab which drew up before them. After all, it was an open question what had been Roleau's intent, for certainly he had ordered this vehicle to come hither. Making the best of the matter, the captain of gendarmes motioned for his prisoners to enter the car.

Kitty found herself face to face with a large man in full uniform, a man with a heavy beard and merciless eye, who now addressed himself to his subordinate:

"As to this man," he demanded, "why have you taken Count Frederick of Gretzhoffen?"

"Merely as ultimate suspicion," stammered the captain. "We found him in company with this young woman, in whose room the crime was committed. This other—" he pointed to Count Sachio, "also seems to have known this young woman."

"Who are you, then?" demanded the prefect of Count Sachio.

"I am Count Sachio of Grahoffen," replied the latter, none too happy at the situation in which he found himself. "I came to this hotel, as is often my custom when in this city. I inquired merely as a matter of courtesy as to the welfare of this young woman. Naturally, there is nothing of suspicion in that. I demand you release me at once. My own country will not tolerate an indignity to one of her subjects."

"Might I suggest to monsieur le prefect that we hasten," interrupted Count Frederick gently enough. "Mademoiselle is under a most trying situation, as you must understand. She has been ignorant of the customs of this country, perhaps somewhat free in her goings and comings; yet Gretzhoffen punishes not ignorance, but guilt."

The prefect had seen many women, not all of them innocent. He smiled grimly enough now as he noticed the beauty of the young girl, who stood pale and not wholly collected in all this turmoil. The girl now turned to him, and for the first time spoke.

"Monsieur le prefect," said she, "you cannot make guilt out of innocence. I can prove to you by this clerk and all these others that I was absent from the hotel for several days. When I came back it was but for a short time. I was absent when this crime was discovered. How can you connect me with it? Rather connect with it those who have had access to my room during my absence."

The official turned toward her thoughtfully, then to the captain of gendarmes. "Have you searched all these persons?" he inquired. The latter shook his head.

"So you do not know what evidence has been destroyed. Come, then, perform that duty now."

Without hesitation Kitty presented her handbag, drew out from it her little portemonnaie, even turned inside out the pocket of her frock. Count Frederick watched her closely as she did so. He saw that none of the officers discovered the piece of coin. He suspected, although he did not know, that Kitty had palmed it under her thumb as she spread out her hands, asking them to certify themselves. Certainly the officers had not found the coin! He smiled at her shrewdness.

The gendarmes, their captain, the prefect of police, turned away nonplused. The prefect hesitated as he faced the calm dignity of the nobleman.

"Your excellency," said he at length, "I dislike to ask of you the right of search. I comply only with formalities. If your excellency—"

"Certainly," said Count Frederick, and threw open his coat. But even as he did so the blood half left his face. He emptied his pockets on the desk of the hotel. The prefect of police separated the articles one by one, the gold coins, the dainty penknife, the keys, at last the jeweled picture in the frame! This latter he picked up, his gaze questioningly upon the face of Count Frederick. Suddenly he turned to the young American, his eyes kindling.

"What! Monsieur le comte has the portrait of this woman?"

"Yes," said Count Frederick, "it is a portrait, as you have said."

"And you are a friend of hers? This looks as though—that is to say, how did you get this, then? Was it given to you, monsieur le comte?"

The nobleman looked his interlocutor fair in the face. "I do not lie, monsieur le prefect," said he. "No, it was not given to me."

"Then how came you by it?"

"I will not answer that."

"But you must."

"Then listen," broke in Kitty suddenly. "Let me tell you that picture was in my room, not framed as it is now, but unmounted. It stood on my desk. Now he has it, as you see. If so, he must have taken it."

As he heard these words the face of Count Frederick set in rigid lines.

"You found this, then, in her room, where, perhaps, you went sometimes, and you took it?"

"I do not deny it now," said Count Frederick. "Yes, I took it."

"Why?"

"That is none of your business," rejoined the nobleman harshly.

The prefect of police turned to his men. "We have not yet found all of those parties who may be concerned with this crime. We have not yet held our questions on the scene of the crime itself."

They turned, all of them, now, and approached the stairway which led to the floor upon which were located Kitty's apartments. Their numbers quite filled the hall as they advanced, preceded and followed by gendarmes. But suddenly, as they approached the spot, the captain of gendarmes touched the arm of his superior and pointed ahead.

"That is the man who escaped," exclaimed he. "Roleau, here he is, and coming from the room itself! But who is that with him?"

CHAPTER XXXIX.

The Body of the Crime.

It had been easy for Roleau, as may be supposed, once he was free of the immediate presence of the officers, to spring into the nearest alleyway and quickly pass from sight. While the officer in charge of his more distinguished prisoners, was passing in the car toward the front entrance of the Hotel Ritz, Roleau himself was speeding thither almost as quickly through devious passageways which led to the rear of the hotel. He was at the back door almost as soon as the car itself was at the front; and the delay of all the questioning which went on at the office of the hotel gave him the more time for certain plans of his own.

Attaining entrance at the rear, he sped up the back stairs, by the same route which he and his mistress had used so recently, and found himself once more at the apartments of Kitty Gray.

What he saw caused even his stout nerves to quail for the time. On the floor before him, with face half turned and arms outflung, lay the victim of the last adventure connected with the mysterious Gretzhoffen coin.

Carefully, yet using that speed which he knew was imperative, Roleau bent over, making such search as he could of the silent evidence of the crime. It seemed to him almost certain that he had seen this man somewhere, but he could not be sure. He stooped, hesitated, and then swiftly sprang aside and sought concealment behind the hangings of the room. He was sure that he had heard someone move in the rear room of the apartments.

He had no more than concealed himself before he had full evidence of the justice of his suspicion. He heard a rustling behind the curtained door, heard the slight shuffling of a step, and saw emerge from the concealing curtains a face which he knew well enough; he could not mistake that cunning, ratlike chin, the shifting eyes, the almost silent footfall which carried him forward. Yes, Roleau knew Blake, knew him well enough.

Blake stooped over the body and knelt by its side, thrust a hand into the pockets of the coat, and at length drew out a folded paper, which he hurriedly crowded into his own pocket. Then he was about to arise, but at that instant he felt the tigerlike weight of the giant Roleau upon his own back. A hand caught his arm back of him, crowded it up toward the back of his neck, strained it into a position of excruciating pain. An arm came around his neck, choking him. He was helpless.

"Get up," said Roleau, at length, grimly. "I know you. So, you did this? Come along with me."

His right hand gripping the collar of his prisoner, and holding up the pinioned arm in such fashion as to leave its owner helpless, Roleau pushed his prisoner out ahead of him.

Now it was this strange apparition, of Roleau marching his prisoner before him, which gave pause to the procession of the law as it advanced toward the scene of the crime. The prefect of the city, his officers, Count Frederick, Count Sachio, Kitty Gray, all these others, paused now.

"What is that?" demanded the prefect imperatively. "Who are you, and what do you do with this man?"

"He is the guilty man, excellency," said Roleau stoutly. "I took him but just now in our apartments. He was bending over the dead man there when I saw him. I sprang upon him and took him, as you see."

"What you say may be true," said the prefect, as he cast a swift glance at the prisoner; "but we can jump at no conclusions. Retain him, retain them both. We will now see what the room itself holds."

The room, so far as any victim of a crime was concerned, was entirely empty. Everything was in order as before. There was no dead man there!

and there are signs that bondholders will join them—point out and are insisting that the company is able to go on as it now is, with receivership and bond debts and provide for fixed charges and current periods and still have sufficient working capital because of the large earnings of the last eight or nine months. At the rate of earnings for the first six months of 1915, in a full year the company will have over $40,000,000 available for bond interest (and further deductions) after normal depreciation charges, or more than now is shown in any six full years, for the company only had $38,000,000 available for bond interest in the period from 1909 to 1914, inclusive, the largest for any single year being nearly $34,000,000 in 1913.

The war undoubtedly was responsible for some increase in mining of gold and silver owing to the premium on metal used in the world's coinage. In 1914 the gold production of the United States was $84,621,000, an increase of $6,647,400 over 1913. Silver production in 1914 was 440,067,200, an increase of 42,126,400 over 1913. Thus with improved prices of gold on a large scale and with increased domestic production of the precious metals, the country is in the strongest condition of any nation on earth as regards the final medium of international credit gold.

Oil Industry Booms.

The oil industry continues to boom, with prices in Oklahoma now double what they were six months ago, 50 per cent higher than they were on August 1, while other grades of oil are to be raised 25 to 50 per cent higher than they were not long back. Refineries prices all over the United States are the more and have been advancing in keeping with crude oil and producers are in close touch with the industry are predicting a greater period of prosperity for oil production than has been seen in 1912 and 1913—which means also a greater period of return to shareholders and of booming security market prices.

While real progress is being made in applying many chemicals formerly imported from Germany from domestic raw materials, the dyestuffs trade is in poor condition owing to the slowness of progress in getting the protected new plants erected. Many large users of dyes are in distress because of lack of satisfactory materials from domestic sources and inability to get what is wanted from abroad. In some quarters it is stated that half of the textile industry of the country will be idle within the next six months unless dyes or oil are to be had as materials. It will be remembered, however, that such a prediction was made about this time in 1914, and that the time set for the closing of all of the mills of the country was about March 1, 1915, at which time it was predicted there would not be enough dye materials to run a mill.

The machinery manufacturing trade of the United States has probably benefited more by the war than any other one not making materials for Europe. The machine tool trade, however, has made war orders possible for manufacturers have turned out thousands of machines for making munitions, shells, small ammunition, torpedoes, etc. Foundry manufacturers have also received great benefit through war business in the same way.

Steel Prices Still Soar.

The steel industry continues to note advances in prices almost daily, and with the premiums now prevailing for many classes of steel, which are urgently needed by munitions manufacturers, prices are now on a practically the highest point of the decade, though actual quotations are not at the high-water mark of 1907. There is heavier buying of domestic buying, including in export business all buying for munitions, etc., that has to be sent out of the country. With building operations on an increasing scale also, with railroads apparently ready to enter the market on a large scale after several years of small buying, domestic business is increasing in steel.

The deadlock between buyers and sellers in copper metal is not broken, but from every side in the trade are predictions that a heavy buying movement is right at hand. Quotations are below 18 cents a pound, but it is predicted that the heavy buying which is expected will bring advances to above 20 cents again.

Quotations for wheat in Chicago at below $1.00 a bushel seem queer after a year of prices far above that, but September wheat went below the dollar mark at the country's leading grain market during the past week. Short selling was the main cause of the decline at the moment, but the real reason back of it lies in the presence of the huge crops of this country and Canada, which is expected even another winter of war in Europe cannot shut off at high prices. The success of the allies at the Dardanelles and the prospects of a release of Russian wheat within a few weeks was another factor against prices here.

The declaration by Great Britain that cotton is contraband of war failed to have any material affect on cotton prices in this country, because such a move had been discounted long ago. General dissatisfaction is expressed throughout the trade over the ruling, but there are hopes expressed that some offset to the damage done will be effected.

JOHN BULL TO SEEK UNCLE SAM, BANKER

Deputation of England's Most Able Bankers En Route to This Country to Ask $1,500,000,000 Loan.

New York, August 28.—Sir Edward Holden and Sir Felix Schuster, two of the best-known bankers in England, are now on their way to this country for a series of friendly talks with our leading men, in the hope of first discovering the best possible way of financing the $1,500,000,000 worth of war supplies which are being manufactured here today for the allies. To make a thorough canvass of the situation, while in this country, Holden and Schuster will confer with the heads of the Philadelphia, Boston, Pittsburg, Chicago and other interior cities. It will probably be two weeks or more before their conclusions are reached. In the meantime it is safe to predict that everybody in Wall street who is talking is talking of further gold imports, a $500,000,000 British loan, with the "Buy American" stocks the keystone of the whole discussion.

Schuster is governor of the Union of London and Smith Bank, Ltd., which is next to the largest private bank in London. He is now the chief member of the council of India, the royal commission on London traffic, the British trade commissioner for the amendment of company law, the India office commission on Indian railways, finance and administration, the treasury committee on Irish land purchase finance, chairman of the council of the London Chamber of Commerce, president and chairman of the committee of the Institute of Bankers, chairman of the Central Association of Bankers, chairman of the London Clearing Bankers, member of committee of the Association of London Chamber of Commerce, chairman of management of the hospitals for sick children, council and governor of University College, London, governor of London School of Economics, council of the British Red Cross Society and member of the "Foreign Trade and the Money Market;" "The Bank of England and the Stock Exchange" and "Our Gold Reserves."

He belongs to a number of clubs, including Brooks and the Garrick and has his chief recreation are travel, motoring and music.

Schuster Is Known This Country.

That Schuster has a thorough understanding of this country was evident in the analysis he made of the situation in the early part of 1907, when he said:

"Like every other crisis, it has arisen out of over-confidence. I am frequently asked to express his views, adding: 'And it was brought about by an act normally prosperous state of affairs. Americans had unbounded belief in the future of the country, as they should, and its natural resources fully justified. They also have a way of discounting the future somewhat too rapidly. Legitimate enterprise was followed by speculation, and speculation built upon credit.

"Vast undertakings were embarked upon on the speculation that cash in any quantity was always at hand and lenders were willing to provide it, when suddenly it was discovered that the strain had become too great.

"With idle money now piling up in this country at unprecedented rate, handling the wild stock market, inflation of the past few months, it can hardly be said that the situation is not nearly resembles that existing before the storm broke in 1907; nevertheless, to many the foregoing will seem much like a timely warning to those who are speculating in the war-order shares.

Sir Edward Holden is plain, democratic, and extremely averse to taking publicity seekers; even in this connection, golf; but as chairman of the London City and North Western railway, an enviable position in English financial circles.

Lord Aldwyn may be in the party to represent the British treasury and it was reported, too, that Baron Reading, chief justice, was also a member. Wall street believes that Holden will really exert more influence than any of his associates. It is known that Holden leans toward the theory of making the London joint banks form their pool next to the Bank of England and then sending that good credit here in a steady stream until our bankers, through fear of over-expansion, will cry stop.

While no one can definitely what will be the outcome of the approaching conference between our bankers and those from London, it is safe to predict that the troublesome foreign exchange situation will be relieved by the loan of a nation of additional gold shipments from London and South Africa and Australia, and a huge English loan based on bonds and stocks of American railroads and industrial companies as collateral. In discussing the situation this week one of the best-known bankers in Wall street, who is thoroughly familiar with conditions abroad, said:

British Credit Reluctantly Extended.

"As much as England dislikes making her first foreign loan, to win this war, she is bound to get financial assistance from this country. This is the only country in the world today of the first class having funds, and England's credit has better credit throughout the world than all of the other allies combined; therefore, it is up-to-her to come here for help.

"Many people have been criticising England severely for not raising a larger army. That is a mistake. To get trained men from civil pursuits and keep its men at work. In brief, it is up to England not to raise the army which is necessary to keep men fighting. Russia and France and Belgium have given all the men, but for lack of funds those countries cannot furnish their armies with the ammunition without which they are useless in fighting Germany's war machine."

As for the present situation, business men in general throughout the country seem to find a good foundation for optimism in this week's installment of railway earnings for July, the first to be given out for the opening month of the new fiscal year. Baltimore and Ohio's gain of $254,000 was $100,000 in gross and net were followed by increases of $230,000 and $1,210,000, respectively, for Southern Pacific. Even during the month of July, because of the low grain prices prevailing, which was practically no grain left in the country, but the new crops will begin next month, and then there will be a good westbound as well as eastbound business. Up to July 1 the crop was good July. This year's bountiful crops, coming on top of last year's highly successful harvests, will enable the farmers to spend their money more freely than has been the case since the panic of 1907. That is what will make the westbound business.

PROFESSIONAL VIEWS ON COTTON SITUATION

New York, August 28.—(Special.)—Europe is not receiving many forward offers of cotton, because of the uncertainty in the sale of foreign exchange. There is the position of the man looking into a window so they think they must pay that to get the cotton. We have been like the man looking out and thinking we may have to sell for less. With no more offering Liverpool came unexpectedly higher, causing our market to advance rapidly to the close. Many of the trade think the advance so rapid that a reaction will occur. Yet we are only at the prices ruling in June, while the crop has declined and business everywhere has improved during the past few months. Of course we are doing business under new conditions, which are the cause of peace, making foreign more difficult than ever, but such conditions which are selling crop prospects may mean high prices for cotton. Such conditions are so different from last year. Another point which dominates shows a decline of nearly seven points. Rains and showers are reported in the cotton belt.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New York, August 28.—(Special.)—Continued weather in the southern section to influence general buying today, which brought about an advance of twenty points in prices. The character of crop reports during the past two weeks has made the trade nervous as to the final outturn and consequently a covering movement set in which ultimately broadened into an active demand. While the marketing of early receipts may cause some decline in prices, the opinion is that buying will increase as the season goes on and that higher figures will rule once the first rush of the movement is over.

TENDENCIES VARY ON STOCK 'CHANGE

Half Day Session Marked by Light Trading—Contract Settlements Seem to Affect Many Issues.

New York, August 28.—Moderate activity, with the usual week-end irregularity of prices, were the principal features of today's stock market. The bulk of the trading was in war shares and independent, both groups displaying characteristic tendencies, probably as a result of contract settlements.

Tennessee copper was again the chief feature among the metals, declining almost at the outset to 55¾, 2¾ points from yesterday's close, and making only occasional recoveries, the tendency being consistently strong, but showed few material changes at the close.

There was again heavy trading in Pittsburg coal common and preferred, the former closing with a gain of 6¼ points to 105 on persistent reports that the deal with Harriman interests is nearly closed. Other stocks, including fertilizers and chemicals, rose and fell within a 1 to 2 point limit.

United States Steel repeated yesterday's 1,000 share transaction at 68, declined slightly at the close on further profit-taking. In the specialties there came a demand for such obscure stocks as Western Maryland and a few other mileage railways. On a single sale of 100 shares, Bethlehem Steel preferred advanced 140 points to 140. Weekly trade reviews were again of optimistic tenor, with a broadening of interest in the mercantile lines. Bank clearings at leading centers confirmed this improvement, as did the condition of the unfilled popular estimates, reserves increasing by $12,000,000 and placing the excess reserves at the high figure of almost $205,000,000.

Interest manifested in the further imports of British gold by way of Canada, although identified with the transaction declined to disclose the amount of the gold and exchange offering. A private crop report made the condition of the crop 71.5 against 71.4 last month.

Local warehouse stocks are losing materially as a result of exports, and the statistical position has been somewhat strengthened by the report of continued full spinners' takings. Detailed weather reports showed heavy rains in northern and central Texas. Port receipts today, 4,498; season, 10,722,885; exports today, 2,541; season, 6,644,227; stock, 656,654.

Bulls Hold Sway in New Orleans.

New Orleans, August 28.—Bulls continued to force advances for cotton on this today, finding their buying on bullish private condition reports and bullish cables particularly in the report that cotton was selling at a tenderable basis in the south were not accompanied by any indication of current prices, and the final spurt of prices seemed to be largely the result of short cov

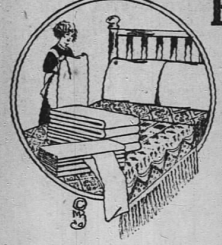
OUR NEW FALL SUITS ARE STUNNING. BE SURE TO SEE THEM.

M. RICH & BROS. CO.

Just Two Days More and Your Opportunity to Save Real Money on House Linens and Bedding Will Have Passed



When the bell rings Tuesday night our great August Sale of House Linens and Bedding will be past history. It will be good history, it's true, for this has been a wonderful sale. But Wednesday morning prices will be back to regular. And in many instances "regular" prices will show a considerable advance. Everything linen and woolen, you know, is going up in price in consequence of the war. Things we've marked away down for this sale will cost us more now than the Sale Price.

Have YOU gotten your bargains during this sale? Maybe you've been planning all along to come down and get what your linen closet is calling for, but you've simply put it off.

Put on your bonnet bright and early Monday morning and be here! Don't let anything keep you away. It's absolutely the last chance you'll have to buy linens and beddings at such prices. Monday and Tuesday, remember, are the LAST DAYS. Don't, under any circumstances, miss them.

Four Great Bargain Lots of Odd Table Cloths

At $5.90
Table Cloths
2 x2 yards 2 x2½ yards
2 x3 yards 2 x3½ yards

Table Cloths
2 x2 yards 2 x2½ yards
2 x3 yards 2 x3½ yards
2¼x2¼ yards 2½x2½ yards
Former prices $6.50 to $8.50.

Table Cloths
2 x 2 yards 2 x2½ yards
2 x 3 yards 2¼x2¼ yards
For 54 or 60-inch round tables.
Former prices $5 to $7.50.

Table Cloths

New Dress Goods and Silks

Wonderful in weave and color are the new fabrics in the Silk and Dress Goods Section. Heavy Broadcloths, dark and rich looking; Vigoureux Suiting and Mannish Tweeds, fine French Serge and the new material called "Fram" that is something like the old-time epingle—these in deep, rich colorings or fancy mixtures are being developed every day into the most beautiful gowns and exclusive suits.

We are showing an unusually attractive line of these materials now in all the most wanted colors and at the very reasonable prices of

$1, $1.50, $1.59, $2

Among the newest Silks are the self-colored plaid Taffetas. These are really taffetas with satin plaid designs woven in the same color. They're very pretty and make up into the smartest frocks imaginable. 36 inches wide, Russian green, crow blue and blackberry—

$2 the Yard

Plaids are much in evidence this season. Our line of Tartans is colorful and attractive. All combinations, light or dark, sombre or gay, are to be found here—

$1, $1.50, $1.75, $2 the Yard

A new fabric that we are showing is Satin Radiana. This is a soft, lustrous material, 44 inches wide; navy, Belgian, African brown, Russian green, black and white—

$1.50 the Yard

The fabrics for evening wear are lovelier this season than they've ever been. Gauzy, cobwebby Chiffons and Georgette Crepes, plain or embroidered, in dainty pastel shades; tinseled thistledown taffetas; tulle and net flouncing embroidered in iridescent sequins and metallic threads, with bandings, both wide and narrow, to match.

NEW CORDUROYS

Corduroys continue to hold their great popularity, and will be much used this fall. We have just received some new ones, wide and narrow wale, navy, white, cardinal and battleship gray—

$1 the Yard

Miss Willie Maud Scarborough, of Wellston, Ga., and Edna Wellborn Floyd, of Birmingham, Ala., the little granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Wellborn, of Wellston, Ga.

SAVANNAH SOCIAL NEWS

Savannah, Ga., August 28.—(Special Correspondence.)—No event of the summer has been surrounded with as much interest here as the marriage of Miss Helene Dale Dixon to Lieutenant Stephen Harrison Mactregor Wednesday afternoon at 6:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James M. Dixon.

Mr. Mactregor is in the coast artillery corps, U. S. A., and the Fort Screven band played the wedding music. Both the bridegroom and his best man, Lieutenant Ashley Copthorne, U. S. A., wore the full dress summer uniforms of white, and the military touch given to the wedding added to its romance. Miss Dixon was attended by her young sister, Miss Jessie Dixon, who is to make her debut next winter, and two little cousins, Miss Frances Dent West and Newell T. West, jr., carried ribbons to form an aisle. Lieutenant Mactregor has recently been detached from Fort Screven and ordered to the Philippines and he and his bride were to have left for San Francisco immediately and sailed September 6, but the day before the wedding, which had been hurried on account of these orders, he received a telegram from the army department instructing him to remain at Fort Screven indefinitely. September and part of October. He and his bride left for North Carolina Wednesday night and will sail from San Francisco November 15.

For Miss Edna Bellamy Rogers, whose marriage to Dr. Ridston Lattimore is to take place Wednesday evening in St. John's church, several parties have been given this week. Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Strobhar gave a silver party Monday evening, at which the guests were Miss Rogers and Miss Kathryn Budd, of Monticello, Fla., who will be her maid of honor; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hays Lattimore, Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan Bond, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Bond, Mrs. J. G. Grady, Miss Helen Strobhar, Mr. and Mrs. Noble Jones, Mr. Rowland Jones, of Indianapolis; Mr. William Lattimore.

Mrs. Bond entertained for Miss Epping Friday morning Tuesday evening after the church rehearsal Mrs. T. J. Epping, the bride's mother, will entertain the bridal party at a buffet supper. Mrs. H. H. Lattimore will also entertain for Miss Epping before the wedding.

Mrs. George R. Benton entertained with a series of three luncheons at Hotel Savannah this week in honor of her guest, Miss Mary Brahm, of Indianapolis. Mrs. Jo Tompkins Augusta, who has recently come to Savannah to reside, was also a special guest at the last luncheon Thursday.

Miss Fannie Belle Ostrom, accompanied by a friend, Miss Louise Stoddard, arrived in Savannah Monday from New York and went out to Vernon View to visit her aunt, Mr. E. W. Bell, for a week. She will return to New York Tuesday, and Miss Stoddard will go on to North Carolina to visit there for some time. Miss Elizabeth Perkins and Miss Gilbreath, of Atlanta, guests of Mrs. Gilreath in Cartersville.

Mrs. Edward S. Stoddard and Miss Margaret Stoddard left this week to spend a month in Waynesville, Mrs. H. Stoddard and Miss Maude Stoddard, who have been north all summer, returned home Wednesday. Mrs. A. D. Simkins will leave tonight for Asheville. Her daughter, Mrs. S. F. Mackintosh, is in Savannah for August and will join her mother later.

Mrs. W. T. Weldrin, who accompanied General Meldrim to the convention of the American Bar association in Salt Lake City, will return with him next week.

CARROLLTON, GA.

Professor H. B. Adams and family and Miss Maggie Rogers have returned from a delightful vacation spent in Nashville, Tenn., and other points.

Mr. and Mrs. Hendley Kell gave a beautiful dance Monday evening, entertaining sixty-five guests.

A pretty compliment to Misses Jeanie Manson, Evelyn Woodward, Blanche Kell, Blanche and Mary Nisbet, Margaret and Helen Kennard was the tennis-tea given in their honor Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. Auvergne D'Antignac at her home.

A lovely event of Tuesday was the dinner party which Miss Nina Jenkins gave in honor of her guests, Miss Louise Ward, of Boston, and Miss Flora Denham, of Americus.

Saturday afternoon, from 4 to 6 o'clock, Mrs. Hendley Kell gave a large bridge and domino party in compliment to her guests.

Dr. and Mrs. A. C. Layne entertained at a lovely luncheon Tuesday in honor of their guest, Mr. Eugene McColum, of Jackson, Tenn.

A delightful occasion of Monday evening was the tea party at which Mrs. Newton J. Baxter entertained complimentary to her guests, Mrs. Anthony Robertson and Miss Irene Robertson.

The twenty-five members of the Dramatic club met with Mrs. L. C. Warren on Friday evening and assigned the parts in an interesting play which they will present in October.

A pretty party of Tuesday evening was that at which Miss Mary Hass entertained in honor of her guest, Miss Ione Bass, of Milledgeville.

Mr. and Mrs. Lou Castro entertained at a beautiful dinner Sunday evening at the Hotel Griffin.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Edwards gave a dinner-party Sunday in compliment to their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burford, Misses Martha, Florence and Katherine Burford, of Atlanta, and Miss Mary Edwards, of Elbert on.

Mrs. James Edwards entertained delightfully Monday afternoon at four tables of dominoes in honor of Miss Mary Edwards, Mrs. Robert D. Adair and Miss Irene Adair, of Greenville, guests of Mrs. John Chunn. Several were invited for the luncheon.

MARIETTA, GA.

Miss Georgia Hunt has returned from New York, where she took a summer course at Columbia college.

Mrs. George Peschau, of Wilmington, N. C., is visiting parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Willingham.

Mrs. R. V. Sanford spent the past week-end in Cleveland, the guest of Mrs. Joseph M. Brown.

Miss Marion Gregg is visiting Mrs. Mandigo, in Roswell, Ga.

Mrs. Fannie Lou Welch has returned from a visit to Norcross and other places.

Mrs. Cutliffe, of Alabama, is visiting Miss Mabel Cortelyon.

Mrs. Virginia Hughes, of Atlanta, spent last week with Mrs. Paul Leake, on Church street.

Miss Augusta Cohen has returned from a visit to Barnesville.

Mrs. Campbell Wallace entertained at luncheon Wednesday in honor of Mrs. J. P. Hough, who leaves soon to make her home in Missouri. Invited to meet her were Mrs. Sylvester, Mrs. Faw, Mrs. Holmes and Mrs. Beyerle.

EATONTON, GA.

Thursday afternoon Mrs. Sarah Scott Hudson entertained the Five Hundred club at her apartment in the Colonades in honor of Miss Maggie Belle Thaxton, who has been her guest for several days. There were several tables, and a most interesting series of games was played. The Head prize was won by Miss Agnes Lee Hudson, and the consolation by Mrs. Percy Ezell. Miss Thaxton was presented a guest prize.

Friday afternoon Mrs. Percy Ezell entertained the Bohemians with a most enjoyable rook party.

Quite a large number of Eatonton girls will leave in a few weeks for colleges. The largest number will attend the State Normal college at Milledgeville. Among them will be Misses Martha Gardner, Rebecca Hearn, Leila Palmer, Gertrude Phillips, Edith Lancaster, Helen Little and Dorothy Collins. Misses Helen and Elizabeth Dendy will attend college in Atlanta.

The Young Ladies' Missionary society of the Presbyterian church met with Mrs. Tweedy on Monday afternoon.

The Underworld

Remarkable Revelations of Its Secrets By One Who Has Left It

Here Is the Weird "Inside" Story of the Sudden Rise of "John Burglar," an Officer Who Found It Easy to Pull the Wool Over the Eyes of Famous Reformers and Today Is a Power in a Great City

The Cohorts of Crime Laugh When an Astute Politician or Officeholder Is Impressed by a Policeman Whose Shrewdness Is Held in Deep Contempt Among the Scheming Crooks

By J. A. PETERS.

IN A previous article I stated that the underworld is composed of groups. The most dangerous group to society is that composed of those who, in the argot of the underworld, are known as "sure thing guys." This group operates with remote chance of detection or punishment, and consists of gamblers, politicians and crooked lawyers, bondsmen and police.

I propose here to show something of the conscious or unconscious connection with the underworld of that mysterious individual, "the man higher up," by relating a true story in which T. Roosevelt figures more or less prominently.

The story starts with the time—years ago—when Roosevelt was commissioner of police of New York City, when his now well-known ability as a practical politician was first asserting itself. Teddy had given emphatic orders to the rank and file of the police department to stop at nothing in making arrests for violations of the Sunday closing law for saloons throughout New York City. As a consequence the plain clothes men were making wholesale arrests, and many of these sleuths were reaping a veritable harvest of money as the price for faking testimony in police courts in such a way that few excise convictions were obtained. Naturally these men were "strong for" Teddy.

Goes After Politician.

There was an Irish saloon-keeper, whom we will call Adolph, who owned and operated a bonanza saloon in a district infested with gamblers, crooks and prostitutes. Adolph was also a power in Tammany Hall and had never been molested in any way by the police. His saloon regularly complied with the strict letter of the closing law every day of the year, although on the corner opposite an unsavory hotel with a barroom attached, owned by "Crooked Bill," had, as the saying goes, "thrown the key away."

Early one Sunday morning while one of Adolph's bartenders and a porter were giving the place—otherwise deserted—the weekly thorough cleaning a well-dressed, apparently sober man, evidently in great distress, clamored for some one to come to the front door.

Mike, the bartender, being a sympathetic mick, opened the door and said: "We are closed up; nothin' doin.'"

"Say, for God's sake, listen," was the agonized appeal; "my mother is fainting around the corner. Give me a drop of brandy for her quick, will you?"

With instant sympathy, Mike ran and poured out a stiff drink of the best brandy in the house and handed it to the anxious son, who quickly pressed a quarter of a dollar into the bartender's unwilling hand.

"I don't want nothin' fer it," protested the compassionate Mike. But the next moment he was astounded to hear, "Put on your coat and hat, boob, you are under arrest," from the pseudo son of a sick mother. "I've got the goods on you all right. Come on over and see the 'skipper'" (captain).

For the sake of euphony and facile writing we will call this detective John Burglar. A few days later John B. received orders to report to the commissioner at headquarters. Obeying, he went into the presence with weak knees, he told me afterward, but came away the size of a Zeppelin, from the shoulders up. Teddy had beamed approval on him for what the papers had called his "fearless arrest in Adolph's notorious dive—single-handed."

T. R. predicted (to John B.'s blushing face) that great things were in store for a man like him. "We need policemen who do their duty without fear or favor. I will keep my eye on you, John."

A few days after this took place John Burglar and Crooked Bill were chatting at 3 a. m. in the latter's hotel office, across the street from Adolph's place, screened from the curious eyes of the steady stream of women passing roomward with their escorts.

Plans a Fake "Pinch."

John Burglar, the efficient cop, was saying: "Listen, Bill, this means a lot to me. You are known to have a cast iron drag and no cop ever tries to get your place. Let me make a 'pinch' here next Sunday. Let me take a bartender or waiter and I'll turn him out in front of Judge X. for lack of evidence. All I have to do is tell the judge I cannot swear that what I drank was beer. 'Benny the mouthpiece' (lawyer) can knock holes in my testimony. You know how easy that is. It will not cost you a cent. The papers will rip you wide open and advertise this joint and I am your friend for life."

As J. B. foretold, the newspapers ripped Crooked Bill wide open when the framed-up arrest took place, and the next day he hired two extra bartenders to take care of an increase in business. It was hot stuff. John B. was the peerless patrolman who hewed to the line of duty regardless of politics and personal danger, and as a detective he had old Nick Carter beaten "forty ways to the Jack."

Putting One Over on T. R.

JOHN BURGLAR, a typical "bull," or police officer of simple intelligence, makes an arrest because his victim is tempted to break the law to do a kind act.

Theodore Roosevelt, then police commissioner, hears only of the arrest, summons John, beams his approval and hints at early promotion. John goes forth, plays another ancient trick on the reformers and is soon pushed up to the rank of precinct captain.

Secures Place of Power.

Comparatively speaking, the underworld saw John B. metamorphose overnight from a "chump copper" to a precinct captain reputed to be a "wise guy." So wise that any gambler or crook who wanted to do business with him feared to approach him in an ordinary man to man way.

For instance, the gambler who wanted to keep his "shop" open in the precinct where John was captain would inclose a generous amount of currency in an envelope with his own (not John's) name on it and send a trusted messenger to shove it under the locked door of the captain's room in the station house.

PUT on Your Coat and Hat, Boob, You Are Under Arrest," Said the Pseudo Son of a Sick Mother. "I've Got the Goods on You All Right. Come Over and See the 'Skipper.'"

John was noted for his firm and outspoken policy in opposing dishonest plain clothes men (called ward men) in the nefarious practice of collecting money for police protection in the name of a police captain. The strange part of the transaction was that the gambler so paying for protection might not have the goods delivered. But unless he "went in" in the above described manner his shop was absolutely sure to be raided in a sensational, spectacular way by John in person.

John today is a rich man and a power in New York. He is an ardent rooter and tireless worker for the Big Stick on any platform over which it is emblazoned. John is no ingrate. I often wonder if T. R. has any idea of John Burglar's real character—probably not—because they are great friends.

It is not my purpose to insinuate anything detrimental to Mr. Roosevelt's character or to claim that he is connected with the underworld or would countenance any unlawful act. I merely wish to corroborate, out of my own knowledge and experience, the saying, "Politics makes strange bedfellows." And besides, a practical politician is not called upon to use his talents to inquire into the private character of a voter—it is hard enough to get the vote and no part of a candidate's duty to attack the morality of a voter unless the vote be cast for an opponent.

Every Corner His Office.

Some years ago, walking along C—— street over on the West Side of Chicago, I met a saloon-keeper-politician whose name is Henry. "Say, Peters," said the saloon-keeper, "shake hands with Tom Lightfinger. He is a stranger in town, but I know all about him and he's O. K. Let's go in here and have a drink. Tom has a proposition that may interest you, Peters, and if not you will know somebody for him to hook up with."

There is one advantage the professional crook enjoys over a legitimate business man—he does not have to have a fixed office. Every saloon is his business office, and although it is true he pays exorbitant rent over the bar for it his consultation-room is always at hand.

Lightfinger's proposition interested me because it was new to me, and I went into it with him as much out of curiosity as for the money in it. Tom was a "booster" (shoplifter) and had a cunning method by which he managed to escape detection in his operations. The following morning I met him and we went to a large department store.

"Now," said Tom, "you go up to the gents' clothing department. Ask the manager if he will kindly sell you a pasteboard suit box. With your manner and appearance he will probably give you one for nothing. Tell him you need the box to pack something in at home."

The manager very courteously had an empty suit box wrapped up for me, and when I rejoined Tom on the corner he chuckled, "That's the stuff. It is one of their own distinctive boxes and wrapping, so that when I go butting around the counters inside with that hugged to my side I'll look like I just bought a suit."

Going into a saloon back room, Tom took a sharp knife and made a half circle cut in the bottom of the empty box through wrapping and all, retied the string in such a way as to leave this circular flap free in the bottom while the string on the top and sides of the box looked regular.

"Now we are ready to go back there and work," said Lightfinger. "All you have to do, Peters, is walk ahead of me to the jewelry counter or any other where expensive goods are displayed and stall the salespeople while I fill this joint from the bottom. Use your own judgment, but don't watch me or connect with me in any way."

$150 in a Half Hour.

So we did. There was no expensive jewelry accessible that day, so I went to the counter where I noticed some very expensive looking ladies' pocketbooks and handbags, silken with gold fixings, favorably exposed. The saleslady was very obliging and I was asking her if it would pay me to have my wife's purse repaired when I heard a few feet to my right a hollow sound as of something heavy falling into an empty pasteboard box. It sounded so loud to me that I wondered that the saleswoman failed to notice it, and then another and another, until I heard with some measure of relief Tom's voice asking: "Where are the safety razors sold, miss?"

"Aisle 17, to your left."

In less than half an hour we visited three counters and came away undetected with goods valued on the price tags at about $150. The joint carefully emptied and deposited in safe keeping for another day's work, we proceeded to a second department store, where I again secured a joint with that firm's distinctive box and wrapping. Here we went through the same performance, and in short order another store was called upon and likewise robbed.

Starting to work at 11 a. m. we finished with four big stores at about 3 p. m. with a profit to each of us of a bit more than a hundred dollars after selling the stolen property to a fence.

Betrayed By Booze.

Lightfinger was expert in filling the joints, and I have seldom met a more cool operator in any line of graft. But he could not stand prosperity, and when he met me the next day at the hour appointed to go to work he was full of booze and of assurances that he worked better when he was "soused" than when sober.

He may have been right about this, but I did not believe it and refused to go out with him. At 8 o'clock that evening Henry, the saloon-keeper, got me on the telephone and asked: "What did you do with my friend Lightfinger?"

"Nothing. Why?"

"He is pinched and wants to have me get him out of hock," said Henry.

"Too bad," I replied. "He's a good worker. Send him in a bottle of booze."

Secret of Success in Short Story Writing

THOSE who aspire to literary glory will find more illumination than encouragement in remarks on the subject of story writing made by Barry Pain. Mr. Pain, who has been called the "English De Maupassant," has been visiting this country, and talked of his work to a New York interviewer.

"From childhood you have been taught to concentrate," he said. "You cannot succeed in any trade unless you do so. In story writing, on the other hand, you need very pronounced mind wandering. A born story writer will take some little thing, a phrase that he hears on the street, a face that he sees in a newspaper—he will allow it to call up various ideas closely connected with it, he will let these ideas create others as his mind goes wandering on, and the result, while not always a story, sometimes is one. More often it is the beginning of a story.

Like the Japanese, the author of "Stories in Grey" works backward, creating the scenes and actions of his stories from the bottom up. He puts his characters together and lets them take care of themselves. The result is the plot; the result of the plot is the story.

"If you begin with the plot, particularly if it is elaborate," he explained, "your characters will very quickly do something for the sake of the plot alone. They will make some false step that nothing would compel them to make in real life. On the other hand, if they create their own plot they cannot fail to be consistent, and the plot itself rings true.

"In my own experience I have had many curious cases of plot formation from the action of my characters," he continued. "On one occasion I had agreed to write a story for the first number of a magazine and to send the title to the editor in time for the table of contents. I promptly forgot the matter and peacefully went my way. Long after, when walking on the street, I passed two men who were talking loudly, and I happened to overhear the words, 'the kindness of the Celestial.'

"At first I thought I had heard wrong. The phrase had no meaning for me, until I suddenly remembered that the Chinese are sometimes spoken of as celestials. That trifling fact associated itself in my mind with the memory of a boy who went to school with me. He was given a Chinese nickname on account of his appearance.

"Thinking of the boy recalled a schoolmaster who hated me almost as much as I hated him. I thought, too, that, considering the manner in which I had treated him, it was not surprising that he hated me. I then made up my mind to write a story about a boy who desired to treat with the utmost kindness a master whom he had regarded as an enemy. Naturally the boy would be whimsical to carry out such an idea. Still more naturally, all his attempts at kindness toward the master would result in comic disaster to himself.

"Half an hour later I met my editor.

"'You never sent me the title that you promised,' he said menacingly.

"'What!' I exclaimed as innocently as I could. 'I thought it had been mailed to you weeks ago. It is "The Kindness of the Celestial."' The editor was mystified, but pleased; the story itself was born."

Writers of stories are not made, in Mr. Pain's opinion, but the incident of being born a story teller does not mean that you can spin romance without some knowledge of your craft.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF DRY GOODS MARKET

New York, August 28.—The tone of cotton goods markets showed improvement following an easing of prices, but there were interesting complications and there was some slight recovery in prices asked for white and print cloths and brown sheetings.

Trade is off as to hand-to-mouth character on staples, most jobbers being content to order in goods as they need them for immediate realshipment. Fine and fancy cottons seeing only a small trade, are being ordered at the mills for spring delivery. New prices named on percales for spring show greatly irregularity owing to difficulty in scarcity, solid and dark colors being from $1.35 to 3-4 yard higher than last year on white grounds.

Many cantonade cloths are being offered to replace those dyed with coal tar products. Additional curtailment in print cloth line is reported among colored goods mills. Export trade on cotton duck holds well and there is a small gain reported in the domestic demand. Some very large foreign orders are under advisement for the heavy cotton underwear, which will take care of the fall production of many large plants.

Light spring underwear has been advanced 5c a dozen, and heavy underwear is wanted for fall lines. Prices quoted are as follows: Print cloths, 28-inch, 64x64s, 5½c; 64x60s, 4½c; 56-inch, 64x64s, 7c; 9-4 brown sheetings, southern standards, 8c; denims, 9-ounce, 14c; tickings, 9-ounce, 11½c; standard prints, 6¼c; staple ginghams, 6¼c; dress ginghams, 9½c.

Daring Escapades of the "Jesse James of the East"

On the floor of a cell, with a small window through which any but he could see twenty miles of the beautiful Champlain Valley, a stalwart man sat hunched up on a mattress, rocking to and fro in a manner almost as aboriginal as the blanket he wore. Over his sightless eyes was a bandage. It is always there, as if to shut out the light that never comes. He paused and raised his head as we entered.

"Perry, here's a friend of yours," said Dr. C. H. North, medical superintendent.

"Why, how are you [calling the correct name]? But I want to tell you, now, that you don't tell the truth."

The scene was the State Hospital for the Insane at Dannemora, N. Y. The man with the bandage over his eyes was Oliver Curtiss Perry, perhaps the most daring bandit ever known in the State of New York. The visitor had not seen him for eight years. In all that time there had been no communication with him, and yet, from the voice, the notorious highwayman remembered him and, after just four words had been spoken, called him by name.

That is only one of several things which made the visit to the blind insane bandit remarkable. His wonderful memory is but one of several things which put him in a class by himself. He is blind as a bat. He destroyed his own sight. He is classed as an incurable paranoiac, yet he has a mind which is a perpetual puzzle to the physicians who have been studying him for years.

In another cell with a pleasant outlook and touches which gave it a homelike appearance sat an elderly man poring over a book which had been worn thin from constant fingering. As his visitors entered he arose most decorously, extended his hand, and, after apologizing for his lack of comforts for guests, asked about some of the actors who were prominent thirty and forty years ago.

"I suppose Billy Mould's place and Theis' are all gone by this time," he said, sadly.

"Yes, they are," was the reply.

"Well, do any of the old crowd still hang around the St. Denis, the Morton House and the Ashland?"

As he spoke the aged man carefully wrapped his much thumbed book in paper after paper and tenderly placed it in its accustomed place in a corner.

The prisoner was James M. Dougherty, central figure in one of the most sensational murders in the New York of a generation ago; the man who followed Mary Anderson around the world and jumped into the front pages of all the newspapers of the country by leaping out of a box in the Fourteenth Street Theatre and rescuing the famous actress from the clutches of a stage villain. Dougherty is the humorist of the prison. He is as harmless as a house cat—while he is imprisoned. He is, like Perry, one of the puzzles of the medical profession, one of the most interesting—from a scientific viewpoint—paranoiacs in the world, or at least in prison.

There are many hundred insane prisoners in Dannemora. There are murderers of every degree. There are men who are harmless as children and others who await only an averted glance to commit another murder. From all the prisons of the State the insane are transferred to Dannemora, and there they remain, with very rare exceptions, till they die.

Of them all Perry and Dougherty are by far the most interesting. To the casual visitor they give no evidence of mental unbalance. In fact, it is only the expert in mental diseases who can recognize their symptoms of unsteadiness. Both are paranoiacs. Both have been studied by the insanity experts of many countries. Both have their photographs in standard books on paranoia. Both are pointed to as exaggerated yet perfect types of the paranoiac.

It is perfectly safe to say that nearly every one who remembers the exploits of the two men believe them to be dead. They belong—especially Dougherty—to another generation. Their escapades are traced in the memories of people of a past generation. However, they are not only alive, but they are well. And one of the most astonishing things about them is the condition of their health. Each is as sound as a dollar. Perry at forty-seven is a veritable giant in strength and stature, with the promise of a life which may take him into the century class. Dougherty at sixty-five is as sturdy as an oak, and the physicians see no reason why he shall not live to round out a century also. Perry is what might be called a "crank" on fresh air and exercise. Dougherty just lives. Perry worries. Dougherty doesn't. In many ways the two men present an interesting and mystifying antithesis. In every way they furnish a constant source of information for the physicians. Neither expects ever to be released. Neither apparently wants to be released, although both talk frequently about it.

The author of this article was permitted recently to see both men and to talk with them. He had seen Perry before—in 1907—and at that time partly agreed to tell about alleged food riots which Perry described. He did not do so, and to that fact may be ascribed Perry's opening remark:—

Perry now weighs about 200 pounds and is powerful enough, the keepers say, to tear an ordinary man limb from limb if he were so disposed. Blind as a bat and self-contained, he talks but seldom with the other prisoners and spends practically all his time in his own cell, protected from the air only by a suit of underwear and his Indian blanket, which he wears like a toga. He has not worn clothes for twenty years. He says the prison tailor cannot fit him, and he always was aesthetic. For six years he did not eat. He said the food was unfit for human consumption. Yet he permitted the physicians to feed him through a tube, and on the diet he grew to be the perfect physical specimen he still is. He is a brilliant talker. He writes with fluency and dashes off—in his mind—rhymes which come very close to being poetry.

"I have written an acrostic," he said when the writer talked with him, "which spells 'Honorable Governor Whitman,' and I would let you have it to print only you lied to me when you said you would write about the food riots and didn't. Anyhow, I will recite it because I think it is pretty good, but I shall speak it so fast that you can't take it down."

He spoke it too fast, indeed, for transcription, but not so fast as to conceal some of its splendid phrases. He has no notes of it. Like everything else, he carries it in his mind. He has written scores of verses and he never forgets them. He talks of philosophy, of psychology, of mental derangements, in a way which causes the physicians to marvel. He argues with a skill and comprehension which are amazing. Yet he is in Dannemora because he is insane, and there he will remain, because the physicians say he is one of the most remarkably developed paranoiacs they have ever seen.

His mania is and always has been that he is being persecuted. So determined is he in his beliefs and set in his opinion that nothing can change him. The physicians say that rather than give way he would stand any conceivable bodily torture.

Many will recall the exploits of Perry. He was the Tracy of the East. He colored his acts with sensationalism which must have aroused envy along the frontiers of the West and set examples for many a mining camp. He was born in Amsterdam, N. Y. At fourteen he was a burglar. At eighteen he was a brilliant youth, but dangerous. A little later he was in prison in Stillwater, Minn., and there, it is assumed, he got inspiration from the records of the James boys. In 1891 he committed an express robbery on the New York Central Railroad, near Syracuse. He sawed a panel from a door, picked the lock and stole about five thousand dollars.

Perry Robbed an Express Car Running at High Speed.

Encouraged by his success in the first job, he committed a second one in February, 1892. It was this one which startled the State and subsequently made Perry the hero of a dozen or more dime novels. Going aboard an express train at Syracuse, he climbed on the roof, and while the train was dashing along at sixty miles an hour he slung a rope over the roof, fastening it to the eave on one side, and let himself down on the other. With a revolver he smashed the glass in the door and while still going at a mile a minute reached through the glass and commanded the two messengers to hold up their hands and unlock the door. This they did.

Perry looted the safe while the messengers, one of them having been shot and severely injured, lay in a corner. He then detached the express car and those back of it and after the cars came to a stop backed away, covering with a six shooter the other trainmen who had been alarmed. A pursuit which required columns to tell about then followed. Perry got on a locomotive and backed and filled while officers in another locomotive passed him. Shots were exchanged as the huge engines passed each other. Perry was finally caught and sent to Auburn Prison for forty-nine years.

He escaped twice. In Matteawan he rigged up a device to let needle pointed weights drop into his eyes. The sight was almost destroyed. A short time later he finished the job of ruining his sight by rubbing ground glass into them. That was eighteen years ago. Since that time it is said he has not been able to distinguish even the most glaring sunlight. He is stone blind. He told the writer once that he put out his eyes because he thought then perhaps he might be liberated, inasmuch as he would certainly be harmless.

"I had another object," he said. "I thought my sister might come to see me. No one ever did come to the prison. She didn't come after all, and so I am blind without accomplishing anything. But I guess it doesn't matter."

Two years ago, after his remarkable abstinence from solid food, Perry started to eat. He gets all he wishes. During the several years when he refused to eat the physicians observed him closely and to their surprise found that his physical condition remained perfect. He gave no reason for refusing to eat except that the food didn't suit him.

Perry is easily the hero of the institution. His record is known to all of the inmates who are able to comprehend anything. To them he is Jesse James and all the rest of the bad men squeezed into one. They admire him in a manner understood only by those familiar with the premium criminals place upon daring and daredevil escapades. And then he is the hero of their story books. As youths they read of his train robberies and other escapades in the Nick Carters which formed the classics of their school days.

The physicians have tried all manner of discipline, mixed with kindness, tolerance, suavity and coaxing, to get Perry to live as other men do and help lighten the long hours of his incarceration, but he is unbending. He says he will never wear clothes, and he probably will not. He exercises for two hours a day in his cell. During the period, whether it be winter or summer, he keeps his window wide open and thus fills his lungs with the finest of pure air. To this, in large measure, he owes his splendid physical condition.

Perry and Dougherty never meet. They know each other. They say they understand each other. But where Perry is surly and solemn Dougherty is literally the sunshine of his end of the grim gray prison. He was born in Hornellsville, N. Y., and when still young went West and made a modest fortune as a miner. Then he returned East and went to work in the Weather Bureau in Washington. He was an expert electrician, a chemist and a student of many things. So far as any one knew, in his younger days he was perfectly sane. He was a regular Beau Brummel, and in the early eighties was a familiar figure in the restaurants around Fourteenth street and University place, New York city, which then corresponded to the present Broadway and Forty-second street.

He first burst into public notice about 1887, when it was observed that he was to be seen wherever Mary Anderson, who was then in the heyday of her fame, was appearing. It came to be a matter of general talk. Wherever she went, whether it was in Europe, Australia or on the Pacific coast, "Jim" Dougherty was to be seen also. He was always quiet and deferential, and for months made no advances. Ultimately, however, he intruded himself upon her and it was necessary for her to complain to the police. Dougherty modestly said he was in love with the actress and that he intended her no harm.

The climax came in the Fourteenth Street Theatre on November 15, 1888. Just as the actress was about to be attacked by the villain in the play Dougherty, clad in evening clothes, jumped from a stage box and, with a revolver in either hand, commanded the villain to desist. Inspector Byrnes arrested Dougherty and he was sent to the Flatbush asylum. While there he developed the mania that there was a plot on the part of the physicians to ridicule him and he frequently said that some day he would kill them all. There were seventeen physicians and internes on his list. One day he escaped. The police could get no trace of him. His homicidal mania was understood and the physicians were in terror.

One evening a tall, handsome man, wearing a black cape coat, silk hat, cane and gloves, appeared unexpectedly in the office of the Flatbush asylum. At a desk sat Dr. Lloyd, a well known alienist, and a clerk. They looked up and shrank with horror as they recognized Dougherty. He had appeared magically and there was calmness in his manner and murder in his eye. Dr. Lloyd palavered.

"I came to see Dr. Osgood and the rest of them as well as yourself," said the maniac.

Dr. Lloyd said he would go for Dr. Osgood, but Dougherty enjoined him to remain where he was.

"But you may go," he said to the clerk.

As the clerk went out Dougherty deliberately removed his coat and hat, slipped off his gloves and rested his cane against a table. Dr. Lloyd dared not move, although it was assumed he knew full well that his visitor intended to harm him. Presently Dougherty took a revolver from each coat pocket. One he laid down, the other he cocked. Dr. Lloyd tried to argue with him, but Dougherty took quick aim and sent three bullets into the physician's head, killing him where he sat. Then, as calmly putting on his coat, hat and gloves, he left the office and went over to a corner and got on a car bound for Brooklyn Bridge. An employe who followed him pointed him out to a policeman at the bridge and Dougherty was locked up in the Oak street station.

The city was shocked. It was considered fortunate, however, that there had been only one victim of Dougherty's wild mania. He was convicted of murder in the first degree and was committed to Sing Sing Prison for life. This was in 1892. From there, a few years later, he was transferred as a hopeless paranoiac to Matteawan, from which he tried to escape, and a few years ago was sent to Dannemora, where he expects to make his home for the rest of his life.

A murderer at heart when at liberty, he was transformed as a convict into the meekest, most affable and most shrinking person imaginable. For a few years he occasionally spoke of the other physicians whom he had intended to kill; he talked of getting out to avenge himself on the men who had driven him, as he said, to murder. But gradually he settled into a satisfied state and during the last twenty years or so has developed a sort of humorous philosophy which gives the physicians, attendants and other patients a great deal of amusement. Like Perry, he gives not the slightest evidence of insanity. He has no "grouch." He does not blame any one for his failure in life. He might easily roam at large anywhere without betraying his real mental condition. He can think not only coherently but logically and profoundly. He can focus his mind on the most abstruse problems and solve them with a skill and an accuracy which are nothing short of marvellous. It is only on the one subject—that of his first and only love affair—that he loses himself, and were it not so impossible there would be little in his delusion to indicate to the average mind that he is insane. He is to-day just as much in love as ever, although he never knew the woman on whom he centred his insane affections, has never heard from her and has been behind bars now for almost thirty years. After he gets well enough acquainted with one he will go to the corner of his cell—it is really a bedroom—take out the package which he so carefully wrapped in four covers of paper and display the worn, thumbed volume. He has had it for ten years and reads it frequently.

"It is her memoirs," he says, and it is. "You see, I have written on the sides. That is my interpretation of her thoughts. The book was written for me, but, of course, no one knows it. Some day I shall have it printed with my interpolations. No, I have never heard from any one since I've been in here. I'm an old man now. They say I'm a paranoiac, whatever that may be. I have my own notions about that. The truth is, half the people in here are sane. They have some little peculiarity which is interpreted by the scientists as insanity, but it isn't, except in a few cases. Still, the law believes the scientists and we have to accept the law. I don't object. They feed me well enough, and perhaps some day they'll let me go out and look New York city over. It's a long time now since I've seen it, and I understand it has changed a great deal. Fourteenth street was the centre of things in my day."

"Would you behave yourself if you were set free?" was asked.

Dougherty smiled.

"It really doesn't make any difference whether I would or not. I wouldn't get out, anyhow. But I wouldn't hurt any one now. I used to think there was a conspiracy on the part of the physicians to ridicule me and to keep me in the institution, but I know now there was no such thing. I've no hard feeling for any one."

The man's eyes wandered for a moment and a changed expression came into them.

"Anyhow, I suppose they're all dead by this time," he said, with a touch of grim regret.

The opinion of the physicians is that if Perry were free he would become an exhorter or evangelist, and that if Dougherty were liberated he would cunningly set about finding such of the seventeen physicians and internes as are still alive and attend to them one at a time, until he was sent back to an institution.

PAINTING OF BLACKFOOT INDIANS FOR MUSEUM

MR. EDWIN WILLARD DEMING, an adopted member of the Blackfoot tribe of Indians, is finishing the first of his series of eight mural paintings of the plains Indians of the United States which will decorate the Room of the Plains at the American Museum of Natural History, Central Park West and Seventy-seventh street, New York.

This first picture presents the artist's own tribe, the Blackfoot, as they looked before the white man's coming at their ancient camping place at St. Mary's Lakes, now in Glacier Park, Mont., at the foot of Singleshot Mountain. This is the same scene in which they were painted in 1833 by Bodmer, who was a member of the Prince de Wied's expedition and who made the illustrations for the explorer's books.

In the foreground of the picture is a procession on horseback of Blackfoot Indians on their way to visit the neighboring tribe of Grovents. The next picture which Mr. Deming will paint, and which will adjoin this on the walls, will show the head of this procession reaching the camping place of the Grovents and being welcomed by them. Every detail of the costuming and accoutrements will be historically correct, as the artist has spent a lifetime studying the American Indians.

Other pictures to follow will show the Sioux, among whom Mr. Deming spent many years; the Crows, the Cheyennes, the Pawnees, the Arapahoes and the Mandans, in each instance depicting the tribe in its historic camping place.

Mr. and Mrs. Deming and their seven children who are legally members of the Blackfoot tribe, spent last summer at their reservation making the final studies for the first picture of the series. The tribe held a council and voted to let Mr. Deming record all their heretofore guarded rites and also their sign language. They went through all their ancient ceremonies, which the artist recorded by means of his moving picture camera.

Besides its historic value, the painting is in Mr. Deming's best style and is a thing of beauty. The light is very brilliant, but is relieved by the manner in which the artist has caught its vibrations. In the background, in picturesque grandeur, are the mountains, with the yellow and red strata of rock, while their sides are brilliant with the autumn colors of the quaking aspen, green, lemon and orange, interspersed with the deeper olive green of the lodge pole pines.

ROBS CASH REGISTER AND THEN ESCAPES, DESPITE HOT CHASE

The L. W. Rogers grocery store at 18 Forsyth street was robbed of about $50 at 7:15 o'clock Saturday night when an unknown negro went to the cash register in the front of the store and before anyone could stop him, snatched a roll of bills and dashed down the Forsyth street viaduct steps.

According to T. P. Thomason, manager of the store, he and the clerks had noticed the negro hanging around the front door all Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Thomason states that he was out to supper and on returning saw a crowd of people chasing the negro down the street.

SECRETARY YANCEY IS BACK FROM VACATION

Captain Goodloe Yancey, secretary of the state prison commission, who has been on his vacation, returned Saturday to his office. Captain Yancey spent his vacation at Dillard, Ga., as he said "eating fried chicken and drinking buttermilk."

UGH! CALOMEL IS HORRIBLE! IT SHOCKS YOUR LIVER, IF BILIOUS

Ugh! Calomel makes you sick. It's horrible! Take a dose of the dangerous drug tonight and tomorrow you may lose a day's work.

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel, when it comes into contact with sour bile crashes into it, breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish and "all knocked out," if your liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a 50-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous, I want you to go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it is real liver medicine; entirely vegetable, therefore it cannot salivate or make you sick.

I guarantee that one spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone will put your sluggish liver to work and clean your bowels of that sour bile and constipated waste which is clogging your system and making you feel miserable. I guarantee that a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone will keep your entire family feeling fine for months. Give it to your children. It is harmless; doesn't gripe and they like its pleasant taste.

Former G. M. A. Cadet Talks To Forty Million People Each Week in the Movies

Ten years ago there came to the Georgia Military academy, at College Park, from Sparks, Ga., a timid country lad by the name of James Elliott. His daily creed was:

"Work is Life, and Good.
"Work is Good Life!"

On the strength of that philosophy this timid lad developed unusual powers of observation, displaying a keen intellect and a quickness to interpret every phase of instruction and campus activity while a cadet at Georgia Military academy, the result of which was that his fellow-students honored him with the position of critic on the editorial staff of "The Gamilacad," the school annual. Probably the sweetest contribution he ever made to the literary world was a noble tribute to his widowed mother, which appeared in an issue of "The Gamilacad."

JAMES ELLIOTT, of Sparks, Ga.

Achieves Success at 25.

Since leaving school this Georgia lad has attained remarkable success, and, although only 25 years old, he is also known as "Elliott Withers," writer of "Man Messages," and other works, including "The Mother Tribute," and a booklet called "Salesmanship—An Artistic Science."

Over 150 big manufacturing concerns throughout the nation weekly distribute to 100,000 salesmen his philosophical "quibs," contained in the weekly issue of "Man Messages."

His greatest success, though, has just been attained. A few days ago Mr. Elliott, who now lives in Rochester, N. Y., signed a contract with the Universal Motion Picture company, of that city, which will bring his face and his work before forty million people every week. He has contracted to furnish the picture company with short, crisp and snappy "talks" based on the theory of practicality and dealing with every phase of life. The material will be filmed under the title of "Thought Talks," and will be illustrated by appropriate motion pictures to make up a connected story.

Film Talks for Fifty-two Weeks.

Each talk of the youthful author will be divided into sections of a few lines each, which will be thrown onto the screen successively and acted out by the Universal players as the action of the lines proceeds. Elliott's contract covers a period of fifty-two weeks, with the privilege of renewal. His first "talk" will be released on October 1 and one new subject each week thereafter will be shown in 10,000 picture houses throughout the United States and many others in Canada and abroad.

The Universal company intends to make Mr. Elliott's talks one of the big features in a campaign of inspirational moral uplift, which it is launching through the medium of motion pictures.

Elliott, since leaving G. M. A., has traveled in every state of the union. Soon after entering a business career he became assistant sales manager of the G. W. Todd Protectograph company, of Rochester, N. Y., one of his special duties being, also, the editorship of their paper known as "The Master Salesman." For the past year, though, Mr. Elliott has given his time almost exclusively to the editing of "Man Messages" and other popular works, and henceforth will give his time to the motion picture weeklies.

J. B. FALLAIZE LEAVES ON TRIP TO NEW YORK

J. B. Fallaize, president of the Linen Store, left the city Saturday for a trip to New York, where he will pick up some of the latest goods in the linen line, and will also arrange to fill in his stock, thus guaranteeing to his patrons the usual up-to-date and complete line for the well-known Broad street house.

"This is going to be a great linen season," said Mr. Fallaize. "The general public is convinced that linens are scarce, and will be more so. Prices have advanced, and still are advancing, and on account of scarcity will still go higher. The household linen part of our business has been fine the last two months, and we look forward to the future for still further good business.

"We are covered on our fall lines, but I am going to market to look into things, see what deliveries are going to be made and then look into next spring's merchandise. Most of our lines must be bought in advance to get what we want."

In speaking of his location at the corner of Broad and Alabama streets, Mr. Fallaize said that "I think this corner is the real center of Atlanta. We have more cars passing our doors than any Whitehall street concern, and we feel that in the future Broad street will be a crowded thoroughfare."

HOME-COMING SERVICES AT RADCLIFFE CHURCH

Home-coming services will be held at the Radcliffe Memorial church today and Monday. Dr. P. O'Connell, of the Gammon Theological seminary, will preach at 11 o'clock Sunday morning. Rev. R. O. Flinn, pastor of the North Avenue Presbyterian church, and Dr. Marion Moll Hull, will be the speakers at a platform meeting at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon. In the evening at 8 o'clock there will be preaching by the pastor, Rev. Milton Thompson. There will be special music at all these meetings. A final reception Monday evening will complete the reunion services. A splendid program has been arranged by the children.

SUFFRAGE SCHOOL WILL OPEN ON SEPTEMBER 1

The fall session of the suffrage school will be opened on September 1 at the Hotel Analey by the Atlanta Equal Suffrage association.

Attorney Blair Foster will give the lecture of the afternoon. His subject will be "Contracts."

POLICE PERSONALS

BY TILLOU JOBBER

It is one of Atlanta's youngest police officers who guards nightly $4,000,000 of gold and silver deposits in the vaults of the Atlanta Federal Reserve bank, in the Hurt building.

His name is Jack Malcomb, and, despite his years, when Joseph A. McCord, head of the Atlanta Reserve bank, called upon the officials of the Atlanta police force to supply him with a brave and courageous officer, Jack Malcomb was selected because he had

Jack is one of the best known officers on the force.

Hundreds of wayward girls have been aided by Matron Bohnefield. She has taken up a "hat collection" for many girls with which she has purchased them railroad transportation to Cincinnati, Ohio, where the matron gets them a temporary home in the Home of the Good Shepherd, where they are given a chance to reform and learn how to make an honorable living. Often the first dollar to such "hat collections" is given by Mrs. Bohnefield.

Sergeant G. C. Bullard, who has for the past few months been station sergeant at police headquarters, has again been placed on patrol. His place there has been filled by Sergeant J. A. Holcombe, who has been doing clerical work in the chief's office.

Call Officer Walter McWilliams has been made a plain clothes officer on the morning watch. Officer McWilliams, better known as "Mack" to his friends, was formerly of the "burglar catching team," Austin and McWilliams. Howard Austin, his partner, is still on call.

Assistant Chief E. L. Jett was absent from headquarters Wednesday. Chief Jett did not say exactly where he was going but it was soon found out when he returned Thursday. The assistant chief was talking of fried chicken and "good sleeping," which led the men at headquarters to think of his country home about six miles from Atlanta.

Officers Bishop, Palmer, King, Knight, Sergeant Bullard and friends went on a fishing trip to Bull Sluice, near Roswell, Wednesday. The trip was made in automobiles. Fifteen fish were brought back by the members of the party, but none in the party were boasting of their skill. It was rumored at headquarters Thursday night that the fish were not caught by Atlanta guardians of the law.

With one patrol wagon and one call officer "jitney" in the repair shop, headquarters has been handicapped in handling prisoners during the past several days.

It is needless to say, though, that everyone who wanted to ride to the municipal hotel could do so.

Children Frightened By Mysterious Man In Ponce de Leon Park

W. W. Dudley, of 339 Ponce de Leon avenue, notified Chief of Police Mayo Saturday morning that he wanted police officers to watch out for a mysterious man who is frightening his children when they are playing in Ponce de Leon park.

He reports that an unkempt and much bewhiskered individual has been loafing around there several days and that his appearance is so terrifying to the children of the neighborhood that they will not play there.

The man, so far as can be learned, has harmed no one in that locality.

MR. AND MRS. TURMAN ON TRIP TO ROME

Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Turman went to Rome Saturday afternoon to attend a reception given Judge Branham by Judge Maddox, this being the anniversary of Judge Branham's birthday. It is considered remarkable by his friends that he still continues in the active practice of law, having for a long number of years represented one of the railroads in that county.

Judge Branham is a cousin of S. B. Turman. Mr. and Mrs. Turman will spend a short while in Cartersville, returning to Atlanta Monday.

REV. SAM SMALL WILL SPEAK HERE SEPT. 5

Rev. Sam Small, of Washington, D. C., will come to Atlanta this week on the invitation of the local prohibition leaders and will speak Sunday, September 5, in three different places.

At Atlantic City, N. J., last month Rev. Small spoke to an audience of nine thousand people who were in attendance upon the national convention of the prohibition forces. Out of more than one hundred addresses, his speech was pronounced the strongest and most effective.

Mr. Small has hundreds of friends in Atlanta who will be glad to have the opportunity of hearing him.

DR. PURSER TO RESUME SERVICES AT WEST END

Dr. John E. Purser, pastor of the West End Baptist church, has returned from his vacation and will fill his pulpit both this morning and tonight. The general public is cordially invited to attend both services.

I Will Pay You 10½ Cents A Pound for Your Cotton

I BELIEVE that cotton will be worth 10 cents a pound in 30 days. Am so confident of this that I will allow all of our customers 10½ cents a pound in trade for all cotton (middling) that they ship us

The freight must be prepaid to Atlanta, or some other point in Georgia that we may name.

Write me before shipping the cotton.

What Ails Atlanta?

Pee-wee politicians—
Renfroe, for instance—
Pee-wees are small matters—
And Renfroe is a small matter—
The real things are the Jim-Jims.
And what the Jim-Jims stand for
It's no use to say what that is—
The public knows.

Atlanta's Past Was Glorious

Such men as
John L. Hopkins—
Henry W. Grady—
Samuel M. Inman—
E. P. Chamberlin—
The Rawsons—
Stood for clean things.
The city grew—
Her name was honored.

They are trying to found universities;
They want a clean city.
But the majority of the Police Board
Do not represent the citizenry of Atlanta—
Did not assassinate Beavers to make a clean city—
Did not honor the name of Atlanta.

Atlanta Has Reached a Crisis

It is the parting of the ways—
There is too much lawlessness—
Too much toleration of vice—
Too many who wish to make money out of it.
The Greeks ostracised Aristides—
Because he was just—
The Ephesians drove away Paul—
He interfered with business.
And the Police Commissioners lynched Beavers—
To help business.

WHAT BUSINESS?

WHOSE BUSINESS?

There Is a "System" in Atlanta

These men rely on it—
There is too much "invisible government"—
Too much financial intimidation—
Too much economic coercion—
Too much "public be damned."
But the public are not intimidated—
Brazell was not afraid—
Hendon was not afraid—
Thousands of others are not afraid.
Thousands have signed for the recall.

Sign

Smash the system—
Redeem Atlanta—
Set her in the old paths—
Those paths are peace—
And honor—
And prosperity.

Councilman J. N. Renfroe advertises a "solemn promise" to publish the names of signers of the Recall petitions.

"Let the people rule. Public officeholders should be public servants—not bosses.
"H. C. BLAKE."

"They can publish my name as often as they want to. You can publish my name if you see fit. I try never to be ashamed to allow the world to know how I stand. "C. A. STEAD."

"Do not care if my name is published.
"JAMES W. AUSTIN."

ATLANTA'S STRIDES FROM DAY TO DAY

Another manufacturing plant will begin operations in Atlanta on Monday morning when the new plant of the Georgia Ribbon and Carbon company, located at 10 Auburn avenue, recently established in this city for the manufacture of a full variety of inked fabrics and carbons, will start active operations with a force of twenty employes.

The products of the new manufactory will consist of ribbons for typewriters, adding machines, cash registers, time-recording clocks, railway stamps, multigraphs, etc.

The daily output of the local factory will be 100 dozen of the finished product, which will be increased as needed. The plant is electrically equipped, and the climate of Atlanta was influenced to locate here through the efforts of Harvey Johnson, secretary of the Industrial Bureau of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

George B. Moore, realty and renting agent, leased the quarters to the local plant, which is under the supervision of R. A. Grant, as manager, and J. T. Herbert, as assistant superintendent of production, both of whom are experienced men and feel greatly encouraged over the general outlook for a good business in their line.

Kiser Agency in Big Exchange.

The M. C. Kiser Real Estate company has just consummated an exchange of city and country properties, involving properties listed at $45,000.

Through this agency the northwest corner of East Georgia avenue and Crew street, fronting 150 feet on the avenue and 106½ feet to the street, and consisting of two apartments leased and a cottage, has been sold for N. E. Murphy to John M. Webb, the consideration being $22,500.

In part payment Mr. Webb gave 595 acres of land all in Richmond county, valued at $12,000.

North Boulevard Sale.

C. W. Hunter, of the W. E. Worley agency, has sold for W. J. Waller to S. W. Benson a lot 50x800 on North Boulevard, just beyond the city limits, for a cash consideration of $1,700.

$14,000 in Permits Needed.

But $14,000 in building permits is needed for Monday and Tuesday, the two remaining days of August, for the month's building aggregate to equal that of August, which was $972,938.

That August has held its own in the question of building is accepted generally as a sign that the fall months will follow suit.

Warehouse Permit.

In Saturday's permits was one for a one-story brick warehouse, to be built on the Mayson and Turner road, at the intersection of the Louisville & Nashville belt line, by J. W. Ware, costing $4,500. The ground dimensions are 70x150.

J. B. Hinton took a permit to build a small residence at 197 Parsons street. Permits for the day were light, being only $6,200.

Mell & O'Keefe Dissolve.

Brooks Mell, of the real estate firm of Brooks Mell & O. (O. P.) O'Keefe, whose offices are in the Hurt building, announces that their rent business has been sold to M. L. Mower, and that the firm of Mell & O'Keefe has been dissolved.

However, both Mr. Mell and Mr. O'Keefe will continue to do individual business in mortgage loans and realty sales at their present offices, which will remain in the Hurt building.

Convention Program.

The official program of the annual convention of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers, which will convene here for a four-day session September 14, has been completed and details are announced elsewhere in The Constitution today.

REAL ESTATE—FOR SALE REAL ESTATE—FOR SALE

The Time to Buy Real Estate?

THIS QUESTION is asked me repeatedly by my friends. Now I want to tell you something right from the shoulder, and I mean every word and every sentence of it:

The time to buy Atlanta real estate is when you are convinced by an agent, in whose judgment and integrity you have absolute confidence, that you are getting property worth your money with a good prospect of enhancement in value.

There are true and tried men in our line of business who can be trusted with every dollar you want to invest, and they will manage your investments with such skill and good judgment as to bring you the highest profitable results. Remember, I say integrity, skill and good judgment.

I have lived in Atlanta 48 2-3 years and my estimate of values of Atlanta real estate is used in settling estates, by attorneys for securing debts, by litigants in the courthouse and for various other purposes.

If YOU have any money to invest, and are willing to trust my skill and judgment, I say right now is the time to invest through me a few hundred or a few thousand dollars in Rosedale Park, with an absolute certainty of making 50 to 100 per cent on your money.

Why Do I Promise Such Results?

Because I am selling the property far below its value to pay debts. It must be sold and you will reap the benefits if action is taken right away by you. As soon as I sell a certain amount the balance will be withdrawn from the market.

Splendid lots at $550, $600, $650, $750, $800, $1,000 $1,200. Worth right now 50 per cent more money. It's a fact beyond any conjecture or doubt.

Every man, woman and child ought to buy some of this property. It's simply the best investment offered today in Atlanta. My skill, integrity and judgment are behind this statement.

ROSEDALE PARK is that beautiful property opposite Grant Park on the east side. I will build for you a beautiful bungalow with payment of $100 cash and balance easy.

Terms on all lots to suit you.

MAN FATALLY HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Cliff Collier Suffers Fractured Skull When Auto Skids and Crashes Into Telephone Post.

Cliff Collier, age 35, a dairyman doing business on Tenth street, is at the Grady hospital, and believed to be fatally injured, as a result of being thrown from an auto this morning at 1:30 o'clock at the intersection of North avenue and Marietta street. His head struck a telephone pole, and hospital physicians state it was fractured. His residence is at 36 Gerard street.

The car was driven by Noland Konkle, of 28 Tumlin street. Konkle escaped without serious injury, and the other three occupants of the car were only slightly bruised. They were Sam Northcutt, Cliff Shirley, owner of the car, and Jesse Brooks, all of whom reside on Marietta street.

It was explained by Konkle that the street had just been sprinkled and that the car skidded and crashed into the telephone pole. Konkle was arrested on a charge of reckless driving.

GERMANY NAMES RULER FOR RUSSIAN POLAND

Berlin, August 28.—(Via London.)—The regions of Poland and Russia occupied by the Germans have been placed, like Belgium, under a governor. For this post General von Beseler, conqueror of Antwerp and Novogeorgiewsk, has been selected.

Austria and Germany some time ago perfected an agreement for division of the territory occupied west of the Vistula for administrative purposes. This presumably will be extended to the newly occupied districts of Russia and will constitute a provisional war-time arrangement for administration of the affairs of Poland until the fate of that country is definitely arranged at the conclusion of peace.

MARSHALL TAKES SHOT AT THE "HYPHENATED"

Edwardsville, Ill., August 28.—"I have read with great care the history of all the European countries for the last 100 years and I have read all state documents issued in connection with the present war, but I confess that I do not know why this war is being fought," declared Vice President Marshall, in an address here last night.

Speaking of immigrants, Mr. Marshall said:

"I believe in inviting the foreigners of all nations to come to the United States, but when they do come here they must assimilate. If a man cannot concentrate on the needs of the United States and take his mind off the country from which he came that man should go back immediately. The recruiting offices are always open in London, Paris and Berlin."

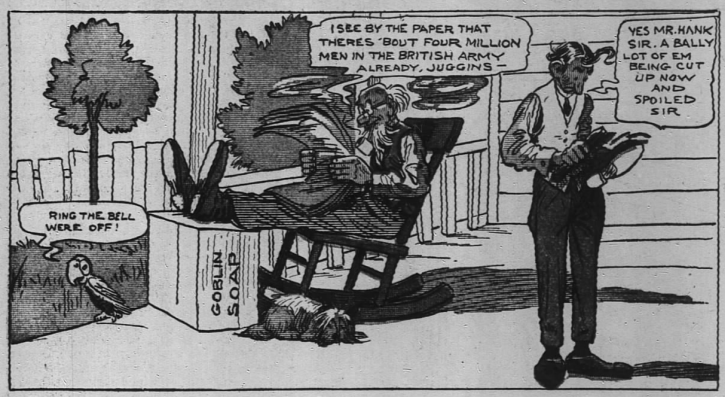
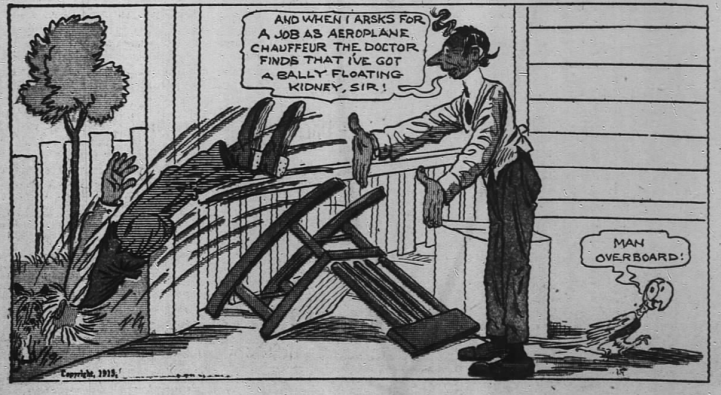
HANK: AND HIS ANIMAL FRIENDS By Walt McDougall





FLAGG'S GREATEST DRAWINGS

IN THE PATH OF WASHINGTON

By Henry P. Moore

With his operation well under way at Savannah, the great and good General James Oglethorpe, founder of the colony of Georgia, ascended the Savannah river and established an Indian trading post at the foot of the falls and called it Augusta, in honor of a royal princess.

After this, his first important duty was to cut a road through the impenetrable swamps and boundless forests that lined that winding stream, in order to have land communication between Augusta and the seacoast.

That road was destined to become the path of Washington when that immortal personage visited Georgia after the revolution, and made his progress from Savannah to Augusta. It now forms a link in the national highway, which is extensively used by New York-to-Florida tourists as well as by those from hither and yon.

The road which Oglethorpe built and Washington traveled lay through a wild region, covered with primeval forests, with lofty hills to climb and a succession of long inclines and deep ravines. And while the modern engineer has not succeeded in improving on the route, the modern mechanism of the automobile has wrought a marvelous change in cutting down the hills and filling up the valleys to smooth out the wrinkles in the bosom of mother earth and preparing the way for the new mode of locomotion.

Fancy the shade of Washington coming down the pike in a speeding auto!

Washington was the great constructive force that planned, formed and set going the American republic, a model for all the nations of the earth and for all ages. The advent of the motor car is the great impelling force that has resuscitated the art of road-building and stimulated the construction of highways throughout the world. Both Washington and the motor car are powerful agencies for the promotion of civilization.

Leafy June.

It was leafy June, the time of June brides, sweet girl graduates and picnics and barbecues, and the grand culmination and climax of all plant growth and vegetation. In this merry month the beauteous leaves of the forest attain their greatest size and luxuriance and the flowers are brightest and greatest. This is the month, too, when wheat and oats are harvested and when the little folks love to go hunting in the grain fields for partridge nests. What glee when they find the nest filled with pretty, white eggs and Bob White and his mate sitting on an old black stump nearby! And when the eggs are taken home in triumph and cooked—oh, so nice! June was named in honor of Juno, queen of the heavens and twin sister of Jupiter, the greatest of all the mythological deities. By gemini, gentle June, you are a hollyhock!

Roads Fine in Richmond.

The roads are fine in Richmond county and admirable in Burke also. Over their smooth surface we sped like an arrow, under southern skies of tenderest blue and with the air as soft as that of the Italian Riviera patting our cheeks. I made the trip once before with Hon. Julian Smith, but now for another!

Our machine carried four persons, Dandy and Julian Lyons, Charlie Stafford and your humble servant. Swiftly we passed Jake Phinizy's elegant country seat, surrounded by thousands of broad, well tended acres, and with palatial embellishments.

Next we whirled by the very tree, a giant oak, that the Father of His Country waited under for the deputation of Augusta gentlemen on horseback to escort him into the city. It stands on the left of the National highway just in front of the old Twiggs house.

If the Daughters of the American Revolution are in funds, they might put a small part of their substance to a good use in caring for and preserving this historic relic of the colonial period.

Many beautiful streams are crossed, Double Branches, Butler's creek, Mc-Bean and Briar creeks, the last of which the great Washington must have regarded with especial interest, as on its banks was fought one of the great battles for the possession of Georgia. The remains of the fortifications are still to be seen near Mill Haven.

A Lordly Mansion.

Midway between Green's Cut and McBean is situated Mr. Lyon's magnificent Burke county plantation of 1,700 acres, and here we digressed about half a mile from the "big road." The homestead is a perfect type of the old colonial style that has been such a favorite throughout the south.

It is situated on a lovely eminence, in a classic grove of patriarchal oaks. Fertile fields surround the house and slope away in vivid green as far as the eye can reach, and in this picturesque setting the house stands like a Greek temple, with wide portico and fluted columns, the personification of dignity, comfort and ease.

The lands on this place are as fine as Burke county affords. Burke, you know, for a long time was the banner county of the cotton belt. This was before her territory was reduced by cutting off Jefferson and Jenkins.

The crops on it are superb. Oats and wheat have been harvested with a fine yield and the land from which they were taken has been sown in peas, which are now a rich, dark color, "thick as succotash."

The cotton is about waist high, green and vigorous and lapping in the rows, while the corn stands erect thick on the ground like grenadiers with tassels waving and pennants flying.

The intensive plan is followed on this plantation and the cotton acreage cut one-half. The place is self-sustaining; cotton is raised as a surplus crop.

On to Waynesboro.

On we whirled to Waynesboro, our destination. On the outskirts of the town we whizzed past Hillhouse's Rosemont dairy farm, where a fine herd of Jerseys were browsing in a green pasture of Bermuda.

Waynesboro is an ancient town with a new start. It is like old wine in new bottles. Burke county in colonial times was called St. George parish. But when Georgia assumed the roll of statehood the county's name was changed in honor of Sir Edmund Burke and the county seat was called Waynesboro for Anthony Wayne, one of the conscript fathers.

In pursuing the path of Washington we found the old Munnerlyn home on Liberty street, the house where General Washington lodged for a night when making his progress from Savannah to Augusta. The house has been changed somewhat, but the general shape and size remains the same and it is still in a fine state of preservation.

Of course, we dropped in at Editor Sullivan's True Citizen museum of ancient and modern antiquities, where we found many things of interest rarely seen outside of Dickens' "Old Curiosity Shop."

Waynesboro, the gem city of the slims, is adorned with many elegant and tasteful homes, principal among which are the Joneses, the Skinners, the Neelys, the Gates, the McElmurrays, the Cozes, the Thomases, the Brinsons and the Chances.

A Town of Good Sports.

Waynesboro town is famous for hospitality, jolly sports, pretty girls and fine automobiles. They fairly live in their automobiles and they keep the path hot between there and Augusta.

Mayor F. M. Cates, R. C. Neely, Mrs. Inez W. Jones, E. E. Chance, John L. Boyd, N. P. Thomas, S. G. Storey, E. B. Gresham, B. H. McElmurray, George O. Warnock, Edwin Fulcher, C. W. Skinner, P. L. Corker, E. A. Smith, Dr. H. A. Macauley, Dr. L. P. Herrington, Dr. R. L. Miller, Dr. J. M. Byne, W. M. Fulcher, John A. Blount, T. J. Hunt, A. F. Evans, H. G. McElmurray, Sim Bell, L. H. Sullivan, Cecil Lewis, C. G. Hearsey, Sidney Bates, Walter Burton, L. E. Hatcher, P. B. Lewis, Arthur Mays, J. H. Tinley, Morris Tinley, George W. Mobley, William Davis, L. L. Mobley, C. H. Minus, Mrs. C. B. Whitehead, John O. Applewhite, R. A. Templeton, Gary Vinson, M. D. Marchman, P. B. Hall, F. B. Hall, John D. Sanders, R. C. Hunt, Hamp Hickson, Gray Hickson, F. S. Palmer, Thomas Quinney, Dr. H. J. Morton, James P. Palmer, John Rackley, E. H. Blount, C. L. Herrington, C. S. Herrington.

First Automobile Factory.

Realizing that the horseless vehicle was destined to become the great eliminater of distance as well as the great promoter of health, pleasure and luxury, the progressive citizens of Waynesboro were the first to build an automobile factory in the south.

Retracing the Path.

After the ball game, in which Millen mopped up, we left the animated scene in the receding distance, homeward bound. The machine hummed like a top.

"I climb the hills for a wondrous view,
I swing through valleys for vistas new,
I drowse and hum in the lazy shade
Where the picnic lunch is gaily laid."

No back jumping, balking, halt or hindrance.

Over lovely streams we go whose waters sparkle and foam like champagne as they flow between mossy and ferny banks. And many a cooling shade is passed, where the wood thresher's faint, sweet note is heard at evening. Here the magnolia, the bay and the jasmine abound and the breezes are freighted with the fragrance of their wild woodland flowers.

In the path of Washington lay Fort Cornwallis, the scene of a dreadful siege and struggle for the possession of Augusta. It was near the intersection of Washington and Reynolds streets. A beautiful church, St. Paul's Episcopal, now stands on the site of the old fort.

Light Horse Harry Lee, the father of the south's great chieftain, assisted Generals Pickens and Clarke in reducing that fort. It was Harry Lee at the burial of Washington who gave utterance to the memorable words: "First in war, first in peace, first in the hearts of his countrymen."

But here we are again under the glare and glimmer of electric lights on Broad street. It took us an hour to come 28 miles. Our automobile is a Buick Six, with valve in the head.

LORD HALDANE APPEALS TO BRITISH TEACHERS

He Says It Is Time to Begin Work of Reconstructing the Schools.

London—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Already it is time for the schools of Great Britain to begin the work of reconstruction, which must necessarily occupy the whole attention of the European world for a generation after the close of the war, writes Lord Haldane in an appeal to the school teachers of the country, published in the current issue of The Teachers' World. He writes:

"I appeal to teachers to consider deeply the problems of the present and the future, seeking to know how best they may help their country in the period of stress which will follow the declaration of peace.

"The proper training of the body is no less important than the equipment of mental power.

"I am impressed by the small extent to which people realize the importance of education as a factor in the nation's welfare. This attitude is not confined to any one class, and prevails among members of the house of lords in common with every other section of the community. The remedy is to remove education from the realms of the abstract, and to regard it as a complex of problems, difficult, it may be in themselves, but still capable of being solved.

"The war will impose severe restraints on expenditure, but even within the limits of necessary frugality we can do much to establish a system of national education which will have beneficial results on the citizens of the future. Based on sound principles such a system will be capable of expansion and development as increased funds become available. Teachers can prepare the way by training their pupils in a right regard for knowledge, and by helping to set before the public a well-ordered and soundly-based plan of education, simple in its outlines and arresting in its appeal. They may, in short, enlist forthwith in the army of the future the national force which must be mobilized in readiness for the day when victory shall have been won in the fields of warfare."

Mistaken.

MILITANT ANARCHISTS FIGHTING FOR FRANCE

They Have Ceased to Trouble Paris Police and Are Troubling the Germans.

Paris, August 22.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—The militant anarchists whose exploits furnished so much copy to the French newspapers before the war, but who dropped out of sight immediately after the general mobilization, have been found by the police to be doing their patriotic duty. With only a few exceptions those who were exempt from military service in France volunteered and have distinguished themselves.

Pilet, secretary of the saddlers' union, and a most aggressive anarchist, who took part in the fighting in the Ardennes in August, writes of German terrorism in the region and ter-minates: "This monstrous butchery will cost all of us nameless sacrifices and sorrows, but we shall hold out to the end."

The old haunts of anarchy in Paris are deserted. Only a few of the old guard are left and they are occupied with patriotic correspondence with their comrades at the front. They will show with pride a letter from a former fiery propagandist, Prof. M. F——, the most militant of all the anti-militarists, after Gustal Herve, who has won corporal's stripes and aspires to those of a lieutenant. He does not try, even to himself, to explain the mental process that has made him such an excellent soldier. "I try to earn pardon for my military honors," he says, "by remembering all the times possible to the sixty men under me; I have in them sixty comrades, sixty friends they call themselves my soldiers; I am sure none of them ever heard or read my doctrine before the war. I think it is mostly the hope that this will be the last of those horrible things called war as a synonym for a thousand hells; the hope that our dear ones, our children, shall not have to cut each others' throats again, gives one something like superhuman ardor."

Even the open advocates of the "reprise directe"—the forcible seizing of other people's property—the apologists of the assassination of innocent people—are doing their duty.

Maitrejean, the divorced husband of one of the heroines of the Bonnot band, the former director of the paper Anarchie, himself involved in their exploits but not convicted of murder, is recovering from a dangerous wound.

Alexander Lerebourg, the double of "Britannicus," the handit of Orleans, whose real identity is still a mystery, was serving a sentence for desertion when the war broke out.

"It's only in peace," he declared, "that I am anti-militarist; in war my place is at the front." His petition for release and incorporation in the army was granted and he fought valiantly with his regiment of the African battalion, after they had cut up the German Imperial guard in the battle of the Marne. He was taken prisoner in a minor detailed action.

Grocer—"My best butter is a quarter a pound, Miss!"

"But," said Betty, "this butter is bitter. If I put this bitter butter in my batter it will make my batter bitter."

So Betty "Better bought a better bit of butter and put the better bit of butter in her batter, and the better bit of butter made better batter than would the bitter bit of butter.

Atlanta Bridge Players Try "Informatory Bids"

To explain the meaning of the new bid, Mrs. Foster uses the following hand:

B holds in hearts, king, 10, 6, 2; in diamonds, ace, king, 10, 2; spades, ace, queen and 6; clubs, ace and Jack.

C holds in hearts, Jack, 8, 3; in diamonds, 7, 6, 3; spades, 8, 5, 4, 2; clubs, 8, 7, 6.

D holds in hearts, 9 and 7; in diamonds, 8, 5, 4; spades, Jack, 10, 9, 3; clubs, queen, 9, 5, 4, 3.

A bids one no trump. B doubles one no trump. C passes. D bids two clubs, which he could never have done without B's informatory double, and makes game.

Another Example.

A holds in spades, ace, queen, 10, 8, 5; in diamonds, king, Jack, 8; in hearts, 6 and 5; in clubs, 10, 9, 5.

C holds in spades, 7; in diamonds, 6, 5, 4, 2; in hearts, ace, Jack, 9, 4, 2; in clubs, 8, 4, 2.

D holds in spades, king, Jack, 9, 7, 2; in diamonds, 9 and 3; in hearts, 10, 8, 7, 3; clubs, king and 7.

A double of one "no trump" means: "I have a no trump hand, also, probably better than the declarer who has, however, had the chance to bid first. I can count at least five tricks in that declaration." The double of a suit says: "I am strong in the other three suits, and would have called 'no trump,' had my weakness not been declared by my adversary."

The Etiquette of the Game.

Mrs. Foster, in discussing the etiquette of the game, stressed the fact that the dummy should never be played by any but the one who is playing the hand; never aid to be rendered by partner to player or by either adversary. Another incident she cited where lack of etiquette caused the game to be lost by the offender was relative to the following hand:

A holds in hearts, ace, queen, 3; in spades, king, Jack and 4; in diamonds, queen and 3; in clubs, king, Jack, 9, 6 and 3; B holds in hearts, 9, 8, 7, 5, 4; spades, Jack, 9, 3; in diamonds, Jack, 10 and 7; in clubs 10 and 7.

C holds in hearts, Jack and 6; in spades, ace, 8, 6, 2; diamonds, ace, 8, 5, 4; clubs, Jack, 5, 4, 2; D holds in hearts, king, 10, 2; in spades, 10, 7, 5; in diamonds, king, 9, 8, 5; in clubs, ace and 8.

B leads fourth best heart. C puts up Jack; D plays king; A plays the ace; D gets in and leads a heart to partner; A puts up queen. D asks partner what she is leading from. There is no answer. When D gets in again she fails to lead to her partner, thereby losing two established hearts in partner's hand, which had she led, would have saved game. The "call down" in the question, "What are you leading from?" caused the trouble, and was not the etiquette of bridge.

BEER IS TO GERMANY LIKE BREAD AND MEAT

KAISER VERY GENEROUS WITH HIS IRON CROSSES

Berlin.—Confiscation of a part of the German beer production is a possible, though not probable, step to be expected because of the abnormal state of affairs existing in Germany today. Confiscation will be resorted to by the government only in case the breweries fail to set aside a certain percentage of their normal production—20 per cent—for the use of the army.

Even the contemplation of such a step indicates the importance which beer has in Germany, and puts it into exactly the same category with bread and meat.

In the semi-official announcement denying that any confiscation is contemplated immediately, it is definitely stated that this step will become necessary only if the breweries, contrary to expectation, fail to supply voluntarily that amount of the brew which is regarded as "indispensable."

"With the strongly patriotic feelings that inspire all branches of our people," continues the announcement, "it is assumed without question that the breweries will bear present condition in mind and will be willing to do their share toward the well-being of our troops."

The report adds that the soldiers have to buy the "beer which is indispensable to their strengthening and well-being" out of their own pockets, a circumstance which of necessity dictates to the army authorities in their establishment of prices paid or to be paid.

Berlin.—The number of iron crosses thus far granted to German soldiers is near the half million mark. Statistics up to March 31, according to The Cologne Gazette, showed a total of 318,261 crosses of the second class. Even if this rate has only been maintained since—and undoubtedly it has been exceeded, considering the increased number of men under arms—it would give a total exceeding 450,000. In the period mentioned 6,458 iron crosses of the first-class had also been granted. The holders of these must previously have won the second-class decoration. The crosses issued up to March 31 had cost about 2,800,000 marks.

In the campaign of 1870-71, 45,791 iron crosses of the second class were granted, and 1,304 of the first class. More than 12,000 of the recipients were officers.
